White House Conflict Seen In Congress Over Strikes

Roosevelt Favors 'Tailor-Made' Policy; Labor Curbs Asked On Capitol Hill

By George Rookman.
Post Staff Writer

A "tailor-made" labor policy, requiring no new laws and calling for different remedies for each problem as it arises, is favored by the White House and the National Defense Commission to keep strikes from interrupting national defense, The Post learned yesterday.

This official view, stemming from President Roosevelt and his labor advisers, is the opposite of "ready to wear" labor legislation that is being demanded in Congress.

Smith Offers Bill

Spotlighting the developing conflict over labor policy between the White House and Congress, Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of a special committee to investigate the National Labor Relations Board, yesterday introduced an "anti-sabotage bill," which would:

Make more severe the penalties for sabotage in national defense industries.

Make it unlawful to conduct a strike or lockout without giving 30 days prior notice to the opposite party and the Secretary of Labor.

Mobilize public opinion during a strike or lockout by requiring the President to proclaim that any party conducting a strike or lockout during mediation efforts "deliberately jeopardized the national defense by willfully disregarding the policy of Congress."

Outlaw, in effect, closed shop contracts in defense industries by making it unlawful to require a person seeking a job in such industries to either "join or not join a labor organization."

Meanwhile, 35-year-old Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota, said he was drafting a law to curb strikes that would be modeled on his home State's "cooling off" period law and would provide a 30-day waiting period prior to strikes and lockouts. A conciliator would try to adjust the differences during the 30-day period.

In contrast, the policy which is now favored by the Administration shies away from new legislation, relying instead on informal commit-

Penna. Aluminum Strike Is Ended

New Kensington, Pa., Nov. 29. (AP).—CIO workers at the Aluminum Company of America plant here voted tonight to end a week-long strike which stopped work on several big national defense orders and made 7,500 employes temporarily idle.

Under the agreement a $27-a-week worker blamed by the union for causing the walkout because he threatened a committeeman attempting to collect $12 in back dues, will be transferred to the Logans Ferry plant of the Company.

Blast Shatters Warehouse; 7 Known Dead

DuPont Powder Plant Destroyed in Another Washington Explosion

By the Associated Press

Yakima, Wash., Nov. 29.—A death-dealing explosion followed by fire ripped a large warehouse asunder at Toppenish, Wash., today, killed at least seven persons and left an untold number of others buried beneath the ruins of five shops in the plant.

The blast was believed caused by gas which had collected in the warehouse basement, or by dynamite which had been stored there.

Five dead were identified tentatively as Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Cline, operators of a merchandise store; Patrick R. Oldfield, Vernon S. Ramsdall, Catherine Jahnke, Charles Knapp and Bill Duncan.

About 12 persons were injured; 6 were taken to hospitals in serious condition.

The blast reduced the two-story, 250-foot long warehouse to rubbish. Destroyed in the warehouse were a

Eager children already anticipating the coming of St. Nick may be heartened today with a light snow. Anyhow, if it doesn't snow, the weatherman said, it's sure to rain, and the temperatures, which kept close to the freezing point yesterday are due to start rising today.

Week-end holiday planners are advised of fair and moderately cold weather for tomorrow.

Area Selectees Begin Training At Fort Meade

38 in Second Group Follow First Unit Of 27 to Nearby Post

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Nov. 28.—Bulwarking the pioneer contingent from the Capital, 38 new soldiers from Washington and nearby counties answered their first Army roll call here tonight.

The 38 young men from Washington, Maryland and Virginia detrained at Odenton and were rushed into waiting "receiving company" at this mushrooming military camp.

Meanwhile, the 27 men first called to the colors yesterday were fast being absorbed into the framework of the Nation's new citizen Army.

D. C. Recruits Landed

Commenting on the Washington hopefuls assigned to his unit, temporary Company D, Capt. William A. Robinson declared, "They are among the finest recruits I have ever seen."

The Capital's selectees began military routine shortly after they were in uniform this morning.

Twice for half-hour periods the new troopers went through preliminary marching maneuvers on the camp drill field. Zealously, the Washingtonians snapped to ramrod stiffness on the command "Attention", swung quickly, if sometimes raggedly, to left and right at the command "Column left" and "Column right".

Earlier the selectees had enthusiastically drawn their uniforms at a supply depot and had cast aside the civilian togs that, they said, had

Police Breaks Up Almazanist Riot; U. S. Attaches Cuffed About

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Nov. 28.—A crowd of some 200 Mexicans, shouting "Viva Almazan—down with Wallace!" tried to storm the outer doors of the United States Embassy tonight and then scattered before the tear-gas guns of motorcycle policemen just as Henry A. Wallace, Vice President-elect of the United States, arrived in the capital on an official visit.

The military and naval attaches of the Embassy, Col. Gordon McCoy and Commander Wallace Dillon, reported they were cuffed about by the milling crowd but required no treatment for injuries.

No attempt was made to molest Wallace, who is here for the inauguration next Sunday of Mexico's President-elect, Manuel Avila Camacho, administration candidate who defeated Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan last July 7.

However, it finally took the motorcycle escort which had brought Wallace here from Zimapan, to break up the demonstration.

At Zimapan, Wallace had told a large group of Mexican officials that "our being united in true understanding will contribute a powerful influence to fortify this hemisphere as a sure haven of peace and culture where democracy will always live."

Escapes Perilous Encounter

Wallace and his party escaped a serious encounter with the Almazanistas because the crowd had gathered at the embassy instead of at the residence, which is around the corner.

At the residency, Wallace was honored at a brief welcoming ceremony by girls in gay native costumes.

As he entered the building, Wallace cooly gave the impression that he was scarcely aware of the noisy commotion a little distance away, although it could be heard within the residency.

Seating himself in the living room, he began reading telegrams of welcome from friends and officials of the United States and Mexico.

Embassy officials said they had learned that during the day leaflets were distributed throughout Mexico City, calling on Almazan followers to gather for the demonstration at the embassy.

Stones Are Thrown

Gen. Almazan, in renouncing his claim on the Mexican Presidency Tuesday night, said he did so because the United States had recognized his opponent, Avila Camacho, and was sending Wallace to the inaugural. Almazan insisted that

English Port Suffers 'Terrific' Destruction, Berlin Avers

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Friday), Nov. 29.—Liverpool is "burning as the result of a large-scale attack by German bombers," informed German sources asserted early today.

"Hundreds" of bombers still were attacking the great northwestern British port shortly before 3 a. m. (Berlin Time), the sources said.

Pilots returning to base reported that fires were visible for miles in grain elevators, oil installations, drydocks, warehouses and aircraft factories along the River Mersey.

Oil tanks, bursting under the force of the explosions, poured their contents into the river, lighting up a scene of terrific destruction, the pilots said.

German sources said that as far as was now ascertainable, Britain's second largest port had received a truly destructive blow.

'House Property' Hit Hardest, British Say

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Nov. 29.—German bombers delivered one of the heaviest attacks yet last night on the northwestern port of Liverpool, authoritative sources acknowledged early today.

Flying in waves and assaulting the city for several hours, the raiders dropped both incendiary and high explosive bombs on the city and the surrounding Merseyside district.

The British Press Association said, however, that a heavy antiaircraft barrage kept many of the attackers away and that damage was chiefly

They had much to be thankful for considering reports of one official German news agency, that extensive damage had been done in the harbor district of the English town.

The harbor district here presented a far different scene as the day was marked by a brilliant pageant depicting the first Thanksgiving, the landing of the Pilgrims and the signing of the Mayflower compact.

Laborite Asks Why 'Hitler Sympathizer' Was Permitted to Leave to Do 'That Sort Of Work' in U. S.; to Free 'Lesser Fascists'

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 28.—The House of Commons today discussed the treatment of British Fascists held in internment camps. Herbert Morrison, home secretary, announced a decision to release some lesser officials of the British Union of Fascists.

He indicated, however, that the government was not considering the release of Fascist leaders like Sir Oswald Mosley.

Morrison, in discussing Fascist matters, was asked the circumstances surrounding the departure of Princess Stefanie Hohenlohe Waldenburg-Schillingsfurst from this country to the United States. He explained that "this Hungarian subject left the United Kingdom in December, 1939."

Laborite Member Mander asserted that she was a Hitler sympathizer and asked, "Why was she permitted to leave this country to do that sort of work over there?"

Mander got no reply.

Princess Hohenlohe

(Princess Hohenlohe last figured prominently in the news in November, 1939, when she lost a suit against the late Lord Rothermere, in which she claimed the British publisher had agreed to pay her about $20,000 a year for life for acting as his political representative and emissary to Adolf Hitler. Lord Rothermere died earlier this week in Bermuda.)

Argirocastro's Fate in Doubt; Fight Deepens

Fascist 'Regiment Of Death' Routed As Greeks Advance

By the Associated Press

Athens, Nov. 28.—Violent battles were reported developing on the western end of the 100-mile Balkan war front tonight, but despite stiffening Italian resistance the Greeks declared they had routed a Fascist "regiment of death"—sworn to die rather than retreat—after a four-day fight.

Prisoners captured by the Greeks, it was said, "disclosed the magnitude of the Italian disaster," and some sources believed that a considerable part of Mussolini's invasion forces was in full flight up the Albanian coast along the Adriatic Sea. That the Italians were counterattacking at some points was, however, conceded.

Official Intimation Lacking

There was still no official intimation regarding the fate of Argirocastro, Italys' last big war base in southern Albania, which the Greeks have said for several days that they were threatening.

Although government circles maintained reserve concerning the position of Argirocastro and other towns in the path of the Greek advance, dispatches from the front indicated that the Greek successes in the coastal sector were greater than at first was believed.

These dispatches said the picked "regiment of death" was broken up after 96 hours of tempestuous fighting during which Hellenic troops launched "stormy attacks at bayonet point—sometimes maneuvering through high mountains and en-

Mexico City, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Telephone advices from Tampico said tonight the German freighters Idarwald and Rhein were preparing for another dash to sea shortly.

The third ship, the Orinoco, showed no signs of joining the Idarwald and the Rhein and will apparently remain in port.

Italian Battleship And 4 Cruisers Damaged, Says The Admiralty

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 28.—A new Italian battleship, four cruisers and two destroyers have been damaged in the British navy's latest chase of Premier Mussolini's fast fleet, the admiralty announced tonight in an action-packed communique.

It gave a lion's share of the credit to the naval air force.

The Italians, sighted in force Wednesday afternoon west of the Italian island of Sardinia, immediately headed for home, the admiralty asserted, but in pursuit, British planes torpedoed a 35,000-ton battleship of the new Littorio class, a 10,000-ton cruiser of the Bolzano class and scored hits or damaging "near misses" on two other cruisers.

British naval guns set afire one cruiser and damaged two destroyers.

Except for the fired cruiser and destroyers, all the damage to the Italians was inflicted by the Skua and Swordfish planes of the fleet air arm.

The 10,000-ton British cruiser Berwick suffered two hits, which killed seven men but did not damage the ship enough to put it out of action a moment, the report stated.

Ark Royal Unscathed

Otherwise, except for loss of nine fighter planes, the British got off scot free and shot down two big Italian scouting bombers, it was asserted.

The British aircraft carrier Ark Royal was to heavily attacked that at one time she disappeared behind the splashes of 20 bombs, but she came up firing all her guns without a scar, the admiralty proudly related.

The British battle cruiser Renown, 32,000 tons, was the only other British vessel mentioned by name. Rated at 29 knots, she tried vainly to bring the one old and one new Italian battleship into action, the admiralty asserted, but the Italians were too speedy.

The Swordfish planes caught up with the newer one, however. The communique did not say whether their torpedoes sank her.

(This brings to four the number of Italian battleships which the British assert have been damaged by torpedo planes, and leaves Italy with only two serviceable battleships, by the British count. The others were reported hit in a raid on Italy's Taranto naval base Nov. 11.)

The British fleet chased the Italians to "within a few miles of the enemy's coast," where the pursuit was abandoned, the admiralty reported.

Italians' Version

(The Italian high command's story of the engagement Wednesday afternoon said that two British cruisers were damaged by shells and three other British warships, one a battleship, were bombed. The Italians listed their own casualties as "serious" damage to a destroyer and one poor hit on a cruiser.)

The British communique, reiterating a claim that the Italians shied, drew a picture of a double-edged naval engagement—ships against ships and planes of both forces swarming through the sky west of Sardinia.

The text of the British communique:

"It is now possible to give an account of the naval engagement and pursuit of Italian forces in the Mediterranean yesterday afternoon.

"Soon after 10 o'clock yesterday

J. L. Livermore, 'Boy Wonder' Of Wall Street, Kills Himself

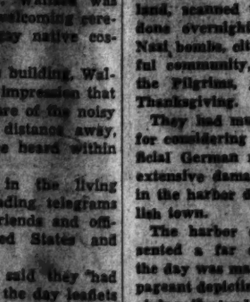
Death Ends Colorful Career of Man Who Won Millions Four Times Only to Lose Them; Famed Speculator Found Shot in N. Y. Hotel

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 28.—Jesse L. Livermore, one-time "boy wonder of Wall Street," who won and lost several fortunes during his spectacular career as a plunger on the stock market, shot and killed himself late today in the cloak room of the fashionable Sherry-Netherland Hotel in Fifth Avenue.

Police said the 63-year-old thrice-married speculator fired a .32 caliber bullet through his head behind the right ear immediately after entering the cloak room on the first floor of the hotel shortly after 6 p. m.

Livermore had come into the hotel for lunch, hotel attaches said, and had several cocktails while he wrote in a little black book. He left after luncheon only to return several hours later for another cocktail, they said.



Jesse Livermore

Friends said they believed the one-time millionaire was depressed over recent financial difficulties although up to several months ago he was reputed staging a moderate comeback as a trader in the commodity markets.

For the last year, Livermore has been living quietly, in virtual retirement, as contrasted to the once flamboyant figure he cut in New York society as the "miracle man" of Wall Street.

He maintained a small office and employed a group of clerks to keep track of the commodity exchange fluctuations day in and day out, but of late he devoted himself almost as much to writing about how to make profits

3 Towns to Be Wiped Out

1,500 Families to Evacuate Homes on U. S. 'Battleground'

By Harold Tyler
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hinesville, Ga., Nov. 28.—The Army's antiaircraft guns, weapons of a mechanized generation, have forced 1,500 old-time American farm families to move from the piney woods of southeast Georgia in search of new homes and a new life.

Many left farmlands that had been in possession of the family for generations. Three villages—Taylors Creek, Willis and Clyde—all within the range of the big antiaircraft cannon that carry shells 17 miles, will be wiped off the map.

Army officers declare families will not be left without cash and homes, but in the emergency of the rapidly expanding national defense program they had to build quickly. Lines have been marked out for a range approximately 21 miles by 30 miles across four thinly populated counties.

Liberty County is the hardest hit. That county's farm agent, G. B. Eunice, said of 985 farms, about half of them were within the range of the Army's guns. Then he added: "But at that we are better off than the folks in England."

The antiaircraft firing center covers 360,000 acres.

Helped by Federal farm agencies, Eunice listed every farm for rent or sale in a dozen southeast counties. He took each farm family's history. Some had made crops, but only a few were paid cash for crops in fields where Army cantonment-type buildings now stand.

Chest Passes 90% of Its Goal; Msgr. Sheen Asks 'Sacrifice'

Pledges to the Community Chest, in its campaign for funds yesterday passed 90 per cent of its $2,000,000 goal, Maj. Chauncey G. Parker, jr., drive general chairman, reported. He said 132,488 givers had subscribed $1,815,731.

The Montgomery County Unit, headed by Judge Thomas M. Anderson, announced it had reached 100.59 per cent of its quota. This unit, first to go "over the top," gathered 2,538 pledges totaling $23,453.

Other unit reports were Government, 126,094 pledges for $776,109, or 91.34 per cent of quota; Group Solicitation, 49,491 pledges of $619,294.84, or 97.43 per cent; Metropolitan, 11,350 pledges of $30,731, or 88.43 per cent; Capital, 1,403 pledges of $6,678, or 76.18 per cent, and Prince Georges, 1,533 pledges of $7,349, or 51 per cent.

The Community Chest could be a most effective instrument for preserving democracy if it instilled in Americans a readiness to sacrifice for the benefit of their fellow citizens, Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of philosophy at Catholic University, told 700 volunteer workers at a report meeting at the Willard Hotel.

"Democracy will have a rebirth when the wish to sacrifice is again aroused," he said.

In describing the value of the Chest, Msgr. Sheen asserted the "totalitarian state has an advantage over the democratic state in that it can appeal for sacrifice from its supporters."

Nazi Landing Party Repelled In West Indies, Paper Says

35 German Casualties Reported at Curacao Invasion Attempt

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 28.—The New York World-Telegram says a German landing party from a raider operating in the Caribbean was repulsed by British forces at Curacao, Dutch West Indies, when Nazis attempted to destroy valuable oil refineries there.

The paper, quoting an unidentified eyewitness, says the Germans invaded Curacao the night of July 28 and that British land forces and shots from two armed tankers in the harbor killed or wounded 35 Germans.

This informant says strict censorship kept the invasion a secret because England has insisted she is supreme in the West Indies and also because of suspicion that residents of the Dutch colony had aided the raiders.

The paper says the invaders were supposed to have come from the German raider which sank the British freighters King John and Davisian last July 10 about 240 miles northeast of the Virgin Islands.

Raider Disguised

Survivors of the British ships have said the raider was disguised as a Swedish ship with the name "Harvik" painted on her sides.

The informant said he learned of the attack when he drove a crew member of one of the tankers to a pier. The World-Telegram quotes him as follows:

"Just after dark . . . one of the gun crew (from a tanker) said he wanted to go back to his ship. I offered to drive him down. We were about a half-mile from the dock when a Dutch officer, with a revolver strapped on his hip, stopped us, flashed a light in our faces and said he wanted to use my car.

"I looked at the revolver and told him I'd be glad to help him out. He wanted to move his family away from the gasoline tanks. It was a pretty good sign that the Nazi raider might have put a landing party on the island.

"Murder Going On"

"The gunner got out and hurried back to his tanker . . . The docks were alive with reports that a Nazi landing party already was heading that way for an attack on the refinery.

". . . as the tanker was moving around so it could train its guns on the shore, the shooting started. There was murder going on—machine guns and hand grenades. Then the tankers began firing into the mess. I knew that it must be really serious when the tankers were firing, for every time they fired they were running the chance of blowing themselves to pieces by igniting a gas pocket that might have formed while they were taking on gasoline.

"The fighting stopped almost as suddenly as it started.

"The next day officials seemed to agree that 35 Germans had been killed or wounded."

to "house property." One bomb struck near a public shelter. "A few" deaths were reported.

London's own antiaircraft boomed intermittently after midnight. Here, the German air force reverted to the use of heavy bombers, while other raiders fanned out over Liverpool, East Anglia, the Midlands and both southeast and northeast England.

But if the shift of tactics resulted in heavier bombardment it could not be ascertained amid the continuous pounding of barrage guns of all calibers. In that din and with the raid an hour and a half old, no bomb explosions had been heard.

To all appearances, it was just another of the night raids which tax the wits of aerial technicians. It followed a day of fighting, the extent of which was symbolized in a communique of the air and home security ministries with this score:

Five invading fighters shot down.

Six British fighters lost.

On the problem of defense against night raids, the magazine Aeroplane said the answer could be expected, "but not at once, and probably not before next winter."

Coastal Guns Duel

"There is no single technical device to answer the night bomber, the magazine continued, but what is required—apart from improved detection apparatus and barrages—"is a fighter which affords good visibility for the crew above all other things and yet does not sacrifice too much in speed, in range or in gun power for that first essential."

Long-range German guns on the French invasion coast dueled with British coastal batteries during the day for about two hours, the German fire being directed by a "spotter" plane which dodged antiaircraft fire.

The British described "a heavy and successful" attack by their bombers Wednesday night on Cologne, Germany. The air ministry news service said that for two hours R. A. F. bombers plunged explosives and incendiaries into the railway network on both sides of Hohenzollern Bridge over the Rhine there.

One fire was described as "a mile long and very broad."

REPORTED OBJECT OF GERMAN ATTACK—The oil properties in Curacao, Dutch West Indies, which a German landing party reportedly attempted to destroy morning, our forces operating to the westward of Sardinia received reports from our reconnaissance aircraft that enemy forces consisting of two battleships and a large number of cruisers and destroyers were at sea about 75 miles to the northeastward.

British Torpedo Italian Battleship

"Our forces at once increased to full speed and altered course to close with the enemy in the hope of bringing him to action.

"A few minutes after noon, four enemy cruisers were sighted hull down over the horizon.

"At 12:21 p. m. our advanced light units opened fire. The enemy cruisers replied, but almost immediately they turned away and retired to the northeastward at high speed under cover of smoke.

"At 12:50 p. m., two enemy battleships accompanied by cruisers were sighted. The battleships were one ship of the Littorio class and one of the Cavour class.

Enemy Opens Fire

"The enemy heavy ships opened fire on our cruisers. These were forced by the much heavier metal of the enemy to make a slight turn away, but within a few minutes the enemy battleships themselves turned away and our cruisers at once resumed pursuit of the Italian cruisers.

"Our slower units rapidly fell astern but the battle cruiser Renown (Capt. C. E. B. Simeon, R. N., flying the flag of vice admiral Sir James Somerville), did her utmost to bring the enemy heavy ships to action, but was unable to do so owing to the speed at which the enemy retired.

"By 1:10 p. m., the chase, having been carried to within a few miles of the enemy's coast, was abandoned.

"By this time, the enemy had scattered, and owing to the extreme range and the smoke screens used by them, no damage to their ships was observed then.

"Subsequent air reconnaissance, however, indicated that considerable damage must have been caused by our gunfire before the enemy reached the shelter of his coast or disappeared behind his smoke screen.

"One enemy cruiser, believed to be of the 8-inch-gun type, was seriously on fire aft.

Destroyer Lists Heavily

"One destroyer of the Grecale class was seen to be down by the stern, listing heavily and stopping. One other enemy destroyer was listing slightly and was losing way.

"Aircraft of the fleet arm of H. M. S. Ark Royal (Capt. C. S. Holland, R. N.) attacked repeatedly during the pursuit and afterward.

"One force of Swordfish aircraft carried out a torpedo attack on the enemy battleships, and one torpedo was seen to hit a battleship of the new and powerful (35,000-ton) Littorio class.

"Another force of Swordfish attacked an enemy unit consisting of three 8-inch-gun cruisers. One torpedo hit was almost certainly obtained on the rear ship—a 10,000-ton ship of the Bolzano class—and the leading ship of this formation was observed to have reduced speed immediately after this attack.

"A force of Skuas (naval dive-bombing planes) dive-bombed a formation of three 6-inch-gun cruisers of the Condottieri class. Two very near misses were obtained, and it appears that one of the enemy cruisers was damaged.

Aircraft Return Safely

"All our aircraft returned safely from these operations.

"The only damage to our forces was to H. M. S. Berwick (a 10,000-ton cruiser, Capt. G. L. Warren, R. N.), which received two hits. The damage is slight, and this ship is ready for service.

"In this ship, one officer and six ratings were killed. Two ratings were seriously wounded and seven slightly wounded. The next of kin of casualties are being informed as soon as possible.

"At 2:35 p. m. our forces were attacked by ten enemy bombers escorted by fighters, but owing to the action of our fleet air arm fighters, no damage was sustained by any of our ships.

"At 4:40 p. m. our forces were again attacked by enemy aircraft. On this occasion the attack was made by 15 bombers in three waves. Our fleet air arm fighters again intercepted them, but some of the enemy aircraft were able to carry out their attack, and H. M. S. Ark Royal disappeared from sight behind the splashes from about 30 bombs falling close to her.

"She emerged from the spray with all guns firing furiously, having sustained neither damage nor casualties.

"During these operations one Cant (Italian) 506 three-engined float plane and one (Italian) RO-43 float plane were shot down. One of our fighters did not return from intercepting the enemy bombing attacks.

"Apart from this aircraft and the casualties and slight damage to H. M. S. Berwick, no damage or casualties were sustained by our forces."

Fascist Planes Attack

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Rome radio said today that an "important British naval formation" was attacked several times by Italian planes west of Malta late this afternoon and that it was believed the bombardment was "very effective."

Rome Claims Victory

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 28.—A day of victory on all fronts is claimed for Italy's armed forces in yesterday's encounters, which included the naval battle south of Sardinia.

Today's war communique says that in the battle and in the succeeding air attacks one British battleship, three cruisers and an aircraft carrier were damaged and seven planes shot down, while in the Red Sea an Italian submarine sank three merchant vessels. On the Greek front successful counterattacks were made, it is stated.

In all these encounters it is claimed that only one Italian cruiser was hit and a destroyer badly damaged while two planes were lost in air combats.

"Yesterday afternoon one of our naval formations which was cruising south of Sardinia met an English squadron heading from the west composed of some battleships, an airplane carrier and a number of cruisers," the communique said. "In the battle our ships hit and damaged with certainty a cruiser of the Kent type and another of the Birmingham type. An enemy shell hit our cruiser Fiume but did not explode. However, one of our destroyers, the Lanciere, was gravely hit and had to be towed to her base. Our antiaircraft artillery fire units shot down two enemy planes.

"When firing ceased the enemy squadron set off rapidly toward the southeast and were sighted about 200 kilometers south of Sardinia by some of our S79 bombers escorted by chasers. An antiaircraft carrier, a battleship and a cruiser were hit by large bombs. During a later aerial exploration it was found that the battleship had halted and there was a fire aboard."

Italian Fleet Shells Corfu

Athens (Friday), Nov. 29 (INS).—British and Greek seaplanes routed an Italian naval fleet which shelled the island of Corfu, the Greek high command said today.

A communique announced:

"Enemy destroyers fired a few shells on the north coast of Corfu, but fled under cover of a smoke screen as soon as friendly seaplanes arrived."

The northern section of Corfu was believed to be the embarking point for Greek detachments which earlier this week landed on the mainland and carried out a daring encircling movement to trap Italian columns in southwestern Albania.

Yugoslavs, Hungarians Seek Pact of 'Eternal Friendship'

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Nov. 28.—Negotiations between Yugoslavia and Hungary are proceeding toward the conclusion of a pact of friendship, it was learned here today.

The visit of Yugoslav emissaries to Budapest, which coincided with the trip home of the Hungarian Minister to Belgrade, gave an opportunity to sound out the feelings of both sides. Yugoslavia and Hungary are favorably inclined to sign a pact similar to the Yugoslav-Bulgarian pact of "eternal friendship."

Yugoslav-Hungarian relations have improved considerably during the last few years and Hungary put aside its territorial claims to Yugoslav territory for a while, during which time a series of manifestations of friendship took place at both capitals.

After the Vienna arbitration some Hungarian official circles planned to renew the Hungarian claims on the "Backa"—Hungarian district of Yugoslavia—but the Hungarian government decided it was not the time to disturb the existing relations with Yugoslavia, particularly since Hungarian-Rumanian relations worsened, Rumania retaining its hostile attitude toward that country.

The discussions are progressing well and it is expected that an agreement will be reached soon.

The Hungarian-Yugoslav talks are the more important since they began following Hungary's adherence to the tri-partite pact. It looks as though Yugoslavia has no particular worry about Hungary's adherence to this pact and does not consider it a hindrance to the conclusion of a pact of friendship with Hungary.

Argirocastro's Fate in Doubt circling enemy detachments . . . sometimes launching surprise attacks at night."

At the climax of the battle, advices from the front said, the Italians abandoned great quantities of guns, ammunition and stores and were "retreating in disorder."

(Earlier, the Italian high command said Fascist troops of the Eleventh Army successfully counterattacked, but the locale of the fighting was not given.)

In the center of the mountainous, snow-carpeted front, dispatches said, 15 Greek soldiers boldly attacked a village under cover of darkness and captured 400 Italian prisoners.

(Roughly, the fighting zone extended from the vicinity of Pogradetz, 30 miles inside Albania near the Yugoslav border, in the northeast, on a zig-zag line through mountain defiles roughly north of and paralleling the Greek-Albanian border, to the Argirocastro sector on the Adriatic Sea, in the southwest.)

In the center and east sectors, Greek forces were said to be consolidating their gains (nine words cut by censor) to avoid the danger of envelopment of their advance troops.

Cold and snow slowed up the fighting in some regions.

The Greek and British air forces, however, were said to be increasing their attack on Italian troop columns, operating from former Italian bases in captured Albanian territory.

"In the north, our troops continued to advance and occupy important enemy positions," Greek dispatches said, and declared the Italians "are seriously threatened with being cut off from their bases."

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Greek forces today captured Argirocastro after a long hand-to-hand battle through the streets with the Fascist defenders, according to frontier reports reaching here.

The center of the fighting in the north was the Albanian town of Pogradetz, 20 miles north of fallen Koritza, where a government spokesman said the Greeks demolished "systematically fortified" positions.

(Advices reaching Ochrida, Yugoslav-Albanian border town, said Greek troops attempting to execute a flanking movement on Pogradetz had been driven off, with the Italians stubbornly holding their lines along the Cerava River, 5 miles to the south.)

Italians Counter-attack

Bitolj, Yugoslavia, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Italians launched heavy counter-attacks against the Greeks in the Pogradetz sector near the Yugoslavian frontier today.

Italian planes also raided the Greek town of Phlorina repeatedly, starting large fires. Many civilians had fled from the city.

The fate of Pogradetz is not definitely known. Some Greeks have claimed its capture, but neutral frontier observers believe it is still in Italian hands, and under Greek shell fire. Part of the town is aflame.

There was sharp fighting southwest of Pogradetz tonight.

Athens, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—An appeal to the United States for aid was made today by Constantinos Mandiadakis, Greek minister of public safety and right-hand man of Premier John Metaxas.

"We address ourselves particularly to the great, strong, liberal union of the United States of America and all the peoples of the Americas, asking them to reinforce us by sending necessary materials and supplies in order to bring to a successful conclusion the great and strenuous fight we have undertaken," he said.

There was no element of despair in his appeal. He said that the children of Socrates, Plato and Aristophanes were prepared to withstand any ordeal; preferred to "die rather than submit."

"We are sure that Great Britain and the United States—the countries in which the tree of freedom grows—will help us in the fight."

Docks, Warehouses Reported Destroyed, Railroads Disrupted

By Percival Knauth

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Nov. 28.—Clearing skies at twilight last night brought a devastating rain of German bombs to yet another British port.

Fleets of German bombers took off just after dark and, according to reports received here, extensively and destructively bombed docks, warehouses, navy supply depots and railroads at Plymouth on the Channel coast of Devon.

London was also heavily attacked, according to German reports, but the main effort was concentrated against Plymouth. Incendiary and explosive bombs were dropped on the town by the hundreds of tons, it was stated here, causing large and small fires and wreaking havoc and destruction in the harbor.

Reconnaissance machines patrolling over Devon today reported that many warehouses were either still aflame or smoking ruins, their contents assuredly destroyed. Supplies of the British Navy stored in the Plymouth arsenal were still burning.

Freight yards and railway lines of the Great Western Railway were reported extensively destroyed by high-explosive bombs. Railway traffic between the western tip of England, as far as Lands End, and the interior of the British Isles was thereby interrupted, German quarters said.

Seek to Block All Harbors

The attack on Plymouth appears again to indicate that the German air force is now seeking not only to cripple British industry in the interior, but also to block all harbors where new supplies, new machinery and new armaments could be landed from overseas. Plymouth, it was pointed out, like Southampton and Bristol, is one of the important British harbors and is equipped for handling ships up to 12,000 tons displacement.

The night raids on London, which apparently were on a large scale, were succeeded by further attacks beginning early this morning, the Germans declared. At dawn squadrons of German bombers, protected by fast pursuit planes, took off singly and in groups, scattering over the entire range of southern England, it was asserted here.

London was attacked by "several" planes, it was stated. At Canterbury and Folkestone railroads were bombed. British antiaircraft emplacements were bombed and strafed, it was said, a searchlight battery in southern England being hit directly by several bombs.

British pursuit planes engaged the Germans in several dogfights, it was announced.

British bombers likewise visited Germany last night, it was stated here. Short raids around midnight were reported from western Germany, but German quarters asserted that damage was only trifling.

This claim was borne out by reports of American correspondents who stayed all last night in Cologne, which was among the Rhineland cities attacked by the Royal Air Force. Although the raid was "noisy," these correspondents said today, the action apparently was confined to outlying districts of the town.

In the course of a flight today over principal industrial cities such as Cologne, Duisburg and others, these correspondents said they saw no signs of telling damage to any big German industrial plants. Furthermore, they reported the big Rhine bridges, as well as those over canals in this district, were still intact.

Admitting the possibility of localized damage done by isolated bombs, these American newsmen nevertheless reported that Rhineland industries were not impaired by British bombs, while Rhineland cities apparently were no worse for any of the raids.

Train-Auto Collision Kills Maryland Girl

Snowhill, Md., Nov. 28 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Justice, 19, was killed instantly today when the automobile in which she was riding collided with a northbound Pennsylvania Railroad train at a crossing near her home here.

Her husband, Laurence Justice, 21, was taken to Peninsula General Hospital at Salisbury for treatment of shoulder and chest injuries.

Neutrality Patrol Seen Augmented

Fort De France, Martinique, Nov. 28 (AP).—A warship identified by observers here as a United States cruiser, possibly supplementing the four-destroyer neutrality patrol off Martinique, was sighted off this French island today.

The enlargement of the United States patrol to four destroyers yesterday followed an S O S attributed to the 9,430-ton British freighter Port Hobart last Sunday, when Mackay Radio at New York picked up a message saying "being shelled by raider."

The position given for the Port Hobart was about 500 miles northeast of Puerto Rico and 75 miles outside the neutrality zone.

McNary Recovering From Flu Attack

Salem, Oreg., Nov. 28 (AP).—Senator Charles L. McNary, who has been ill at his home with influenza, was reported "better" today by his physicians. They had feared pneumonia might develop but said there no longer was much danger.

McNary, Senate minority leader and unsuccessful Republican Vice Presidential candidate, had planned to return to Washington this week.

Dickstein Demands Dies End 'Ballyhoo'

Bitterly Accuses Him of Interfering With Work of FBI

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The Dies Committee was flatly accused of "interfering with the work of the Justice Department" in a bitter attack on the floor of the House yesterday.

Denouncing Chairman Dies for issuing "ruthless statements based on no evidence," Representative Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, vigorously sided with the Department of Justice in the feud that may or may not be settled soon after Dies arrives in Washington today.

Dies has been sparring with Attorney General Jackson over the relative efficiency of the Dies Committee and the FBI in ferreting out subversive activities. The Texas Representative is scheduled to confer with President Roosevelt and then with officials of the State and Justice Departments today in an effort to draw a line of demarcation between the Government's various anti-Fifth Column agencies.

Bridges Report Completed

Meanwhile, the Attorney General announced that the FBI had completed a 2,500-page report on Harry Bridges, C. I. O. leader, whose deportation has been hanging in the balance for months. Jackson described the report as "confidential and purely factual," and said it will be studied to determine whether deportation proceedings are warranted.

The House several months ago passed legislation to deport Bridges, but on the Senate side the measure was amended to call on the Attorney General for his conclusions on whether deportation is justified.

In his attack on the Dies Committee and its chairman, Representative Dickstein said that the committee's two most recent reports were "worthless." One of the reports was on Nazi activities and the other was on Communism.

Asks End to "Ballyhoo"

Representative Dickstein said: "We want Dies and his committee to stop their ballyhoo and to present to Congress recommendations for legislation."

"If Fifth Columns seek to destroy this country, then let us destroy them first by legislation and not by publicity," Dickstein suggested.

The New Yorker characterized Dies' recent slaps at the Justice Department as "shameful and a disgrace," and added that "I would not exchange one G-man for all Dies' investigators on his political pay roll."

"The Dies Committee is interfering with the progress and the work of the Justice Department," shouted Dickstein. "I challenge any member of this House to contradict that."

All Hearsay, He Says

The committee's testimony is based on "hearsay," Dickstein charged, as he asserted "there is not a scintilla of evidence" that would stand up in court.

With only a handful of members on the floor, Dickstein ridiculed the Dies Committee for taking testimony from a "criminal" and "seller of information" whom, said Dickstein, "I threw out of my office a year ago."

Dickstein complained that he as a member of Congress had to pay for the recent "white paper" on Nazi activities issued by the committee. He added that it was necessary to buy Chairman Dies' recent book "if you want to learn about his investigation."

tion Service undertook the job of setting fair prices for the property. They found they needed time to run property lines. Records going back 125 years to original grants had to be checked, crumbly county records traced.

Meanwhile, the families received no payments. The Farm Security Administration, called upon for help, found the problem far more complicated than the case of clients on relief. These families are solvent in the sense they have property, food, shelter and tools for agriculture.

"The trouble," Eunice said, "is that no family knows how much it will receive from the Government. They can't very well go to a man and say I want to buy your farm but I can't pay you anything on it and I don't know how much I'll be able to pay.

"They have feed stocks, animals, tools, furniture—all the numerous trappings of a farm to transport. They are being pried loose from friends and relatives. The Farm Security folks can't do much for them until they get located."

Surprisingly enough, the people involved are taking the whole affair in fine spirit—their obligation as good citizens. L. J. Bacon is giving up a 45-acre farm at Willie. It's the farm his father settled half a century ago. He raised cotton, tobacco, hogs and a little truck garden.

With his wife and daughter, he waits for Uncle Sam to decide what he'll be paid for the place. After that, "I just don't know what we'll do," he said. "I've got a lot of stuff to move, but I can't plan ahead. We are just waiting."

Relief for Europe's Children Discussed

President Confers With Hull, Davis, Lamont on Subject

By J. C. Stark.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Measures to alleviate suffering among European children this winter are being considered by Government and Red Cross authorities it was learned tonight after a long White House conference on the foreign relief problem.

The plan, calling for the shipment of canned milk, medicines and similar supplies to parts of Europe for the relief only of children, was described in informed quarters as still being in the tentative stage.

Unoccupied France and Spain were believed most likely to benefit at first if the plan became effective.

The undertaking was said to depend largely on whether British authorities would permit the supplies to pass through the blockade of the European continent.

Large-Scale Feeding Out

It was emphasized in informed quarters that there was no present intention by authorities here to attempt a large-scale European feeding program such as Herbert Hoover and others have been advocating for the relief of inhabitants of German-occupied countries.

With German U-boats and sea raiders taking a mounting toll among Britain's own supply ships, officials here considered it certain that British authorities would be even less disposed now to consider any relaxation of the blockade for the feeding of the general population of the Nazi-held nations.

Given assurances, however, that only limited supplies of canned milk and similar items would be sent and distributed to children under strict Red Cross supervision, British agreement to the plan was considered possible, especially for Spain and unoccupied France.

No Decisions Reached

At the White House conference with President Roosevelt yesterday were Secretary of State Hull, Chairman Norman Davis of the American Red Cross and Thomas W. Lamont, New York banker.

Davis said afterward that they had reviewed the whole problem of European relief but that no decisions were reached and none was imminent. They discussed, he said, "what ought to be done and what is being done."

Lamont said he represented no relief organization but was interested in the problem.

The Red Cross authorized an allotment of $175,000 in medical and clothing relief for the Greek Red Cross today. This is in addition to $49,000 previously allotted.

Plane Delivery To Britain Speeded Up

$10,177,776 Worth Sent in October, 1-5 Authorized Figure

Delivery of American warplanes to Great Britain and Canada was stepped up at a rapid rate during October, but still was barely a fifth of the total amount authorized for export since the first of the year, State Department figures revealed last night.

The Department's monthly statement on arms export licenses showed that Britain received delivery of $10,177,776 worth of planes during the month. This compared with $60,424,018 worth shipped during the first nine months of 1940. Exports of $59,497,812 in planes was authorized for October, compared with $229,000,079 in the previous nine-month period.

Canada received delivery of aircraft valued at $1,929,334 during the month, compared with $7,519,403 exported previously. The Department authorized export of $6,306,600 worth during the month, bringing the year's total to $27,122,702.

Other war supplies shipped to Britain, including tanks, motorized equipment, arms and ammunition, brought that country's October total of arms imports to $20,892,000, compared with $114,070,150 shipped in the previous nine months. Britain's total authorized export through October was $591,341,551. Total exports to Canada during October were $2,963,000 compared with $18,508,000 from January 1. Canada's authorized exports through October were $44,466,000.

The National Defense Priorities Board meanwhile reached a decision on whether the aircraft industry should be compelled to give orders for military planes precedence over commercial aviation requirements, but withheld a formal announcement until today.

It was understood, however, that the board had decided not to invoke the priority rule. It reached its decision after a conference with President Roosevelt.

The board is expected to issue a statement of policy setting forth the position enunciated by Roosevelt Tuesday—that the need for military planes comes first—and expressing the hope that the problem can be settled without invoking priorities powers vested in the board by the President.

The issue was forced into the open Tuesday by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, who charged that some major aircraft firms were lagging in deliveries of military planes, yet were turning out planes for commercial airlines on schedule.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau suggested yesterday the United States should "look at some of the cash assets" of the British before considering the purchase of any of Britain's West Indian islands in order to facilitate her buying of war supplies.

In his first press conference after a three-week vacation, Morgenthau declared, however, that he was not prepared to answer any questions on how much cash the British have left for purchases.

Aluminum Production Rate Held Ample for U. S., Britain

Stettinius Expects Output to Be Greatest In the World When Program Gets Into Full Stride; New Plants Scheduled to Open

The production of aluminum, a basic requirement of the aviation industry, is being stepped up rapidly enough to meet all military needs of both the United States and Great Britain during the next two years Edward R. Stettinius, jr., head of the industrial materials division of the National Defense Commission, disclosed yesterday.

Stettinius made the announcement immediately after a White House conference, in which he informed President Roosevelt of the achievement.

Expansion of plants already under way and planned, he said, will increase production to a peak 825,000,000 pounds a year by July, 1942, which will be 2½ times the 1939 output of 323,000,000 pounds.

The present capacity is 465,000,000 pounds, while the production level next July will be 690,000,000 pounds.

The Aluminum Co. of America is investing $150,000,000 in the expansion program, while the Reynolds Metal Co. is spending $20,000,000.

Stettinius said that the investments were made entirely as other private capital risks without any guarantee from the Government to pay for losses that may occur from a post-war drop in demand for aluminum.

When the aluminum production program is in full swing, he said, it will be the largest of any country in the world.

New production plants scheduled to go into operation under the expansion program are:

January, 1941—Aluminum Co. of America plant at Alcoa, Tenn., with annual production of 30,000,000 pounds.

April, 1941—Badin, N. C., Aluminum Co. plant, served by Duke power, 14,000,000 pounds.

Between April and June, 1941—Vancouver plant, Aluminum Co., served by Bonneville power, 90,000,000 pounds.

January, 1942—Alcoa plant in Tennessee, served by company power, 30,000,000 pounds, and another Alcoa plant on TVA power, 30,000,000 pounds.

July, 1942—Another Alcoa plant, served by TVA power, 30,000,000 power.

July, 1941—Reynolds Metal Co. plant at Sheffield, Ala., with initial production 20,000,000 pounds and capacity of 60,000,000 pounds in July, 1942.

Aircraft requirements are based on revised schedules of the Army and Navy and include the new British program as well. The aluminum requirements are estimated four months in advance of airplane scheduled deliveries.

Stettinius also disclosed that production of magnesium, used in plane production, is being stepped up at even a faster rate than aluminum. It was 6,300,000 in 1939, he said, is now 13,500,000 pounds and will reach 26,500,000 in 1942.

The Gallup Poll

Vote to Help Greece Tops Percentage Who Favored Aid to Finland and Norway

By Dr. George Gallup.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 28—American public sympathy with Greece and desire to give her material aid is demonstrated in a public opinion survey now being conducted by the Institute. Preliminary returns show a substantial majority in favor of making American war materials and airplanes available to the embattled Greeks, in much the same spirit of sympathy for small nations as was noted when Finland was invaded last year, and Norway last spring.

The question put to a cross-section of voters deals with the issue of lending money to Greece for the purchase of war materials. Legal obstacles, such as the Johnson Act, at present stand in the way of any actual loans to the Greeks, but it is significant that a majority of American voters favor a Greek loan in principle.

"Do you think the United States should lend money to Greece for the purchase of arms, airplanes and other war materials?"

With interviewing in the survey still going on this week, returns thus far show the following:

Help Greece	60%
Do not help	40

One in six (15 per cent) was undecided or without an opinion.

The events of the last nine months have brought about a highly significant change in the American public attitude toward aiding foreign nations at war.

When tiny Finland was attempting to stem the Russian invasion last winter, the Institute found that while American voters sympathized with Finland and were willing to lend her money to buy farm products and other non-military supplies here, they were not willing to grant a loan for the purchase of arms, airplanes and other materials of a strictly military nature.

More than 60 per cent opposed such a loan, chiefly on the ground that it might embroil us in trouble abroad.

This same attitude prevailed at the time Norway was invaded. Even though sympathy was overwhelmingly with Norway, a majority (57 per cent) opposed a loan to the Norwegians for purchase of war supplies.

Today, as the survey on the Greek issue shows, the situation is substantially different.

The public having watched the military successes of Germany, the fall of France, and the air blitzkrieg on England, is now apparently more willing to grant direct aid to the foes of the Axis.

The same nine-month period has witnessed an increase in the number of voters willing to give aid to England even at the risk of war.

Here's a Check On Poll Accuracy

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 28.—A final check of the institute's accuracy in the 1940 election is beginning to take shape as official and complete election returns are made available.

To date the institute has obtained complete returns from state officials in New Hampshire, Louisiana, Mississippi and Oklahoma.

The following comparison shows the accuracy of the institute's preelection survey November 4 in those States:

Major Party Vote For Roosevelt: Name of State	Gallup Forecast	Official Result	Deviation
N. Hampshire	49%	53.2%	4.2
Louisiana	86	85.9	.1
Mississippi	94	96.5	1.5
Oklahoma	56	57.6	1.6

The average deviation in the 48 States, on the basis of unofficial returns, was 2½ per cent.

Other comparisons in individual States will follow as soon as official returns are obtainable.

Bucharest Appears Like Besieged City

Slayers of 64 Still Free; Government Unsure of Position

By Eugen Kovacs.
Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 28.—Bucharest, according to reports reaching here, resembles a besieged town.

Strong military patrols are circulating in the streets and all public buildings are being guarded by military forces armed with machine guns. The government seems not to be sure of its position and still fears further disorders. The group of Iron Guardists called the "Corpul Resletzi" seems to be the center of the opposition movement, even though its commander is Vladimir Jashinsky, the present Minister of Labor.

The government has not yet arrested one of the murderers and it seems that the assassination of the 64 personalities—mostly military—detained in the Fortress of Jihlava, all of whom were directly involved in the assassination of Cornelius Zelea Codreanu and his legionaries, has made no particular impression on the premier, Gen. Ion Antonescu, and the government.

But the assassination of Dr. Nicholas Jorga, whose body was found on a highroad near Pitesti, and Prof. Virgil Madgearu, former secretary-general of the National Peasant Party, and two others who could not be identified, whose bodies were lying in the woods near the outskirts of the Bucharest suburb of Baneasa, have disgusted Rumania's dictator.

Too Much for Antonescu

Even if the Iron Guard clearly remembers that Dr. Jorga was the first to bring M. Codreanu before the Bucharest military court which led to his first conviction, his reputation (he was called "the teacher of the nation") should have protected him against any attempt on his life.

The Iron Guard's arrest of George Tateresicu, Constantin Argetoianu, Michael Ghelmegeanu, Prof. Michael Ralea and Ion Gigurtu—the latter was released immediately following the intervention of the German Legation—was also too much for Gen. Antonescu.

His first order was to dismiss the prefect of the Bucharest police, Col. Zavoianu, who made all these murders and arrests possible. The dictator appointed Col. Palangeanu. King Michael's former governor, who presented himself immediately at police headquarters, but Col. Zavoianu refused to hand over his job. Long discussions commenced and only after Iron Guard Leader Horia Sima's intervention was Col. Zavoianu persuaded to hand over his post to M. Mironovici, who is the commander of the legionary group known as the "Buna Vestire."

This group, which has some 1,000 members, who are all armed, will now maintain order and try to avoid further acts of vengeance by the Corpul Resletzi group, whose members killed former Premier Armand Calinescu September 21, 1939.

Anxiety in Bucharest

No further acts of violence are reported from the provinces. It seems that activities of the opposition group were concentrated in Bucharest, where considerable nervous anxiety reigns. The former political personalities—not only the prominent ones, but also those of secondary importance—are living in considerable fear, since they cannot rely upon the protection of the legal government.

The Germans have not intervened directly except in the case of M. Gigurtu. Most of those killed and arrested are known to be pro-French and anti-Nazi, and it would seem that this "purge" appears pleasing to them. Dr. Jorga, particularly, has made very strong anti-German statements and the Germans are certainly not deploring his death.

Rumania has reached, following eleven weeks of the Antonescu-Iron Guard regime, a position never known before. The queen mother, Helen, has fled the country and it is expected that King Michael will follow her, since he feels a prisoner in his own country. Many former political personalities are leaving by secret ways and others are taking refuge in the provinces. The army officers, chiefly generals, are indignant and it might easily come about that a military dictatorship will be established soon.

Draft Objector Changes Mind

New York, Nov. 28. (AP).—Angelo Mongiore, 23-year-old janitor who was sentenced last week to 18 months for refusing to register for Selective Service, changed his mind today and registered at the Federal House of detention.

His reasons for the change were not disclosed.

Mongiore, who is married and has one child, had refused to register on religious and conscientious grounds.

had entered the capital, after the Iron Guard continued to pursue their enemies in open defiance of both Antonescu and their own leader, Vice Premier Horia Sima.

Late in the day German troops from Pitesti, 65 miles northwest of Bucharest, came into the city, possibly at the request of Antonescu, after the slaying of Jorga, in a follow-up on the assassination of former King Carol's aides.

All other German soldiers in or near Bucharest were mobilized and ordered to stand ready for immediate action.

(Dispatches from Bucharest said 20 more adherents of King Carol's regime were reported slain at the Rumanian oil center of Ploesti, and 26 Iron Guardsmen involved in the Jilava prison purge of 64 prisoners were said to have committed suicide.

(One of those slain was identified as a prominent pharmacist accused of selling acid used in an attempt to destroy the bones of Cornelius Zelea Codreanu, Iron Guard founder.)

In the day Antonescu appealed to army officers to restore order, apparently in face of police inability to control the situation.

Iron Guardsmen were said to have forced Antonescu to accept Radu Mironovici, extremist owner of the Iron Guard newspaper as a new prefect of police in Bucharest.

(Unconfirmed Budapest dispatches said the Iron Guards had seized police headquarters in the capital and had occupied the American built telephone building. These reports could not be confirmed.)

Earlier, Antonescu had threatened death sentences to those responsible for "executions" of more than 64 former Carolists in bloody vengeance for the killing two years ago of the guard's "martyred" leader, Codreanu, and 13 followers.

Sima, against whose Iron Guard leadership the revolt also is directed, joined Antonescu in an appeal for "legality, justice and order."

The killing of Jorga, once a member of King Carol's council who had lectured in the United States, followed. He was seized in his home and his bullet-pierced body was found in a wood not far away. (Here the censor deleted 30 words..

(How serious the situation was in Bucharest was hidden by the heavy censorship after a dispatch was received telling of more than 1,000 Iron Guardsmen pouring in to the city.)

Juliu Maniu, Peasant Party leader; former Premier Ion Gigurti and Gheorghe Bratianu, former leader of the old Liberal Party, were reported under heavy guard in government buildings.

Civil War Threatened

Budapest (Friday), Nov. 29 (INS). Iron Guard rebellion has broken out in at least six important Rumanian cities, and the guard has concentrated powerfully armed bands in Bucharest for a possible stroke against the government of Premier Ion Antonescu, according to information reaching Budapest today.

Only German troops—thousands of whom have been transported to Rumania in recent weeks—will be able to curb a civil war between the Iron Guard and Rumanian army, these accounts indicated.

Sanguinary battles with machine guns were reported between the Iron Guard legionnaires and army supporters of the government in half a dozen cities, where guards attempted to seize centers of public works.

Unless Germany intervenes, full civil war between the Iron Guard and army—as a direct result of the Iron Guard's "execution" of nearly 70 foes in Bucharest—is expected to break out before the week-end.

Emergency Proclaimed

New York, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—A state of emergency has been proclaimed in Rumania, according to a news bulletin from the British wireless received today at Columbia Broadcasting System's shortwave listening station.

Almazanists Cry 'Down With Wallace'

he had won the election but was withdrawing in the interests of peace and quiet.

The throng, which had been waiting outside the embassy for some time, began its demonstration as the official party, including Wallace and United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels, drove past on the way to the residency.

Cries of, "Down with the United States—Viva Almazan—the United States betrayed Almazan—down with Wallace!" rang out as the automobiles of the Wallace party arrived.

Stones clanged against the steel-shuttered windows of the embassy.

The special detail of police guarding the embassy struggled with the crowd while it tried, without success, to storm the building's outer doors, bearing the Great Seal of the United States. Apparently the crowd mistook the embassy for the residency.

Then the motorcycle squads which had escorted Wallace to the residency opened up with their tear gas guns, riding into the crowd and breaking it up. No arrests or serious injuries were reported immediately.

damned them as "green" rookies.

The military clothing had been issued according to measurements, but without great success in some cases. One recruit was seen rolling up the sleeves of a uniform blouse that overlapped his wrists several inches, while another remarked, his obviously reconditioned shoes probably had done yeoman duty in the Battle of the Marne.

The observation stemmed from the fact that while most new soldiers were issued the new type uniforms, others drew apparel of the World War vintage with stiff, chin-high collars, cursed by a million doughboys of the A. E. F.

The District men will have only a short tour of duty at this post, it was emphasized by officers. Most, if not all, will be cleared from Meade within four days for Infantry, Artillery, Cavalry or other posts, according to aptitude tests they will face tomorrow.

The aptitude test, whose questions are carefully guarded for obvious reasons, are reported to be so comprehensive as to decide immediately the trainees qualifications for any of the several branches of the Army.

Questions range, it is said, from such simple matters as checking synonyms to abstruse engineering problems.

The 38 men who were ushered into service here tonight went through approximately the same ritual as the 27 in the first induction.

Hurried here by bus from the Odenton, Md., train debarkation point, the selectees were lined up in double ranks at a "checking center," where a roll was called.

Company officers offered words of advice: "It's going to be an easy year if you snap into it . . . Play the game hard."

Presently, the new soldiers were marched away to their billets in Companies F and E, both housed in steam-heated brick barracks. Arrived in their billets, the trainees, fatigued by a day's continual induction, examinations and formalities, still were not allowed to take to their cots until eagle-eyed noncommissioned officers had given them terse orders on the proper methods of making their beds.

100 Die As Train Derailed in China

Shanghai, Nov. 29. (AP).—One hundred persons were reported killed or injured when five cars of a Shanghai-Nanking Railway train believed bearing numerous Japanese and Chinese officials to Nanking for a treaty signing tomorrow were derailed by dynamiting of the line.

The accident, allegedly the result of mining of the tracks by Chinese guerrillas, occurred at Soochow, about 50 miles west of Shanghai.

Tommy's Growing a Beard as War Cuts Razor-Blade Supply

British Tables Also Feel the Pinch; Fresh Fruits to Disappear From Menu; Minister Warns of Meat Rationing

By Edward Angly
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Nov. 28.—Just as the female of the British species is having to give up silk stockings, so the male may be compelled to grow a beard for lack of razor blades before this war has gone on many more months.

This is just one of the many little sacrifices which keep accumulating day by day as the British democracy, in its fight for its life, is obliged to adopt totalitarian methods to save its war sinews and regulate the daily habits of the taxpayers.

Each day the screw turns a little tighter. In many communities shortages of popular brands of cigarettes and tobacco have recently occurred. The tobacco comptroller announced today that there was no shortage of that commodity in this country and that the stocks were sufficient to last a long time to come. He appealed to smokers not to make the situation worse by trying to hoard.

He blamed "temporary channels of distribution" for the temporary shortage in certain areas.

Face Meat Rationing

Lord Woolton, food minister, used shorter and franker words in breaking the gloomy news that the British people may soon have to give up the luxury of most of the fresh fruits which come to them from overseas. He also said this country might soon find itself no longer able to spare the shipping space for the quantity of meat it has become accustomed to importing from abroad.

In announcing that rationing of still more commodities might be around the corner, the food ministry said that difficulties "have arisen by losses at sea and by bombing operations.

Communal feeding at factory canteens is likely to be more generally extended in the near future.

Condensed milk is one of the latest foods to feel the ax.

It was announced that full cream, sweet milk, condensed milk would be reduced in December to 40 per cent of normal pre-war supply.

The shipping and military situation being what it is, Lord Woolton informed the belt-tightening Britons that apples, apricots, grapes, bananas and other imported foods not essential to the life of a nation at war must disappear from its table "while the ships that used to bring them are employed to serve the necessities of our forces overseas."

Boon to Electric Razors

He assured the importers of such commodities whose business will now be hard hit, that he had delayed the blow until "the last moment."

In home production priority is being given to milk, potatoes, bread and vegetables. The farmer is being encouraged out of the public purse, as well as his sense of patriotism, to work harder to provide more of these essentials for his urban customers.

The razor blade shortage, which has just begun to be felt, will gradually become more acute, for the manufacturers are to have their iron and steel ration reduced next Monday to one-fourth of their normal purchases. The forewarned had already begun buying electric razors.

Already it is difficult to find one in the British shops. Straight razors in Britain, as in America, are not used by many people these days. Before resorting to that implement most Britons, if worse comes to worse, probably would prefer to grow beards. In the navy, and to a lesser degree in the air force, beards are becoming increasingly the mode.

And Beards Flourish

The Tommy, too, has to let his beard grow, not to be fashionable but for economy sake. The new reduction in the steel supply allotted razor blade manufacturers means the disappearance of the penny blade which comes from the same iron as the two penny and three penny blade.

It is the penny blade the soldier usually buys to put into the razor which is given him as part of his standard equipment.

merchandise store, a real estate office, barber shop, beauty shop, produce company office and a cafe.

The explosion apparently occurred in the center of the building. The roof collapsed and the four cement walls crumbled.

Ray Snyder, called to repair the leak, was among the injured. The explosion came just as he turned on his flashlight to investigate.

Flames broke out immediately, and rescuers could hear voices calling for help.

Earl Hansen, near the scene, fought his way through the flames to rescue Mrs. Ralph Wheeler, trapped in the debris of a beauty shop, one of several businesses in the building. Hansen and Mrs. Wheeler were burned severely.

Mrs. Wheeler said she smelled gas two hours before the explosion.

Albert Doolin, an eye witness, reported he was standing nearby when he heard a rumbling "as though a freight train had crashed into the structure." A sheet of flame swept up and the wall began to crumple.

"The whole area shook," he said.

Earl Claghorn said that 15 minutes after the explosion he could hear voices calling for help.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 28 (AP).—A black powder storage building at the Dupont powder plant exploded mysteriously today. Company officials said no one was injured.

A building, 30 by 40 feet, was blown to bits.

It was isolated from the rest of the powder company by earthworks and was used entirely for storage purposes and no one was inside it.

A company official said "we have no reason to believe the explosion was caused by sabotage."

The explosion broke ten windows in Parkland School, approximately 14 miles away.

Chinese 'Puppets' Urge Chiang to Quit

Tokyo to Recognize Japan-Dominated Nanking Government

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Nov. 28.—The Japanese-sponsored government at Nanking, preparing for the formality of recognition by Tokyo Saturday, has sent a "last exhortation" that the Chungking government quit fighting and join in peaceful cooperation with Japan.

This was conveyed in an open telegram from President Wang Ching-Wei of the Nanking regime to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek of Chungking, addressing him as "Mr. Chiang Kai-Shek."

Chiang is not expected to reply.

The treaty-signing scheduled for Saturday will mark another step in Japan's drive toward the dominance in "Greater East Asia."

In return for formal recognition, the Wang government (set up March 22, 1940, under Japanese auspices) will pledge to Tokyo virtually complete and permanent Japanese control of its military and economic affairs, a reliable source declared.

Ostensibly, however, Japan will recognize the Nanking government as the sovereign power in China (thus holding Chiang to be a local rebel, although this regime is recognized by the United States, Britain and other powers.)

Outstanding provisions of the treaty were said to be:

1. That Japanese troops remain in China "for two years after complete peace is restored everywhere in China."

2. That the so-called "anti-Communist" region where Japanese troops are to be stationed permanently include North China as well as Inner Mongolia.

In the economic field the treaty was represented as threatening by implication the virtual exclusion of foreign interests and Japanese monopoly over Chinese resources.

Foreign observers envisaged Japanese-occupied China as "another Manchoukuo," permitted to sell to other countries things which Japan does not need and to import from others things which Japan cannot supply.

The provision for withdrawal of Japanese troops was said to be so worded that Japan need never withdraw, since "complete peace . . . everywhere in China" never has existed in a strict sense.

It was understood here that the treaty does not mention signing of the anticomintern pact by the Nanking government of Japan and Manchoukuo.

Sources here saw in this omission a desire by Japan to promote friendly relations with Russia.

"In view of your continued resistance," said Wang's telegram to Chiang, "a state of war will continue within China despite the treaty signature.

"It is hoped that you will announce an armistice so the entire nation may devote itself to the restoration of peace and pave the way to our national stability."

Meanwhile, 50 Chinese policemen of the International Settlement force went on strike today and several thousand others were threatening to walk out, demanding pay increases to meet a 800 per cent rise in the cost of rice since the outbreak of the Chinese-Japanese war.

Officials said an increase probably would be granted in time to prevent a complete walkout.

JOHN PELENYI

Pelenyi, Envoy FromHungary, Asks to Retire

Veteran of 32 Years' Service Plans to Stay In U. S. 'for Some Time'

John Pelenyi, Hungarian Minister to the United States, told President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull yesterday that he is retiring after 32 years in the consular and diplomatic service of his country.

A statement the Minister made to newspapermen was interpreted in some quarters as intimating disapproval of Hungary's joining the totalitarian Axis ten days ago, but Stephen de Rothkugel, the legation counselor, said it was usual for Ministers to retire after 30 years' service and that Pelenyi would receive a pension.

Calls on President First

Pelenyi called on President Roosevelt before going to Secretary Hull's office. At the State Department he handed newspapermen this statement:

"I have informed Secretary Hull that I have asked my government to be relieved, which has been my intention for some time.

"I have also thanked the Secretary for the many kindnesses which he extended me . . . I have many friends here and I hope to remain in this country as a private citizen for some time."

Plans to Return Eventually

Asked if he expected to return to Hungary, the Minister first answered by saying, "Things are rather confused." He reflected a moment and then added:

"Oh, yes, eventually I plan to return there."

The Minister began his diplomatic career as vice consul at Pittsburgh in 1908. His wife is the former Sue Marman, of Cleveland.

Pending the arrival of Pelenyi's successor, yet to be named by Budapest, the legation will be in charge of De Rothkugel, as acting charge d'affaires.

By the terms of his will, admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, Mrs. Lucille Rosamond Sullivan, widow of the testator, receives the entire estate of Harry B. Sullivan, of Chevy Chase, the value of which is not revealed. The instrument, executed April 30, 1937, names Mrs. Sullivan executrix.

Van Duzer Asks Snow Parking Bans on Additional Streets

Extension of the snow parking bans to take in three additional streets was requested of the Commissioners yesterday by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

East Capitol Street, from First to Fifteenth Streets, a distance of 1.2 miles; Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, from Second Street to Barney Circle, a distance of 1.5 miles and Georgia Avenue Northwest, from Concord Avenue to the District Line, a distance of 1.6 miles, are the streets to be affected.

Adding this mileage to the present total will make 79.1 miles over which motorists must not park their cars between 2 and 8 a. m. from December 15 to March 15.

Meanwhile, Maj. Beverly C. Snow, assistant engineer commissioner assigned to snow removal projects for the District has been keeping an eagle eye out for storm signals, weather charts and the city's snow removal equipment.

Fourteen new plows were delivered yesterday to the City Refuse Department and 14 more are expected today. The plows are attached to trucks. In addition the City Refuse Department now has seven tractors for snow removal work.

The refuse, water, sewer and highway departments will aid in the snow removal work.

Congressmen Told To Stick to Duties

The country will be better served, said Secretary of War Stimson, if Congressmen stick to legislative duties instead of joining the armed forces.

He made this assertion in a letter to Representative Jarman (Democrat), Alabama, who last week transferred his National Guard commission to the Guard's Reserves in order to remain in the House.

"It is my considered opinion that in the present situation," Stimson wrote, "a member of Congress can render greater service to the Nation by continuing to perform the duties of that office than by serving with the armed forces."

Pay Roll Tax Set-up May Be Revised

Plans for Wider Pension Coverage Also Being Weighed

Possible revision of the pay roll tax system in providing wider old-age pension coverage under the Social Security Act was reported under Administration study yesterday.

One proposal under scrutiny would provide a "pay as you go" method of financing Federal old-age contributions, eliminating reserve fund accumulations and making payments out of general taxes on an annual assessment basis.

Congress acted last year to freeze pay roll taxes at 1 per cent for three years, slowing down reserve fund growth. It was pointed out in one quarter that ultimately under this plan cost of benefits will exceed the annual pay roll tax collections, and that "sooner or later" at least part of the Federal contribution would have to come from general revenues.

Several plans for extending both old age and unemployment insurance coverage, and possible revising tax methods, have figured in Social Security board surveys but no decisions are expected to be reached before the next Congress meets.

At the Capitol, members from the so-called "poorer states" are ready to revive their proposals for increased Federal contributions and elimination of State "matching" requirements. One plan would provide a "minimum" Federal grant in all States of from $20 to $25, the States adding to that amount, without being required to "match".

Meanwhile, Senator Wagner, (Democrat), of New York was revising amendments designed to operate under the present contributary system, bringing some 10,000,000 more workers under old age insurance and about 5,000,000 more under unemployment insurance.

Wagner's plan brings into the old-age-insurance system some 4,000,000 agricultural workers, 2,500,000 domestic servants, 750,000 employes of nonprofit institutions and 1,500,000 employes of States, counties and municipalities not now covered by pension plans.

The New York Senator stressed that nothing in his bill will repeal or interfere with the independent status of existing pension systems covering teachers, firemen, policemen or other public employes.

Kensington Man Killed By B.&O. Express Train

William Smouthers, 73, colored, of Kensington, Md., was killed yesterday by a B. & O. express train while he was walking on the tracks near the overhead bridge in Garrett Park.

E. R. Jones, of the Montgomery County police force, said Smouthers apparently failed to see the train approaching. Dr. C. E. Hawks, county medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Tell Santa 'To Bring Toy Car,' Boy, 3, Pleads With First Lady

Youngster Slips Up to Mrs. Roosevelt In New York Store as She Completes Christmas Shopping Began 11 Months Ago

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 28.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who annually starts her Christmas shopping about 11 months before Christmas, completed her 1940 Yule gift list today—and received a request from a small boy to be his intermediary with Santa Claus.

"Please tell Santa to bring me a toy car," said 3-year-old Desmond Horton, slipping to the First Lady's side and receiving a friendly pat as she shopped for men's neckties.

Some of the 12 necktie-and-handkerchief sets Mrs. Roosevelt chose were definitely on the gay side, for holiday wear. In 25 minutes of swift shopping at a Fifth Avenue department store she also selected a number of toys and games and two evening bags.

Earlier in the week, she bought a lapin coat and two dresses—a pale blue crepe evening gown and a black crepe daytime dress with white trimming—to send young friends for Christmas.

Last year, the store said, her Christmas gifts included 100 dozen handkerchiefs—12 to a box; but she lingered longest today at a toy table.

She gives each of her younger grandchildren one Christmas toy. Among her choices were a big and a small teddy bear, a toy panda, a set of alphabet blocks and an educational toy of the "push-pull" type.

Most of her grandchildren will spend this Christmas in their own homes. As far as Mrs. Roosevelt now knows, only two children—Franklin D. Roosevelt 3d, and Harry Hopkins' daughter, Diana—will spend Christmas at the White House.

Yule Business Likely to Set VolumeRecord

Commerce Department Predicts Trade Will Reach $5,000,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department predicted yesterday the biggest Christmas stocking of holiday trade that American business has ever enjoyed.

Experts of the department have advised Secretary Jesse H. Jones, it was learned, that their surveys show that the physical volume of Christmas retail trade—sales between Thanksgiving and Christmas—will be the largest on record.

They reported they could not make advance estimates in dollars and cents, but said that, on a value basis, it might be a little under the $5,000,000,000 record set in 1929. They explained that prices of goods are much lower now than in 1929, so that merchants may sell more items without taking in quite as many dollars.

The experts found no lack of gifts on the Nation's counters because of the European war. American-made goods of similar quality, they said, have replace to a large extent such items as French laces and gloves, Czecho-Slovakian glassware and textiles, German cameras and musical instruments, Belgian gems and linens, and Italian textiles.

Although the war was already under way last Christmas, most of these items still were on the American market a year ago because importers had stocked up months ahead to beat the onrush of battle and blockade.

Some effort was found to substitute Latin American handicraft for various European goods, but, while the experiment bears official Government sponsorship, it has not shown much progress, the experts said.

As for toys, the officials announced, that, contrary to popular belief, American factories largely displaced Germany and Japan in the toy market years ago.

Well, Well and Well! Paulette Says She's Mrs. Chaplin

Los Angeles, Nov. 28. (AP)—Paulette Goddard of the films disclosed publicly today that she is the wife of Chrales Chaplin.

Miss Goddard, who has parried questions on that score numerous times, said she and the actor-producer are married when she answered a suit filed by her father, Joseph R. Levy, who asked that she pay him $150 a week support.

The actress stated in her answer that her father needs no more than the $75 a week she said she is paying him.

In her answer Miss Goddard did not disclose where her marriage to Chaplain took place. He introduced her a few weeks ago from a New York stage as "My wife." That was his first public admission they were married.

Slot-Machine Fuel Demand Stirs Mint

Denver, Nov. 28 (INS).—The United States Mint in Denver is having one heetic time turning out enough money, officials said tonight. In spite of operating on a 24-hour basis with three shifts of employes, they still are running several thousand dollars a day behind orders.

The reason—the insatiable appetite of rapidly multiplying "juke boxes" and other coin-in-the slot machines. At least that's the theory of the Mint officials.

FCC Proposes Restrictions To Govern Radio Networks

List of 'Suggestions' for Limiting Control Over Affiliated Stations Brought Forth As Monopoly Hearing Date Draws Near

By James D. Secrest

Tentative regulation of broadcasting networks which would curb considerably their control of affiliated stations was disclosed yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission as it prepared for a hearing Monday and Tuesday on the politically dangerous monopoly report.

The commission labeled the regulations as "suggestions" and listed several with alternatives. It explained that they have not been approved but are intended to focus the attention of counsel for the several networks on issues raised in the report.

The monopoly report, which was issued June 12 on the basis of an investigation extending over two years, contains political dynamite, members of the commission have found, because of the protests that have been made by the radio chains.

Designed to forestall a threatened Congressional investigation of the FCC and the broadcasting industry, the monopoly report was largely responsible for a hostile reception given Thad H. Brown by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and his subsequent withdrawal of a seven-year renomination.

The FCC released the committee report, which has not yet been approved by the commission, on the day that Brown was haled before the Senate committee for his first hearing. Thereafter it was used by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, as a basis for an attack on Brown's record.

The networks, chiefly the Columbia Broadcasting System, charged that the report contained serious errors of fact and more serious insinuations.

Among the regulations "suggested" by the FCC are the following:

Discontinuance of the network's contractural ban against an affiliate carrying other chain programs.

Restrictions on the ownership of stations by persons "engaged in network broadcasting."

Prohibition against network-affiliate tieups which will result in the duplication of a chain program in any city.

Limitations on the networks' options on broadcasting time of affiliates and on the duration of contracts.

Prohibitions against network control of advertising rates charged by affiliated stations.

Maintenance of the right of affiliated stations to reject "for any reasonable cause any program offered by the network."

Organizations which will be represented at the hearing include National Broadcasting Co., Columbia Broadcasting System, Independent Radio Network Affiliates, Inc., Don Lee Broadcasting System, Mutual Broadcasting System, World Broadcasting System, Inc., Association of Radio Transcription Producers of Hollywood, Inc., American Federation of Musicians, Independent Artists' Representatives and Associated Music Publishers, Inc.

The FCC committee, in its monopoly report, found that the interests of affiliated radio stations "have been subordinated to the interests of the network owned and controlled station."

It called attention to the concentration of control of the country's broadcasting stations and pointed out that N. B. C. and C. B. S. in 1938 owned or controlled 23 stations, of which 15 were 50 kw. clear channel outlets.

All but two of the 34 high-power clear channel stations and all of the high-power regional stations were found to be on the two major networks.

Nevill Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, commented last night that "although these suggestions . . . show the trend of thinking of some of the commissioners, nevertheless we are confident there exists in the commission sufficient good judgment and restraint as to the exercise of powers . . ."

"It would be most unfortunate," Miller said, "if the high standard of radio entertainment and information now enjoyed by the American public was jeopardized by restrictions sought to be imposed without warrant of law or need."

U. S. Democracy 'Flabby,' Social Agency Is Told

American democracy is good in form but "very flabby" in substance, Dr. LeRoy Bowman, field secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy, said yesterday.

"Even if democracy here is not threatened from without, it may break under its own weight," he told the recreation committee of the Council of Social Agencies.

Greatest dangers in the United States economic and social set-up, Bowman explained to approximately 75 members at the Willard Hotel, are "bigness, intricacy and professionalism."

He predicted that during the next two decades the standard of living would fall, "whether Hitler wins the war or not."

Green Chosen A. F. L. Chief For 17th Term

Pledges to Work For Labor Peace, Aid Defense Plans

By Arthur F. Degreve
United Press Staff Writer

New Orleans, Nov. 28.—William Green, elected for a seventeenth term as president of the American Federation of Labor, tonight pledged to work during the coming year for labor peace and mobilization of national support for the defense program.

Seattle, Wash., won over San Francisco by a vote of 25,624 to 8,230 for the 1941 convention.

All of the 13 A. F. L. vice presidents and Secretary-Treasurer George Meany were reelected without opposition. The only sign of discord was over the vote on George E. Browne, head of the theater stage employes and motion picture operators, who had been criticized editorially because he placed Willie Bioff, convicted panderer, and others with criminal records, in important posts in his union.

When the motion came to make Browne's reelection unanimous, Charles Zimmerman, a delegate of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which led the fight for a strong antiracketeering resolution, asked that the I. G. L. W. U. be recorded as abstaining from voting.

As a member of the executive council, Browne would be called upon by the terms of a resolution adopted by the convention to aid in using the groups' influence to compel unions to purge their houses of racketeers and gangsters, if the union failed to act voluntarily.

Lewis Assailed

Besides Browne, the vice presidents reelected were William L. Hutcheson, T. A. Rickert, Matthew Woll, Joseph Weber, G. M. Bugniazet, George M. Harrison, Daniel Tobin, Harry Bates, Edward Gainor, W. D. Mahon, Felix Knight, Edward Flore, Harvey Brown and W. C. Birthright.

The day's session found John L. Lewis, former president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, under caustic attack. Green, in warning that the time would come when no man would be able to defy public opinion, said:

"I will, with all charity, devote all my efforts toward bringing about peace in the labor movement during the coming year. And I will do all in my power to mobilize support behind the Government's preparedness program. It must be so successful that no marauder ever shall be allowed to set foot on American soil."

Green said he was not a "defeatist," but he was pessimistic over the prospects of restoration of labor unity.

"I believe there exists in the hearts of labor—the men who work in the mines, the mills and the factories—a deep, consuming desire for peace," he declared.

Chosen by Acclamation

"I do not believe that these hopes can be dissipated or otherwise set aside."

Green was selected by acclamation. His name was placed in nomination by Frank Duffy, silver-haired vice president of the carpenters and joiners, who referred repeatedly to Green as "chum and pal." Duffy brought laughter from the delegates when he read from speeches which Lewis made when he nominated Green at past conventions.

They were filled with such phrases as "valiant fighter," "great statesman," and other praise. At the recent C. I. O. convention in Atlantic City, N. J., where he stepped down from the presidency, Lewis ridiculed Green.

Max Zaritsky, head of the United Hatters, blasted away at Lewis in seconding Green's nomination.

Earlier, David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, charged from the convention floor that Lewis "gambled with the lives and happiness of millions of workers" when he allegedly blocked peace negotiations in the past.

Dubinsky's Charges

Commenting on Lewis' statement at the C. I. O. convention that the organization was not strong enough to negotiate for peace with the A. F. L., Dubinsky said:

"The situation was the same when the C. I. O. was stronger than it is today. Peace was blocked because peace was not desired. I don't believe that even today, when the C. I. O. is weaker, that peace cannot be made."

Dubinsky and Zaritsky were associated with Lewis in the rival movement before the C. I. O. was established as a permanent organization. Dubinsky was suspended by the A. F. L. executive council for joining the Committee for Industrial Organizations, out of which the C. I. O. was evolved in its present form.

Dubinsky returned to the A. F. L. last May after refusing to take part in a split movement, when it was being made permanent.

Conflict Looms On Labor Policy

tees and man-to-man negotiations varying with each new labor problem, it was learned.

Authorities, who would not allow the use of their names, pointed to the record of the Labor Division of the National Defense Commission, and told The Post that the Administration favors continued use of the present informal policy to settle strikes and other labor troubles.

It was pointed out that the recently settled 12-day strike at the Vultee Aircraft Co., Downey, Calif., was the longest that has been experienced since the start of the emergency defense program.

Calls for Committees

It was settled within 24 hours after Labor Department Conciliator John R. Steelman arrived in Downey.

The new "tailor-made" policy, now being drafted, calls for industry-labor committees in a few of the newer industries that do not have highly centralized production centers.

Already such a committee has been created for the shipbuilding industry and one will soon be set up for the aircraft industry.

Announcement of these new committees, made yesterday, said that the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee would be composed of representatives of organized labor, the shipbuilding industry, the Navy and the Maritime Commission. Morris L. Cooke, industrial engineering consultant of the Labor Division, was named chairman.

A similar committee will be set up shortly for the aircraft industry.

In the larger, mass production industries the Administration prefers to continue to rely on informal negotiations with the heads of the corporations concerned, it was learned.

Thus, Sidney Hillman, Defense Commissioner for Labor, has had several conversations with Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, in an attempt to bring about compliance with the National Labor Relations Act.

Hillman has announced that he will hold similar talks soon with Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., for the same purpose.

Both Bethlehem Steel and Ford have been cited by the Labor Board for noncompliance.

The more stringent strike-curbing proposals that have been made in Congress, such as compulsory arbitration or flat prohibition of strikes in defense industries, are not favored at the White House or Defense Commission, it was learned.

Outlines of the Administration labor policy may be announced December 6, when the Labor Advisory Committee is scheduled to meet with Commissioner Hillman.

Life Sentence in Sabotage

Representative Smith's bill to prevent tieups in work on national defense contracts, would, it was pointed out, affect all but a very few industries.

The bill prescribes imprisonment up to life for sabotage.

In cases where 30 days notice of a strike or lockout is given, the measure would require the Secretary of Labor to offer mediation and if that were unsuccessful to offer arbitration.

Arbitration would not be compulsory, but if either party refused, the Secretary of Labor would have to report that fact and other facts to the President who would be required to publicize such reports with his comments.

Grassi to Talk at 'Y'

"The New Pan Americanism" will be discussed by A. Hugo Grassi, secretary, Continental Committee of the Y. M. C. A. for South America, at 12:30 p. m. today before the Washington Round Table weekly luncheon meeting in the Press Club Building.

McKay Blames 'Revenge' Plot For Indictment

G. O. P. Committeeman Sees Political Enemies Behind Fraud Charge

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 28.—Frank D. McKay, Republican National committeeman charged with mail fraud by a special Federal grand jury, said here today that the indictments "are the outcome of a conspiracy for political revenge, engineered by certain forces whom I helped defeat in an election."

In a formal statement following his arraignment, McKay said, "I shall prove myself innocent."

Four years of investigation preceded the indictments, the statement said. It continued: "During that period my personal and business affairs have been ruthlessly and thoroughly examined. Business records have been seized; business associates have been subjected to inquisition; even members of my family have been threatened." He did not elaborate this statement.

Defrauding Attempt Charged

The third indictment naming the former State treasurer was returned today.

The new true bill charged an attempt to defraud the city of Grand Rapids of approximately $300,000 by manipulating the bidding on a $2,225,000 municipal bond issue in 1938. The bond issue financed a pipe line which now serves the city with water from Lake Michigan.

Indicted with McKay were Stranahan, Harris & Co., Toledo bond house which financed the project, and two of the firm's agents, Robert S. Mikesell and Stuart P. Blasier.

Accused of $500,000 Shakedown

Yesterday's indictments charged that McKay, 56-year-old Grand Rapids, Mich., businessman, took part in a $500,000 "shakedown" of liquor interests and defrauded Edsel Ford of $9,978.

McKay was arrested this afternoon on all three indictments, stood mute and was released under $5,000 bond. Trial date on the first indictment was set for January 21.

Eight of 14 men named with McKay in yesterday's indictments also were arraigned. They stood mute and were released on $2,000 bond each.

4th Disease Case Spurs Richmond Drive on Rats

Richmond, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—A fourth case of endemic typhus fever was reported here as the city prepared to confer today with U. S. Public Health Service specialists as to a rat-killing campaign.

Dr. W. A. Browne, city epidemologist said clinical symptoms—more accurate in endemic typhus than laboratory tests—had proved diagnosis in the fourth case reported in Richmond and Henrico County since last October.

Since the disease is laid to fleas which move from rats to humans, Richmond has launched its first rat-killing campaign in 21 years.

Specialists from Washington were expected to confer with State and city health officials on methods of conducting the campaign.

2 U. S. Agencies Hit Walter-Logan Bill

House Action Due Monday With Final Passage—and Veto—Forecast; Backers Assail Plan as Attack on New Deal

While protests against the measure came from two Government departments, the Walter-Logan bill yesterday was scheduled for House action on Monday—with probabilities pointing to final passage and ultimate Presidential veto.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes asserted that the bill was intended to "hamstring the New Deal," and Martin G. White, solicitor of the Agriculture Department, declared it might prove "burdensome to the highest degree."

In the House, an effort to obtain unanimous approval of the Senate amendments to the bill was thwarted by Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, but Chairman Sumners of the Judiciary Committee gave formal notice that he would call up the measure again on Monday.

Members Recalled

Representative Cochran warned he would insist that a quorum of the House be present, and Representative Sumners countered that move with the assertion that he would use every means to prevent adjournment until the bill has been disposed of.

The upshot of these maneuvers is that members of the House who only recently left Washington in the belief there would be no further business this session will be required to return post-haste to the Capital. Telegrams have already gone out to bring them back. If enough members do not come voluntarily, there looms the possibility that the sergeant at arms might have to round them up.

On the House floor, Representative Cochran replied to protests against a quorum call with the assertion that "the welfare of the American people should be taken into consideration, rather than the convenience of members of the House."

The Walter-Logan bill, which would broaden the scope of judicial review of the rulings of independent administrative agencies of the Government, was "born in the mind of an enemy of this Administration." This "enemy," said Cochran, is O. R. McGuire, formerly counsel to the Comptroller General of the United States.

Defended by Walter

"A scheme of propaganda seldom equaled" has been devised to promote the Walter-Logan Bill, Cochran charged. He urged that Congress defer action until a report has been received from the Attorney General's committee on administrative procedure.

On the other hand, Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, House sponsor of the measure, declared it was necessary to restrain "a powerful bureaucracy, which, if it is not curbed, will destroy this democracy."

Representative Walter asserted that the Attorney General's committee, which is headed by former Undersecretary of the Treasury Dean Acheson, "has had only one meeting." The "brains" of the committee, Walter said, is "Walter Gellhorn, a young professor from Columbia University."

Retorting that his colleagues "does not know what he's talking about," Representative Cochran declared that the Attorney General's committee has had numerous meetings, and also that Gellhorn is one of the "outstanding" professor at Columbia.

Davies Plans Big but Simple Inauguration

Committee to Fix Sum to Be Raised Locally on Monday

An inauguration program "commensurate with the occasion" was promised last night by Joseph E. Davies, chairman of arrangements, following a preliminary conference at the District Building.

"It is going to be big but simple," said Davies, after discussing preliminary plans with Commissioners J. Russell Young and David McCoach, jr., and local businessmen.

Earlier in the day Davies was a luncheon guest at the Capitol of Col. Edwin A. Halsey, Secretary of the Senate, where they and Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, member of the joint Congressional committee on the inaugural, went over tentative arrangements.

The group which met at the District Building is scheduled to assemble again at 4:30 p. m. Monday to set a definite sum of money to be raised by local contributors. Davies is expected to name his subcommittee chairmen next week.

Present at the meeting, besides those already named, were Robert V. Fleming, Corcoran Thom, James E. Colliflower, Norman W. Baxter, Edgar Morris, Harrison Brand, jr., Charles H. Tompkins, William Press, I. J. Roberts, James A. Counciller, Malcolm S. McConihe, Joseph T. Tumulty, Lloyd B. Wilson, Ross Haworth, Geoffrey M. Thornett, Stanley P. Richardson and Alfons Landa.

Headquarters for the inaugural committee will be in the District Building.

Emphasis Is Wrong, He Says

Deploring the emphasis on giving in the campaign rather than upon sacrifice, Msgr. Sheen said that only in sacrifice can destitution be comprehended.

"We can only claim to have done our part," he said, "in proportion to our sacrifice." He praised the volunteer workers for their willingness "to sacrifice time, effort and self-respect."

"To beg for the poor," he added, "is to pray."

The greatest obligation to give, Msgr. Sheen emphasized, rests upon the rich who are today upon the defensive for their failure in the stewardship of wealth.

Denounces "Intellectuals"

He remarked, however, that the "little leaders" of the so-called popular front had no right to condemn the rich.

"Have not these so-called leaders failed the poor whom they undertook to lead?" he asked.

Seated at the head table were Paul D. Sleeper, Alvin T. Barber, Donald Preston, A. G. Neal, Herbert L. Willett, jr., Alvin W. Hall, Dr. C. G. Abbot, Dr. Winfred Overhoser, Coleman Jennings, Col. Thomas J. Fraliey, Fred W. Johnson, Miss Jean Coman, A. E. Demaray, Miss Marie E. Schutt, Miss Ethel Johnson, Fred D. Bradford and Jonas W. Graber. Msgr. Lawrence J. Davies Purchases Parmelee Estate; Will Reside Here

Joseph E. Davies, chairman of the 1941 inauguration arrangements committee and wealthy corporation lawyer, was announced yesterday as the purchaser of the Parmelee estate.

Last night he confirmed the statement by Walker & Dunlop, Inc., realtors, that he had acquired the 20-acre property and added that he intends ultimately to make the house his Washington residence. At present Davies is leasing a home at 1700 Foxhall Road Northwest.

Assessed valuation of the newly acquired property, which belonged to the late Mrs. James Parmelee, is $406,700. It is situated at Klingle Road and Macomb Street Northwest.

Davies, formerly Ambassador to Russia and, later, to Belgium, recently resigned his executive post in the State Department to take charge of arrangements for the third inauguration of President Roosevelt.

U. S. May Adopt Financing Plan

Morgenthau Reveals Working Balance Of Treasury Is Now Less Than $1,000,000,000; Conferences Scheduled

With the Treasury's working balance at less than $1,000,000,000, Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, indicated at his press conference yesterday that the Government may announce a financing program before December 15 to replenish its coffers for defense expenditures.

The Secretary has followed the policy for a number of years of keeping the Treasury's balance at the "comfortable" level of $1,000,000,000 or over. On Wednesday the Treasury asked the Federal Reserve Banks to recall $107,200,000 of Government funds because the balance "is running low."

The matter was taken up at the Secretary's press conference yesterday.

"You mean, Mr. Secretary, you aren't satisfied with the bond market, so you have to——" and before his questioner completed his query the Secretary emphatically replied:

"No, no, it is just that this money has been borrowed and it is there, and we call on the banks now to give us the money which was borrowed some time ago. I don't know how long ago, but we have left it there and now we need it."

Morgenthau revealed that Treasury experts will meet with the Federal Reserve Board executive committee of the open market committee next week to decide on a financing program. He said such a program may entail any of three operations.

"We might ask for new money," he said, "we might refund these notes coming due on the fifteenth of March, and we might refund the bonds that were called." The March 15, 1941, issue consists of $677,000,000 of 1½ per cent notes. Recently the Treasury called $545,000,000 of 3¾ per cent bonds, also payable March 15.

No difficulties are foreseen in undertaking any of these financing operations. It is recalled that the Treasury successfully carried on its fiscal operations in the spring and summer of 1940 despite the dark outlook of the conditions in Europe.

Guesses of the amount of new money that the Treasury may seek run between $500,000,000 and $700,000,000. The securities will be issued under the $4,000,000,000 allocation made by Congress on June 25. Through this approval the debt limit was raised to $49,000,000,000, but the $4,000,000,000 of new securities may not exceed in maturity five years.

"Would the new money be under a defense bond issue?" the Secretary was asked.

"I am not prepared to answer that," he replied. "We have just started to talk about it. We will definitely do something in the forepart of December."

The Secretary was also asked whether he was "completely satisfied with reception" of his announcement recently that the Federal debt limit may have to be raised to between $60,000,000,000 and $65,000,000,000.

"Using the word 'generally,' yes, with one exception," he countered. "They seemed to either overlook or not place the same emphasis that I did on my remarks that now that President Roosevelt will be here for four years, we would not have inflation."

Wall Street's 'Boy Wonder' Kills Self

on the market as he did to his own speculations.

Last spring he published a book outlining his "system" for playing the stock market.

Called "the greatest speculator of this century," Livermore always maintained that his flair for playing the stock market was based on his flair for mathematics.

"I completed three years of math in school in one year—and that was my greatest foundation," he used to say.

At the age of 14, he began his career as an office boy posting changing prices on a quotations board in a brokerage office. Shortly thereafter, he made his first investment of $5 to test a system he had worked out at home after working hours.

Ultimately he pyramided his winnings to $10,000,000 only to lose it all on a "bad guess."

Found Pleasure in Game

From that time to this, Livermore's "system" cost him at least three fortunes, but he always told his friends he was much more interested in the pleasure of speculation than he was in money itself.

By the time he was 20, Livermore had managed to put $10,000 in the bank and with this as a nucleus he started the dizzy procession of stock market deals that finally won him the title of "Boy Plunger" on Wall Street.

At the age of 38, when most men were just beginning to get in their stride, Livermore had already made and lost a tremendous fortune and found himself insolvent with debts of more than $2,500,000.

Two years later, he paid off every creditor and had made new paper profits of millions. His spectacular coups were sources of concern to the national administrations of three Presidents.

After the organization of the Securities Exchange Commission, and its strict rules limiting speculation on the stock market, Livermore retired completely from dealing in stocks and turned to commodities.

In 1933, his disappearance for more than 24 hours caused a Nation-wide kidnap scare, but Livermore returned home, pale and wan, to explain that financial difficulties had so upset him he had sustained a temporary loss of memory.

He is survived by his wife and a son, Jesse, jr.

Police said the memorandum, written by Livermore this afternoon, took up eight pages of the notebook and was addressed to "My Dear Nina," his third wife's pet name. It was signed "Laurie," his own nickname. When Mrs. Livermore was notified at their apartment of the suicide, she collapsed.

Hibernians Indorse Eire Neutrality

The action of Prime Minister De Valera in refusing to turn over Eire ports to Great Britain as defense safeguards was indorsed at the last meeting of Commodore John Barry Division, Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Eire, it was contended, is a neutral nation and there is no "patriotic reason" why the ports should be turned over to England. The members further believed that no good which would justify the sacrifice would accrue to England; that Ireland could and would be annihilated by the Nazis and England could not prevent the holocaust.

Ramspeck Plan May Omit HOLC, PWA

Units Not Permanent, Hence May Not Be Put Under Civil Service

By Edward Ryan

A new hitch in suggested plans for speedy extension of the Ramspeck bill's benefits to employes of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the Public Works Administration has been discovered by civil service officials, it was learned yesterday.

Official study of how the HOLC and PWA will be affected by the Ramspeck bill is just getting started. At stake in this study are the future Government job chances of some 3,300 employes of the two agencies, those who will be out of their present jobs within the next few months under the current liquidation programs of their organizations.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, said Tuesday, after the President had signed his bill into law, that he believed its first benefits should go to the HOLC and PWA and their employes. Under the bill these employes are theoretically eligible for the civil service status that would give them an improved chance of landing other Government jobs after they lose their present ones.

Hitch in Plans

And the hitch, unearthed yesterday, is this:

Both the Ramspeck bill and the precedents set under President Roosevelt's earlier executive orders have emphasized the job, not the jobholder, in extending the classified civil service. One test of whether a job should be brought into the classified system has been that it would be a permanent position.

This practice hits the problem of the HOLC and PWA. By the precedents, the fact that the 3,300 jobs are not permanent would block the chances of the jobholders to get civil service status.

Likely to work against the precedent, however, is Ramspeck's interest in seeing the employes given their status, plus the number of employes involved.

Bill Stresses Job

The Ramspeck bill emphasizes the jobs, against the jobholders, in the method it outlines for extending the "merit system."

First move, in any extension program under the bill, is for the President by executive order to bring whatever nonmerit Government positions he decides upon under the civil service rules. That action clinches the positions, does nothing about giving the people in the positions a civil service status.

They obtain their status in two steps—first, the head of their agency certifies to the Civil Service Commission that they have put in six months of satisfactory service; second, the employes after this certification must pass noncompetitive civil servcie exams. Passing the exams gives them the right to stay in their jobs, also gives them formal civil service status; failure means they have to be fired within six months.

Personnel Secondary

To the Government's top personnel managers, the business of placing the jobs in the merit system is seen as the most important step, giving the present jobholders first chance to hold on to their positions through the noncompetitive exam is seen as important, too, but secondary.

This policy has been used in extending civil service classification to about 23,000 Federal positions under an executive order issued by President Roosevelt in June, 1938. The process followed under this order has been similar to that required by the Ramspeck bill. In carrying out the order, the Civil Service Commission has turned down all recommendations for placing nonpermanent jobs under the merit classification.

How this experience will be applied to the HOLC and PWA is still undecided, and the problem, it was reported, may eventually be tossed up to the President.

Meanwhile, the Civil Service Commission was preparing yesterday to canvass the heads of all Government agencies for an up-to-date report on what positions are in line to be brought into the classified civil service under the Ramspeck bill. This report will be one starting point for later executive orders to put into effect the provisions of the bill.

Ringside Table

"McNAMARA'S BAND." At last! A plumb new genre of rhythm! In "McNamara's Band" Sidney and Maurice Kafka have brought a completely novel type of dance music to the Mayflower Lounge. The new tune is a direct importation from Ireland with not even a stop-over in New York. It's in 6-8 time, meaning that's it's bright, aggressive and with that martial something. The first time it was played and sung by Dick Koons' Glee Club, one Mayflower patron was that inspired he got out on the floor and did a solo jig . . . Pat Ryan, lovely redhead who used to sing in the Lounge, visited there the other eve, says she planning to make her home in Washington.

"Mayor" Ciro's fall opening of his merry Ciro's Village is the big party for tonight. Better go early. And stay late. And be sure to get your quota of birthday cake for it's the "Mayor's" birthday, too. All aboard for the Isle of Capri!

MAYFAIR'S. "MOUSEY" GARNER is saying a million good-bys before Paul Kain's new crew opens in Mayfair on Monday. But "Mousey's" going to be on hand at Paul's opening to wish him all the luck and success in the world. All of you folks who've enjoyed "Mousey" and his crew will be glad to know that they have fine prospects, will soon open in the Hotel Chitterton, Columbus, Ohio, and will probably be the star attraction in "Slapsie Maxie" Rosenbloom's new Miami spot later in the season. Dick Hakins, who was a Ted Healy stooge along with "Mousey," will join the unit.

FOOD OF THE FUNNIEST. Daring diners are the Izaak Walton League members who hold weekly parties in the Neptune Room. Their menus this season have included mountain lion (which they claim tastes like the finest veal), venison and other game, as well as all kinds of sea food. They're looking forward to rattlesnake and prairie dog dinners, have already arranged for prime fresh rattlesnakes to be served a la Newburg. Whooh!

"100-MILE GALE." That's the only way to describe Alan Gale, the new hurricane of an emcee at Paul Young's Romany Room. Or we might call him "Young Cyclone." He keeps his hearers on pins and needles for fear they're going to miss his fast repartee. (Some of those Gale jokes have to be cracked at lightning speed, believe us.) He plays Romeo to Rae Marsh's Juliet, sings "Leon, the Peon" and other uncanny ballads, tops it off with a soap-box speech a la Russky that would call for a firing squad in Moscow.

Eleanor Tennis, Troika's new dancing luminary, is lovely as a butterfly. But no wonder. Mrs. Helen Hamilton visited every top-flight night spot in New York before selecting this floating queen of the ballet.

FACES IN THE BEST PLACES. Cosmos Room. The one 'n only Bert Lahr with Mrs. Lahr who's as pretty as any of the beauties in "Du Barry Was a Lady." Stylist Helen Vogt dancing with Jerry O'Donovan, vice president of Pennsylvania Central Airlines. Publicist Ted Wingo with a piquant blonde . . . Lounge Riviera. Architect "Doggy" Waggaman with a group of the "kerridge trade" . . . Metronome Room. Lots of twosomes drifting in from the Wardman dances of the Notre Dame Academy Alumnae, the Kappa Delta Phi Sorority and the U. S. Maritime Commission . . . Shoreham Blue Room. Juan J. Tomadelli, premier man-about-town, getting a great kick out of Van Kirk's ribbing of light operatic numbers, later telling us about the sensayshonal revolving stage to be installed in Earl Carroll's new Washington spot . . . Burt's Trans-Lux. Radio Announcer Raymond Michael chatting with Beverly Stull. They're old friends from days in Fairmont, W. Va., when Bert clerked at a hotel where Beverly played one of her first engagements . . . Anchor Room. That handsome elderly gentleman you'll see on the sidelines tomorrow eve will be Johnny George, of Baltimore, father of singer Eileen George. He never misses a Sattiday night of listening to his little girl's singing in Anchor.

DARE AND CARSON, who'll entertain at Ciro's fall opening tonight

NIGHTINGALE CAREERS. Rodd Raffell, Nightingale maestro, is now on his second band. He gave up his first band a couple of years ago to go into radio. But a natural bandsman can't be kept off a bandstand . . . Mel Hologer, Nightingale's first sax, was a "child prodigy musician" a few years ago. He's still prodigious.

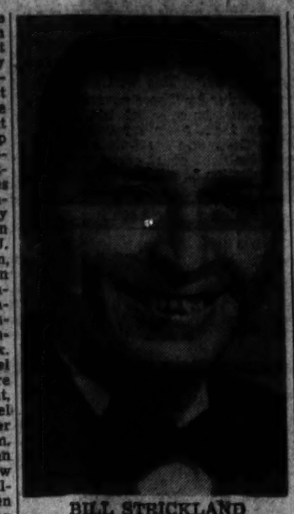
RHYTHMS MODERN AND CLASSIC. Milton Davis, leader of the Rainbow Room Band, says that "There I Go," new BMI tune, is due for the top of the hit list . . . Hi Hat's Carmela Lazari is swinging "Il Bacio" with such luscious results that you wonder why it wasn't done long ago . . . Burrus Williams, maestro of La Salle Versailles, has gotten the original lyrics of "Don't Let It Get You Down" from "Hold Onto Your Hats." They're different from the commercial arrangements, a little blue but verra funny . . . The Heintze Brothers and June Marlow, of the New Bavarian, are doing themselves proud with Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody, also the liting "Come Back to Sorrento."

The beauteous Statler Twins dancing at Del Rio, played with



BILL STRICKLAND now celebrating his seventh anniversary as Lotus' maestro

Carmen Miranda in Rio de Janeiro where they also worked in Miranda's first picture, a Brazilian product that paved her way to Hollywood.

CHARM OF CAPRICE. Glamorous is the word for Cafe Caprice. It's all in Venetian claret and gold mirrors with a bijou dance floor of green plastic centered with a green star. The Bert Stevens music is alluring and vivid, contrasts lively and romantic numbers. And you'll never find a more cordial host than Bob Korn. Better put Caprice on your "must" list.

DAREDEVILING AND HULA STEPPING are making the Casino Royal very gay. The Lindsay Girls are all done up in silver grass skirts, leis and gardenias. Rochee and Lee skip rope and wield lariats while balancing on huge balls.

WEEK-END TREATS IN FOOD. The sirloin steaks at the Silver Fox are tender as spring chickens . . . And the spring chickens out at Peter Fritz' Log Cabin taste as though they'd been reared on Grade A milk . . . One of the finest sandwiche combos you'll find is the corned beef and chicken served at Dick's Grill . . . The Harrington Tavern pop priced dinners are delicious to the palate, easy on the wallet.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wabbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store. Adv.

Mrs. Blatt to Get Prison Term In House Thefts

Blonde Pleads Guilty To Housebreaking In Rockville Court

Mrs. Mary Virginia Blatt, 31, of Bethesda, Md., will serve time in the Maryland House of Correction on charges of breaking into several model homes and "storing" furnishings from them in her fashionable home on Bradley Boulevard, it was indicated at her trial yesterday.

After Mrs. Blatt had pleaded guilty to housebreaking counts in four indictments yesterday in Circuit Court at Rockville, Judge Charles W. Woodward announced he wanted to think the case over a little longer, but he told defense counsel flatly they might as well forget their plea for a suspended sentence.

"Just in case you gentlemen have any false hopes, I want to say there will be no suspended sentence," the jurist remarked. "I want to think the case over, but she will be sentenced to the House of Correction tomorrow or possibly a little later."

Mrs. Blatt, a striking blonde, is the wife of Robert C. Blatt, electrical engineer in the District's architect's office. She and a friend, Johnny Jones, former big league pitcher, were linked to a series of raids on model homes in Bethesda, Chevy Chase and the District last June.

Dressed becomingly in black, she sat unmoved through most of the proceedings. But she lost her composure when called to take the stand and tell about "this man named Johnny Jones." Speaking hardly above a whisper, she explained to Judge Woodward that Jones had insisted on seeing her at her home despite her efforts to keep him away.

"It was very embarrasing," she said.

Defense counsel attempted to convince the court that Mrs. Blatt "became involved in such an unfortunate situation because she was mortally afraid of Jones."

But to this contention, Judge Woodward replied: "You don't expect me to believe a thing like that, do you?"

In addition to the thefts from the model homes, Mrs. Blatt also pleaded guilty to a housebreaking charge involving the theft of $1,000 in jewelry from the home of a friend, Mrs. Nellie Sponseller, of 218 Raymond Street, Chevy Chase.

According to testimony, Jones took the jewelry one night while Mrs. Sponseller was visiting Mrs. Blatt at her home.

Mrs. Blatt was remanded to the Rockville jail to await sentence. Also confined in the jail is Jones, who pleaded to similar housebreaking charges October 28. Both of them also pleaded guilty to one charge of housebreaking in the District when they were arraigned in the United States District Court. They received suspended sentences and were turned over to the Maryland authorities.

Woman Asserts Paul Carter Jilted Her After 15 Years

Rose Paulson, Racine, Wis., told the District Court in a suit filed yesterday that Paul O. Carter, wealthy Interstate Commerce Commission examiner, kept her waiting 15 years to be led to the altar and then jilted her.

She asked for $100,000 damages in a complaint filed by Attorneys Nicholas J. Chiaseione, of Washington and Jacob M. Weisman, of Racine.

Miss Paulson's complaint said that it was in October, 1922, that she accepted Carter's proposal of marriage and began waiting for the date to be fixed. Her waiting lasted, the complaint said, until December, 1937, when Carter told her the marriage was off.

Carter, meanwhile, was twice a husband in Washington. Soon after his divorce from Mrs. Marie Carter, whom he married in 1910, he was married in 1926 to Mrs. Marion L. Carter. He has one son by each union.

Carter has been with the I. C. C. 20 years. He inherited extensive grain and realty interests from his father, who was a prominent Baltimore business man.

Carter's home here is 4215 Thirty-eighth Street Northwest. He said yesterday that he did not wish to comment until he consulted counsel.

Montgomery Unit Favors Increased Health Budget

The Montgomery County Medical Society has approved a proposal to seek a substantial increase in the budget appropriations for the county health department, Dr. V. L. Ellicott, health officer, announced yesterday.

The proposal asks for an appropriation equivalent to $1.25 per capita as compared to the present per capita appropriation of 63 cents. A portion of the proposed increase in the health budget would be used to double the present nursing staff of eight.

Treasure Island May Become Naval Base, Rossi Discloses

San Francisco Mayor Comes Here to Submit Proposal to Ickes

San Francisco's Treasure Island, dredged from the bay to provide a site for the Pacific Golden Gate International Exposition, may become a United States naval base and the location of a new municipal airport.

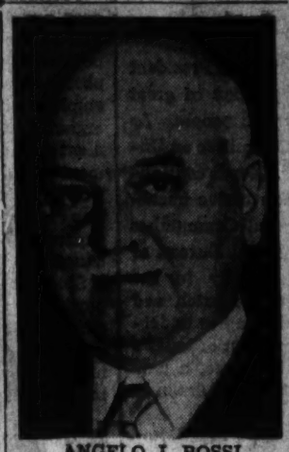
So said Mayor Angelo J. Rossi of the Golden Gate city yesterday in his suite at the Mayflower Hotel. With two assistants, he is in Washington awaiting a decision from Secretary Ickes on a proposal which may open the way for pulling an old thorn out of the city's side—the controversial disposition of the Hetch Hetchy project's power.

Rear Admiral Ben Moreell, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Navy Department, has stated that the department is willing to open negotiations for use of the island as a base, Mayor Rossi explained.

New Airport Needed

"At the same time it is hoped we can go to work on a new municipal airport at the opposite end of the island from the proposed base," he said. "We've needed a new airport for a long time."

Mayor Rossi appears to have moved his city hall offices across the country to the hotel suite. Telephones ring, messengers come and go and the rooms have none of the proverbial appearance of a vacationing mayor's quarters.



ANGELO J. ROSSI

The Hetch Hetchy peace plan now being studied by the Interior Department would put an end to many years of strife and court battles, Mayor Rossi said.

Since July 1, 1925, San Francisco County and city have been delivering almost the entire output of the Mocassin plant in the Hetch Hetchy project to the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. The project is located chiefly within the Yosemite National Park and the Stanislaus National Forest.

Would Mean Tax Increase

Last year the Supreme Court upheld the decisions of lower courts that the transfer was illegal under the Raker Act of 1913, which prohibited San Francisco from selling or letting the water rights of electric energy to any corporation or individual except a municipality, municipal water district or irrigation district.

"The city received more than $2,000,000 from power last year," the Mayor explained. "If this source of revenue is taken away, the city is threatened with tax increases."

Under the new proposal, San Francisco will be allowed to lease the agency of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and continue the sale of power. Mayor Rossi said a decision is expected from the Interior Department today.

Cudahy Resigns As Ambassador To Belgium

John A. Cudahy, the diplomat who gave this Government its first news of the German invasion of the Low Countries last May, tendered his resignation to President Roosevelt yesterday as Ambassador to Belgium and Minister to Luxembourg and said the President was accepting it, to take effect immediately.

Cudahy made the announcement on leaving the White House. He said he gave the President his resignation orally and would follow it up today with a formal written notice.

Cudahy said he intended to devote his time to writing, particularly a novel about Poland, where he served as Ambassador from 1933 to 1937, when he became Minister to the Irish Free State.

He took over the Belgian post January 15, 1940, and remained there for two months after the German occupation. He left July 18, when the Germans ordered diplomatic representatives out of the country.

Before Cudahy left Europe the State Department reprimanded him for an unauthorized interview in London in which he allegedly praised the discipline of the German soldiers and upheld the role played by King Leopold of Belgium in surrendering to Germany.

He charged, on his arrival here, that London correspondents had misquoted him, and Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, after conferring with him, said the incident was closed.

Since then he has written several articles defending King Leopold's capitulation to the Germans. He also took part in the recent Presidential campaign.

Cudahy gained diplomatic recognition for the speed with which he informed the State Department of quick changes on the European front during the invasion of the Low Countries that began May 10.

State Department aides say Cudahy phoned them before the start of the invasion to say that "this is the night." Within a few hours the invasion holocaust had begun.

Scion of the wealthy packing family, Cudahy said he plans to go to Milwaukee tomorrow to begin his novel which, he said, would discuss "conspiracies in Poland."

U. S. Is Perfecting Plane Torpedo To Run in Circle

By International News Service

The United States Navy is secretly perfecting an airplane torpedo, which may prove to be the deadliest weapon in naval warfare, officials revealed yesterday.

The new torpedo's chief advantage over the earlier aerial torpedos will be a secret device which will allow the missile to be fired into the target regardless of the direction the plane may be traveling, it was learned.

Another feature of the new weapon will be a delicate timing apparatus which will set the explosive swinging in a circle after it has traveled a set distance. If such a torpedo should be fired into a large mass of warships the chances are thus considerably greater that it will find a target before its force is spent.

The authoritative Army and Navy Journal pointed out that aerial torpedoes were credited with the smashing British victory over Italian naval units at Taranto.

"To a limited extent the bombing plane has been eclipsed by the torpedo plane," the service organ declared.

Blood In Bucharest

It is indicative of our tragic times that the "purge" of 65 or more Rumanian generals and politicians has aroused only the barest ripple of horror here. Violence and terror are the commonplaces of this twentieth century. Indeed, the chief interest in the Rumanian assassinations lies in determining whether they represent, as some dispatches indicate, merely the vengeance of the Iron Guard for the earlier purge of Codreanu and his companions, or whether this is one of those "incidents" that presage events of profound political and military consequence.

Anyhow, it is now a little more than 22 years since that day when Comrade Felix Dzerzhinski in Moscow deliberately gave the order for the monstrous "blood-tax" upon the bourgeoisie. In compliance with this order throughout all the towns and villages of Russia a prescribed number of priests, landholders and "intellectuals" were shot without mercy, without trial, and without any other pretext than that a young student named Dora Kaplan had made an attempt upon the life of Lenin.

Nevertheless, Dzerzhinski's blood-tax and similar activities of the Cheka succeeded in consolidating the Bolshevist supremacy. Since then it has been imitated in most of the European countries that have come under one or the other of the two great world revolutions. Wholesale murder has become, as it was in the Roman world in the time of Marius and Sulla, an ordinary implement of political power. It is a state of affairs in which government itself becomes merely systemized criminality.

Even the farcical pretenses of legality observed by Jeffries at the Shropshire assizes or by the French Revolutionary Tribunal under Fouquier-Tinville are dispensed with now. The official bravi are merely given the list of the proscribed, who are forthwith shot or imprisoned and tortured as the purpose or whim of the Chief Bravo may determine.

But the principal difference between these modern political purges and others in European history is one of degree rather than of character. Neither Marius nor Sulla, neither Marat nor Carriere, in their maddest moments could have envisaged purges of whole populations numbering millions. Yet in our own day these have been deliberately undertaken by the Bolsheviks against the people of the Ukraine, by Hitler against the German and Austrian Jews, by the Gestapo against the vanquished Poles. Judged against these examples, the terror now raging in Bucharest seems but one of the minor horrors of the age.

Labor And The Law

At its annual convention the A. F. of L. first called for "adequate disciplinary action" against officers and union members who betray their trust or cast discredit upon the labor movement. Then the delegates proceeded to denounce the Department of Justice for prosecuting certain unions under the antitrust laws. If the A. F. of L. is really anxious to rid the labor movement of racketeering, it ought to regard the Department of Justice as an ally, not an enemy. For the chief purpose of these prosecutions is to suppress illegitimate union practices that do serious injury to decent, law-abiding labor unions by arousing public distrust and suspicion.

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold has repeatedly explained that the antitrust suits brought against the building trades unions in various parts of the country are not designed to interfere with labor's right to bargain for fair wages, reasonable hours and decent working conditions. There is nothing to warrant charges that the prosecutions spring from malice toward the A. F. of L. Most of these suits have been directed against A. F. of L. unions because they dominate the building trades field. In some cases, they have compelled employers to hire unnecessary labor, prevented the introduction of improved labor-saving devices, and at times acted in collusion with manufacturers or contractors to create local building monopolies.

The Department of Justice is not playing favorites in its fight to extirpate such antisocial practices. Suits have been brought against offending employer groups as well as labor unions with a view to freeing industry from restraints that impede progress and are against the public interest. In the opinion of the Department of Justice, labor unions can lay no claim to immunity from prosecution under the antitrust laws when they engage in monopolistic practices.

Nearing Completion

Martin Dies will confer with President Roosevelt today on a question of great importance to the American people. As chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, Mr. Dies is continuing his expose of the subversive operations of Nazis, Fascists and Communists in this country. The Federal Bureau of Investigation, working quietly in the same field, is attempting to catch and convict foreign agents plotting to undermine the defense program. Out of today's conference may come, therefore, a new policy for combating the Fifth Column in America.

There is no doubt that the Dies Committee and the FBI are now working at cross purposes. As a law-enforcement agency in a field where suspects are elusive and evidence is difficult to obtain the FBI must necessarily operate under cover. Obviously it can't arrest spies and saboteurs as soon as their connections with foreign governments are revealed or their plots are discovered. Federal agents must wait for a case to develop so that secret rings working for the destruction of our Government or frustration of our preparedness efforts may be effectively put out of action. Premature publicity, as President Roosevelt noted in his telegram to Mr. Dies, may upset the most carefully laid plans of the FBI to deal with these enemies within our gates.

Some months ago the exposure of subversive groups was probably more important than the arrest and conviction of individual plotters. Many Americans were nonchalantly cooperating with disguised Nazi and Communist groups, and the public was complacent about occasional reports of boring from within. Mr. Dies has rendered the country a real service by bringing to light the work of these subversive agents and making us more conscious of the dangers arising from Fifth-Column activities. Thanks also to lessons learned from many of the invaded countries of Europe, the public is now awake to the menace of internal treason as well as open aggression.

So the pendulum has swung in the opposite direction. Efficient enforcement of the law against spies, saboteurs and agitators employed by foreign governments is now far more important than serving the public a continuous diet of sensational testimony from these sources. The situation has reached a point where action is far more important than talking. The national interest can no longer be satisfied by shooing subversive elements from one place or organization to another by blasts of adverse publicity. It is time to use more effective weapons.

These facts suggest, of course, that the Dies Committee has about reached the end of its usefulness. The task of recommending legislation for better control of Fifth-Column activities remains, but surely the committee now has sufficient information to guide it in drafting its proposals. Even if additional data should be needed, it could be quietly obtained without disrupting any of the FBI's efforts to put Fifth Columnists where they belong. The outcome of the controversy which is taking Mr. Dies to the White House might thus well be a request from the House that his committee wind up its investigation without further delay and make its final report.

Essential Trimming

The necessity of slashing non-defense expenditures in the next Federal budget has been obvious for many months. Congressional leaders have given a good deal of thought to ways and means of effecting such economies to offset the rapidly mounting outlays for national defense. President Roosevelt's announcement that budget estimates for non-military public works will be cut to the bone is significant chiefly because it puts the enormous influence of the White House behind this essential policy.

Acceptance of the principle which the President has outlined may be taken for granted. Almost everyone realizes that it is imperative to give national defense projects the right-of-way and to curtail other activities which are desirable in themselves but which the Nation cannot afford when it is spending enormous sums to guarantee its own security. The chief difficulty will arise in separating genuine defense projects from other improvements that may have a remote connection with military and naval plans.

Promoters and politicians are now finding strategic value in almost every conceivable improvement for which funds are needed. The President has laid down a sensible rule that defense means military undertakings and the production of munitions, not the building of highways and deepening of oyster beds. But many special pleaders will consider that rule inapplicable to their own pet projects. Congress will have to scrutinize every appropriation to make certain that funds spent under the heading of defense actually contribute to our national safety from hostile attack.

What effect this policy will have upon the WPA is not yet clear. Undoubtedly that organization can render some useful service in a defense program so broad as that which the United States has undertaken. In part its efforts have already been diverted to projects related to preparedness. If this work is to achieve a maximum of effectiveness, however, it should be much more closely integrated with the plans of the Army, Navy and National Defense Commission.

President Roosevelt indicates that he does not expect any substantial reduction in the WPA rolls until the 750,000 now waiting for relief jobs have been absorbed. At present, this group of unemployed is dependent upon local relief organizations or friends. If the Government assumes responsibility for employment of all this group, as present WPA workers are absorbed into defense jobs also created by Federal outlays, it will be expanding rather than contracting its benefits to the jobless.

Since defense has become such a heavy burden for the Federal Government to carry, a larger portion of relief costs should be shifted to the States, and planning for that shift could well begin with preparation of the 1942 budget.

Subsidies For Consumers

As a method of distributing surplus foods among the needy the Department of Agriculture's stamp plan has met with the approval of both consumer and business groups in the communities where it has been tested. Under the plan blue stamps are given free to relief families to buy surplus products on condition that they buy specified amounts of orange stamps to cover purchases of foods not on the surplus list. In selecting commodities for the surplus list the Federal Surplus Marketing Administration says that "primary consideration should be given to commodities whose prices are most depressed, commodities for which the plan would be most effective in increasing consumption and improving the price situation, and commodities which offer the greatest improvement in the diets of low-income consumers, cost considered."

The system is skillfully designed to provide a more abundant and varied diet for the low-income groups covered. Moreover, as purchases are made at prevailing prices through regular commercial channels, food dealers enjoy an increased volume of business. Finally, farmer-producers benefit by the expansion of markets for the fruits, vegetables, dairy products, etc., that appear on surplus lists.

Approval of the stamp plan as a method of disposing of surpluses does not, however, imply approval of proposals for extensive subsidization of low-income families by such means. That is patently the objective of the Surplus Marketing Division of the Department of Agriculture, which has just released a special report on the food stamp plan. The authors of the report emphasize the benefits to farmers and low-income families that would result from an expenditure of $400,000,000 yearly on the stamp plan. Such an outlay, they conclude, would take care of about 15,000,000 members of WPA families and families receiving some form of public aid. An additional $200,000,000 to $240,000,000 would make it possible to include employed families in urban areas having incomes under $1,000.

Up to July 1 the plan had been limited to families in receipt of relief, except for one experiment with low-income-employed families in an Oklahoma town. But that single exception indicates the line along which the Department of Agriculture might attempt to expand the stamp program if funds for the purpose were available.

Any expansion of the stamp plan, however, at the present time, for any purpose, would be utterly indefensible. In the first place, there is less need for this form of aid, with employment rapidly rising, wages increasing, and domestic demand for farm products improving. Secondly, the expenditure of billions for defense makes it essential to reduce rather than increase outlays for non-defense purposes. Thirdly, apart from the cost of subsidizing millions of consumers, serious objections to such proposals may be raised on other grounds. For the stamp plan in the expanded form envisaged by the Department of Agriculture would foist upon the country a system of food distribution regulated in accordance with bureaucratic views of individual needs. Instead of a system of free enterprise, in which a man's ability to buy is determined by his earnings, we should have a system of consumer subsidization paid for by Federal taxpayers and controlled by the Department of Agriculture.

George Rebels

In accord with practice which is fast becoming an established community custom, it has become necessary to extend the Community Chest drive for a week. This year the disparity between pledges and quota is even greater than it was last year. With their task only 90 per cent complete, solicitors must renew their pleas to tardy givers.

Since previous Chest campaigns have been extended, some Washingtonians probably waited this year to see whether the quota could be filled without their aid. This spirit of "Let George do it" has left the Chest in a serious predicament, for George, whoever he is, has rebelled. It is now time for the hesitant to come forward and repair what a prominent member of the bar this week called "shameful neglect" of the city's underprivileged.

Only A Screen?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What a sad commentary upon our vaunted "American way" of life when the artists of America only receive recognition and wages after a great fanfare on the part of the Government and press to call public attention to the fact that artists must also eat. Where is our great cultural heritage of the past—the culture that produced those pioneer handicrafts and art so prized by collectors and museums of Americana? Have we become so wedded to the dollar that we no longer have time to appreciate and support the individual and collective creations of our craftsmen.

Strange, but those who cry out loudest against Government participation in the arts are the very ones who refuse to support the work of artists and writers—those quaint and heartless "individualists" who fill their homes with bric-a-brac and cheap reproductions of the old masters.

Perhaps Art Week, like all the other great shams of America, will prove to be a fizzle also—perhaps it is only a screen to hide the venom of a ruling class that cares nothing for art and culture, or for the people. Art Week on one hand, and a fascistic verbal attack against the Vultee Aircraft strikers on the other.

It is legal for a profiteer to make millions out of war, but for an ordinary worker to earn a living wage is a crime. What irony Art Week becomes when we think of this—in a few months they may be burning books and pictures instead of buying them. Oh, America, you could be beautiful and free, but you are ugly and hypocritical—rotten with fear and distrust.

Buying Power!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every human being, from the time of his birth until he desires no more, is an economic asset. From baby clothes to coffin he is a potential buyer. As he runs the gamut of human emotions he creates sales possibilities and his greatest buying power is probably between the ages of 18 and 50.

War destroys the buying power of a nation. Therefore, a wise nation preserves life. It provokes no war psychology, either among its own people or other nations. A war psychosis when it reaches its final fulfillment destroys in disablement and death a nation's most lucrative buying power.

So in the days to come should disaster happen to some of our American citizens or to American property, not definitely an attack, it is to be hoped that our leaders this time will base their procedure not upon the emotions of a people but upon the cold, indisputable fact that to preserve life is to preserve buying power and that to remain productive we must have that buying power.

To remain strong as a democratic Nation we need the triple force of production, buying power and salesmanship—that virile, dynamic cycle of prosperity. Then we will be a steadying influence upon which a prostrate Europe may lean, not only for sustenance but also for courage, faith and hope.

A Communist View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since C. R. G. in his recent letter to The Post makes several observations concerning capitalism and communism, I hope that you will permit a few remarks from a Communist on this subject.

Mr. C. R. G. believes that when he says, "Man shall live by the sweat of his brow" he is devastating the Communist position. We Communists also believe that all men should work, even those "few idle," who, C. R. G. forgets to mention, control the wealth of our Nation and the welfare of our people.

It is this very point that is the crux of the problem. Some of these "idle rich" have within their power the major industries and resources of this country. With this power they control both the economic and political life of the country. On the other hand, The Post this week points to a report of the Department of Justice that 45,000,000 Americans "are limited to diets so poor that they lack essential food elements."

Capitalism today does not give the worker a chance to "live by the sweat of his brow." Millions are deprived of employment and millions of others must work for low wages and do not even earn enough for a subsistence level.

Mr. C. R. G. states that those "on the other side of the fence" have no alternative to the profit system and points to Russia, where "reputable" travelers have found a poverty-stricken nation, as proof of his charge. I don't know who these "reputable" travelers are, but all thinking persons are aware of the fact that the Soviets have turned Russia from a backward, illiterate country into the second outstanding nation in the world from the point of industrial development, agriculture and education and science.

Capitalism in its early stages did contribute to the advance of mankind, but today it has outlived its progressive role and is retarding man's development. Because the accumulated wealth is in the hands of a small group of people all progress, all advance is impossible. Capitalism today only offers unemployment, hunger, speed-up, and war to its people. The Soviet Union stands out as the only nation in the world which is today progressing, which is today at peace and whose people are constantly improving their working and living conditions.

"Natural Gas For D. C."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You are quite right in saying, as you did on your editorial page of November 24, that Washingtonians should have a keen interest in the proposal to change over their supply of gas and make it 100 per cent natural gas piped from Kentucky. But it seems to us that you were quite wrong in the intimation that any such step would be cause for rejoicing and delight. We believe it would be a curse rather than a blessing.

Your editorial belittles the disadvantages and hazards that are implicit in any such move, and overlooks entirely some of the collateral aspects that are of major importance in assaying the merit or demerit of any such move.

The hazards in making the city's gas supply dependent on gas wells of uncertain life, 350 miles or more distant, and dependent upon a single undersized pipe line (undersized when measured against the prospective peak load), breakable at any point, are real and not imaginary.

That peril is tacitly recognized by the proponents in conditioning a natural gas plan upon retention of the present gas manufacturing plant as standby equipment. Such an arrangement is not as simple as it sounds, nor as efficacious.

The projected savings to consumers under the proposed plan would accrue not to the rank and file of Washington gas users, but to a single and relatively small group of relatively well-to-do householders who heat their homes with gas. But to accommodate this group, the appliances of every gas user in the city will have to be reconditioned if they are to be fully efficient.

To the extent that this "cheaper" gas for house heating induces home owners to switch from coal or oil to gas, there are resulting dislocations in present channels of trade and employment that cannot be ignored.

There is an unemployment angle in this proposition—and applicable right here in Washington—as well as in the coal fields, that Washingtonians would do well not to overlook and which The Post ought not to overlook. The change-over to 100 per cent natural gas will not only destroy the use of coal and coke by the gas company, which in the present year, stated in terms of coal, amounted to nearly 100,000 tons, but also will displace coal in home heating to whatever extent gas burners may be substituted for coal burners. The engineer's report estimates an annual displacement of 154,000 tons of bituminous coal in this latter category. Such a thing will throw scores of men out of work at the gas plant or in the coal yards or at the railroad terminals. It will add to the relief rolls.

It is just such ill-conceived proposals as this that in pursuit of a single idea have such far-reaching and disastrous repercussions and raise havoc with present efforts of the Government and of business and industry to put over a 100 per cent total national defense program and at the same time to build up a sound and lasting and well-balanced and prosperous economic system.

British Loan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When a man in business lets himself get stung twice in the same way by the same fellow he can not expect much sympathy. In fact most people would suggest that he get his head examined.

Although Great Britain has refused to pay even the interest on the four or five billion dollars she owes the United States from the last war, the foundation is being laid through the press and elsewhere for a second helping from the public treasury, which means, if the past is any judge of the future, outright gifts.

There is no sentiment about John Bull when it comes to barter and trade. He has valuable land possessions in this part of the world. Why not be sensible about the matter and insist that he sell them; not lease them for a few years. You can bet your last dollar that if the shoe was on the other foot and Uncle Sam was up to his neck in trouble that is the proposition which would be put to him.

W. H. SHIELDS.

Labor Vs. Draftees

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Settling strikes by granting the union its demands is a simple problem for the New Deal. Eliminating strikes by allowing unions to open up registry offices alongside of employment offices in military cantonments and making work applicants pay in $20 or more to the union as a job requisite is also something new in United States military history.

Giving a Vultee air apprentice an hourly wage equal to the pay of a drafted soldier for a day is another revolutionary New Deal practice effected. Henry Ford says that every drafted man should be paid $5 a day by the Government, and the unions want to hamstring Henry, with Government aid.

In the campaign just past the President sounded from the house tops that the threatening war would make no new millionaires, and undoubtedly he was referring to plant owners, etc. His Administration hasn't yet, it seems recognized the inequality of paying fancy wages to labor and $21 a month to the lads that shoulder the gun and do the real dirty work of defense. How can such an unfair system of defense provide the patriotic stimuli so necessary to victory?

Coffee, Sandwiches, Milk

"PILLOWS—pillows—get your pillows now, 25 cents!"

The windows were black squares of night as the Diesel monster streaked out of Chicago. Across the aisle a man had settled in sleep, his breathing stertorous from the gross flesh. The young woman in the gray suit sat stiffly alone, her gloved hands clenched. Directly in front a boy knelt on the seat, his round eyes popping over its back. His mother drowsed beside him. At intervals pin-points of light pricked the opaque void of space outside the windows, and you were conscious of other lives, divorced from association, but momentarily tenable, then wrested by distance. Outside worked the forces of gravity and motion, while within the speeding metal cask the occupants of the day-coach, wrapped in propinquity, slumbered fretfully.

Morning, sharp and red, cut the sand-colored horizon, bled over the eastern circumference, sheared through the windows. It lay on the gray relaxed faces of the passengers. Across the aisle the man stretched, rubbed his hand over the breath of stubble on his face. The girl in the gray suit opened her eyes slowly. They were slate, empty, reflecting but not giving light. The boy stirred against his mother, his eyes opening on the new scene.

"Mummy, where are we, is this Oregon yet?"

The woman's voice was thick, drenched with sleep. "Hush, darling, I don't know. Oregon is a long way off."

"Coffee, sandwiches, milk—first call for breakfast."

"Mummy, I want some orange juice."

The woman ruffled the boy's brown hair. "No orange juice, dear, be quiet." She smiled at the girl in the gray suit. "Tired?"

"No." The thin mouth moved, but the slate eyes remained indrawn.

The woman spoke to her again. "I'm going out to Oregon. My husband's folks are out there. He just bought a small ranch. The boy's never seen his grandparents."

"Is Grandma fat like her picture?"

"Now, Bobby, Grandma isn't very fat."

The slate eyes lingered on the boy, and lightened. Her hand moved against her crisp blouse.

"Is this your first trip West?" The mother opened the milk bottle and handed it to the child.

"No, I lived in Montana for several years. I'm going there now." She looked out the window and her throat was a sharp line of pain against the prairie. She turned again and looked at the child. "I had a boy." The words were a tight sound in a small voice struggling out through the constricted lips. "He died last month. I'm going back to my husband. You see—you see——" she held her hand out to the other woman in a gesture almost of appeal. Well, we've been separated but now it doesn't seem to matter—the things that were important then. I'm—I've been very lonely." Her face was not so young and hard in the clear morning light. There were slight crinkles beneath her eyes and at the corners of her mouth were the beginnings of what might have been laughter lines. "I, you know, I never did like Montana." Her mouth trembled around a half smile.

"Well, you know, dearie, it isn't what we like but what we get most of the time. You're young." She looked more keenly at the girl. "That's too bad about your boy, but as I said, you're young. There'll be others. I lost four before I had Bobby here." She fondled the boy's head with one big hand. "It's life, that's the important thing, to keep goin' and livin'. That's why I'm glad about the ranch. This young un of mine hasn't known anything but cities yet. I want him to have the feel of the earth. That's what you need."

The man across the aisle leaned forward. "Beg pardon, Ma'm, I couldn't help hearing what you just said—that about the feel of the earth and I just want to say there's nothin' like it. Me, I've had enough of the city and all it's got. I'm headed for my old home in Dakota. Funny, I couldn't get away from there quick enough when I was a boy but now I know it's the place."

"Yes," the mother took the empty milk bottle from the boy. "You learn. I know I did."

The girl in the gray suit smiled, her face relaxed and her eyes almost bright. She looked out the window where the brown, barely undulating land raced past.

"Coffee, sandwiches, milk—second call for breakfast."

On The Record

Can There Be A Peace Of Negotiation?

LUDWELL DENNY, writing a series of articles in the Scripps-Howard newspapers, is suggesting that there is an underground movement for a "peace of negotiation" to settle the war in Europe, and that Mr. Churchill, backed up by the Roosevelt Administration is standing in the way. "But conditions may change."

The peace offensive, according to Mr. Denny, emanates from Berlin. Mr. Hitler wants to hold the continent of Europe, and is prepared, if the war be stopped, to take Great Britain into junior partnership.

ARTICLES LIKE these, plus reports from England of serious damage from bombs and serious shipping losses, undoubtedly awaken in this country a hope that maybe the war can be stopped and things restored in a half-way tolerable manner. Influential groups in the American business world are unquestionably counting on a possible defeat of Britain by spring. These, and others show stubborn resistance to any radical increase of aid from us to Britain. Col. Lindbergh is spokesman for a group who are counting positively on the collapse of Britain at no distant date, and a "new order in Europe" with which we, then, must cooperate. Indeed, in his Chicago speech last summer Col. Lindbergh recommended that once Hitler's regime is established it will be our duty to make a treaty with it, thus abandoning once and for all the idea of "no entangling alliances." We must make no alliance now with Britain; we must prepare to make one with the New Order under Hitler.

IT IS MUCH better to examine these ideas rationally than to denounce them out of hand. But the first thing that must be made clear about them is that they originate in Berlin and that they are part and parcel of a diplomatic offensive perfected by Hitler long ago and waged by him with extraordinary success from 1936 to 1939.

They are part of his technique of achieving "bloodless victory." From the very beginning, he held forth the repeated hope that just one more gain would satisfy the Third Reich and that war would occur only because of the lack of reason on the part of his opponents. And, in this, he has been and still is justified: The whole world can have one sort of peace tomorrow, if it is prepared to live on Hitler's terms.

It will not, of course, have real peace. It will have the indefinite continuation of a reign of terror, in which, in the most arbitrary way, whole populations are moved from their homes and recolonized; political groups are exterminated; racial groups are reorganized into a hierarchical structure of Germans on top and lesser races beneath; all existing forms of culture and of law are obliterated; and the so-called German Revolution is substituted for the war itself.

THERE IS NOT the slightest doubt that Hitler would more than welcome, at this moment, a negotiated peace, with Britain taken into junior partnership. Junior partnership with Nazi Germany is the status at present enjoyed by Italy. Junior partnership means collaboration in carrying out further the world program designed in Berlin. There is no profound difference between the position of Mussolini's Italy and that of conquered France. Italy does not have German troops in occupation of any of her soil, but she would have them tomorrow if she did not "behave." Italy is the caboose of a streamlined train hurtling through the world, and she cannot uncouple herself if she will. Her military and economic position is so weak in contrast to that of Germany that she is a prisoner, not a partner, of her alliance. And Great Britain would be in the same position.

THE NEGOTIATED "peace" proposed by Germany would deprive the United States of the only friend and ally we have in the world. The Churchill government would fall. Hitler would not make peace with Churchill, even if Churchill would. Not once in his whole lifetime has Hitler carried on a campaign against a personality with whom he hoped to cooperate. When he wanted to subjugate Czecho-Slovakia he turned the press and radio loose on the man he first wanted to eliminate: Benes. Before that, he had done the same thing with Schuschnigg. It is significant that never, not once, did he, or has he personally attacked Stalin. But over and over again he has attacked Churchill and Roosevelt. He wants the elimination of these two men and the policies they represent. The resignation of Churchill would be as essential to peace negotiations as was the resignation of the men above named. Churchill would have to be followed by a pro-Nazi government.

A PRO-NAZI government in England, entering into a "junior partnership" with the Third Reich, would not make peace in the world. It would further pursue the war. And the moment such a "peace" were settled the United States of America would be in the most hideous danger imaginable. For that moment would be the one in which Japan would enter as actively into the Axis partnership as Italy entered it with the defeat of France.

If the defeatist attitude in the United States is, at this moment, serious enough, what would it be with Britain in "partnership" with the Axis? Then, indeed, the careful preparations made in the United States for years by the Fascist powers would bear fruit! Then we would hear from our bundists and all their allies. And the United States had better remember that Hitler's own "solution" for the United States is that, at the right moment, we should tear ourselves to pieces and out of history in an internal revolution!

THE ONLY POSSIBLE hope for the United States to avoid the worst catastrophe in the history of the Nation is to abandon all wishful thinking and realize that we must not allow Britain to lose the war. This does not even mean that we can guarantee that she, or even we, can win it. It means that there shall be no peace except a peace which leaves us together—Britain and America—in a more powerful world position than it does the Axis.

THE ONLY POSSIBILITY of our avoiding war, yes, the only possibility short of complete capitulation to and integration in a world run on the Axis terms and on their terms alone, is in whether we can muster that unity and strength, coordination of resources and production of arms of which we would be capable if we were at war.

It depends upon whether we can use "neutrality" wholly for the purpose of serving our own ends. If "neutrality" is going to be allowed to stand in the way of our taking the political, diplomatic, propagandistic, military, and industrial steps necessary to the preservation of the Nation, then it would better be abandoned. But it would be far shrewder, wiser and safer not to do so. For it is still quite possible to win the war without entering it.

But it is not possible if public opinion holds back from the steps which are essential, and which we have not yet taken on anything like a sufficiently comprehensive scale.

Editorial Courage

I AM GOING to try to discuss in a polite, impersonal way the recent press release of Harold Ickes, in which he viewed with alarm the fact that whereas a majority of the daily papers supported Wendell Willkie, nevertheless a majority of the people indorsed President Roosevelt. He concludes from this that the press has lost public confidence—"an unprecedented and progressively perilous situation requiring public consideration." I am not sure this means that the press has lost public confidence, but I will say that if that is what it does mean, then the public itself could be mistaken and the press right, nevertheless, even though its editorial opinion had been rejected by an overwhelming vote rather than by a ratio of 55 to 45, which was fairly close.

With the contention that the press should reflect the opinions of its readers I disagree emphatically. Who else, besides Ickes, claims that the press should represent its readers as a Congressman represents his constituents? If the press should come to that, then no paper could have an opinion of its own. It would engage in sordid trading to retain its popularity, as Congressmen unfortunately do, and run with low and evil gangs of practical political crooks, instead of opposing them. Mr. Ickes, it may be observed, being a politician, finds himself at home in such political company, but that is a characteristic of his chosen trade. It is his privilege to play that way—always at his political peril, of course—but the suggestion that the press is decadent because it doesn't play that way is a mistake.

SOME PAPERS do undertake to tell their readers how to vote, but that is a presumption. It is a different matter to present argument in favor of one candidate and against another, with the hope, always, that the arguments are correct and honest. In the last campaign I heard no specific charge that the facts cited against the New Deal were false or distorted. However, there was a disposition on the New Deal side to denounce facts as scurrilous merely because they were embarrassing. Almost any criticism of Mrs. Roosevelt was sure to draw the charge of scurrility, regardless of the facts of the case, although Mrs. Roosevelt is herself a clever, resourceful and tireless machine political worker. For verification of that observation, lest it, too, be called scurrilous, I refer to James A. Farley's autobiography, written in calm days long before the campaign, in which he praised Mrs. Roosevelt's political ability and diligence.

I dislike to accept any facts or figures from Mr. Ickes without independent verification, but I will concede, for the sake of argument, that those papers which supported Willkie gave him more or less the better of it in their treatment of straight campaign news. But did Mr. Ickes, in his campaign speeches, give Willkie an even break with President Roosevelt? Did the various and numerous press bureaus of the Government give Willkie an even break, and what sort of press could we expect to have if the recent vote were construed as a repudiation of the free press for violation of its trust? We must have some press, and it follows that we would have a controlled, Administration press whose fairness would be consistent with the performance of Ickes, the press bureaus and the other New Deal campaigners.

THE PRESS of the South in this campaign was overwhelmingly for President Roosevelt, and I take it that Mr. Ickes thinks those papers kept the faith, although the whole Nation knows that in national politics the South never has an open mind and would support a bad or mediocre Democrat against a good Republican.

And we come now to the telling fact that if the press had been venal in this fight, if it had been serving only the comfort and financial interests of the owners, it certainly would have supported the President. He was a favorite in the betting, he stood to win, as they say in the fight business, and the New Deal had given much evidence that its friends could expect rewards and its opponents punishment. It strikes me that in opposing a probable winner whose vindictive nature had been revealed in the past the American press in the campaign of 1940 showed high editorial and economic courage.

In addition to which I would like to ask how comes the Secretary of the Interior to deal with such an issue on office time and in premises maintained for the transaction of Government business? This question isn't the proper business of the Department of the Interior.

California In Pictures

THREE AND a half years ago the Guggenheim Foundation announced its awards; they included stipends for writers such as Zora Hurston, Jesse Stuart, Donald Culross Peattie, R. P. Blackmur and Frederic Prokosch; for Dr. Andrews, the historian of the Shakers; Melville Herskovits, the anthropologist; Mordecai Gorelik, the stage designer; and, among other artists, for George Grosz and William Gropper . . . But I doubt if from any of these distinguished names will come any work reflecting more credit on the perspicuity of the Guggenheim trustees than one novel name that appeared at the end of the list: "Mr. Edward Weston, Photographer, Los Angeles. For the making of a series of photographic documents of the West." Mr. Weston's "California and the West" (Duell, Sloan and Pearce, $3.75), seems to me the most beautiful book of 1940.

Strictly speaking, this is not all Edward Weston's book. He supplied the 96 photographs, and a technical note; his young wife, Charis Wilson Weston, wrote the gay text that serves as background to the photographs. The Guggenheim Fellowship enabled him, Mr. Weston says, to devote full time to the kind of photography that had formerly, of necessity, been relegated to spare time. But Charis tells the story of what must have been the happiest year in either of their lives.

They drove to Death Valley in April, and down to the weird Joshua Tree Forests in the southern Mojave. In May they were sweltering on the abandoned Butterfield Stage Route west of the Imperial Valley, barely north of the southernmost transcontinental highway, and as they stumbled back to the coast, Charis gleefully read a paint-peeled sign: "Go Slow; You are now entering the Winterless Gardens, Natural Habitat of the Avocado." All about her were orchards of frost-blackened trees. (This was California's unnatural year of 1937; the next year the rains flooded Death Valley, and they saw it all ablaom.)

They climbed the mountains back of Pasadena, and drifted down the coast to Laguna Beach; they drove north to Yosemite; they followed the new San Simeon Highway that squirms along the mountain sides, north of San Luis Obispo, with cliffs plunging sheer to an impossibly distant ocean. They shivered in the high Sierras, and burned in the Owens Valley, which Charis Weston prefers to call the Los Angeles Desert, being a land, once green, returned to the desert because of a great city's thirst. They visited the Lassen lava beds, gazed spellbound at Shasta, saw the Klamath meet the Pacific.

Again and again they returned to the wild coast north of San Francisco — not the magnificent Redwood Highway, but the lonely road that skirts the coast—a ghost coast, once loud with lumber towns, now almost returned to the seals and gulls.

In that lonely region they met a carload of college boys from Louisiana, walking to the next village to buy a new fan belt. They had driven through Dallas, up Pike's Peak, around the Yellowstone, up to Glacier Park, and past Crater Lake to the Pacific, they said—4,500 miles. And they had left home just one week before.

THE WESTONS looked at Tahoe in the Sierras, but it was too populous for them. It was on the north coast, at the mouth of the Russian River, Charis says, that Edward took his most heavily populated picture, with a fisherman on the rocks, two at the end of a sand bar, and two people sitting on the beach. I looked back at the picture after reading that, for I had noticed no one when I first glanced at it. Weston can take portrait photographs, but this book is a portrait of the West, such as it was before the white men came. The evidences of man he most loves are the ruins in the ghost towns of the Motherlode, and in Rhyolite, Nev., that fabulously short-lived metropolis, whose history, Mrs. Weston says, is summed up in the words, "Born, 1906; died, 1907." (The Nevada State Guide allows it three years of life) . . . But no man has ever given more meaning to an old board than Edward Weston, and no man has more understanding of the texture of a tree trunk.

Once upon a time artists used to debate the question, Is Photography Art? A book like this settles the question once and for all. It is a book of honest photographs; no trick angle-shots, no cute compositions, and 99 per cent of the negatives, Mr. Weston says, are composed to the edge of the plate. The art of this book is not the freakish scissors-talent of montage; it is the genuis of a photographer's eye . . . Incidentally, it is a record of some of the most beautiful country on earth.

Popular Front Election Victory in Chile Stirs Rightists

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 28.—Tension between rightist and leftist political groups in Chile is posing a difficult situation for the Popular Front government of President Pedro Aguirre Cerda.

The Popular Front gained strength in the election which named Anibal Cruzat to the Senate 10 days ago, but subsequent events have been less to the government's liking.

The right wing group has protested that the election was not free and fair. Preliminary protests were rejected. Now rightist have made two formal protests, and pending action have taken two steps which are embarrassing the government.

One is to filibuster in the national Congress, where they have the majority, and the other is a decision to abstain from the general legislative election to be held next month. This means that none of the rightist parties would present candidates for the balloting.

However, there seems a chance that the solid rightist front will be ruptured on this issue, for the Felangista Party has decided independently that it will run candidates whether the other right parties do or not.

Meantime, attention centers on the question of who will win the election the Popular Front won on November 17 at the polls, when Senor Cruzat, a member of the strong Popular Front radical party, compiled a 4,220-vote majority over the rightist candidate, Benjamin Matte, in the provinces of Valparaiso and Aconcagua. The result reduces the rightist Senate majority of 11 seats to 9—27 against 18 Popular Front senators.

Rightists claim that the Popular Front terrorized rightist voters who, had they balloted, would have swung the election to Matte. They also charged that leftists started fights at which hundreds were hurt and that the carabineros—the national police—did nothing to prevent violence.

The left answers that the only people who were denied freedom at the election were the rightist vote buyers. The left adds that 54,068 of 67,304 registered voters went to the polls, pointing out that this is 80 per cent of those inscribed and that this is close to the average.

Two tests are imminent. One will come in Congress where a committee has been named to pass judgment on the electoral attitude of Minister of Interior Labarca. The other will emerge from the verdict of the "Tribunal Calificador de Elecciones," the court which certifies electoral results.

U. S. Signs Coffee Trade Pact With 14 Latin Nations

By the United Press

The United States and 14 coffee-producing nations of the Western Hemisphere, yesterday signed an unprecedented agreement designed to stabilize the coffee industry and bolster the economic defenses of the New World.

The agreement divides on a quota basis the United States and world coffee markets among Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru and Venezuela.

The amount of coffee which each of the nations may send to this country and to areas outside the United States in any one year is limited by the pact. The agreement is a direct outgrowth of the Havana Conference and of the inter-American program, led by the United States, to erect economic bulwarks against totalitarian trade penetration.

The Administration is expected to ask Congress for legislation to establish coffee import quotas according to the terms of the agreement.

The Once Over

Monkey Business

From Sarasota comes word that the circus of 1941 will have more ruffles than ever. It has been going Hollywood for the last few seasons, but next year the biggest show on earth will look like something out of the "Abrabian Nights" via Metro-Goldwyn.

Norman Bel Geddes has been retained by the Ringlings to streamline, decorate and dress the big show from the peanut bag to the elephants; and circus addicts who like their circus plain and a bit oderiferous are worried. It may be hard to tell the 1941 show from a night club interior.

The circus of tradition had faded costumes, a hard-boiled Queen of Sheba and a Maharajah of Indore who had two cauliflower ears and a broken nose. The farther away from the opening pageant you sat, the better.

Cinderella and her ladies generally had the appearance of being refugees from a midway.

The Fairy Prince had fallen arches, a three-days' growth of beard and a middle tooth missing. And the Caliph of Bagdad seemed freshly bounced from a corner saloon.

But the old-time circus fan was satisfied. He didn't expect too much.

There was something rough, catch-as-catch-can and impromptu about the big show that was appealing. If you wanted art and beauty you went to a musical show or a museum. And a circus had to smell like a circus, too.

But the big top woke up one spring morning and found that it had been to the beauty parlor, caliphs, princes, maharajahs, princesses, elephants, ponies and all.

When the bands blared for the opening pageant that season there wasn't a plug-ugly in the parade.

That would have been all right with the old-time circus addict if they had stopped there. But the circus management went in head over heels for glamour.

They rouged the elephant's toenails, powdered the gorilla's nose and made even the hostlers wash behind the ears. They hired beautiful showgirls, introduced the De Mille, the surrealist and the De Sylva influence in one movement, and even went in for air conditioning the circus tent.

If you wanted your circus straight, with all the smells that had become traditional, you had to stay down near the camels and sea lions.

And it looks like a non-stop trend. Norman Bel Geddes is now reported working on the tents. That looks like carrying the glamour stuff too far. A circus tent has always looked like a circus tent. What it will look like in 1941 is anybody's guess.

House Bill Would Let Refugees Stay in U. S.

A bill to permit aliens who entered the United States lawfully as visitors but are unable to return to their war-torn homelands, to remain permanently in this country and be charged against quotas of their nations, was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York.

"The great majority of aliens in this country are under a cloud," he said. "They can neither go in or out, as it were. They cannot seek employment. Many of these men and women are hard-working and distinguished, and would add to the commercial and industrial wealth of our Nation."

Sour Impression

British 'Incapacity' to Pay

IT CAN NOW be reported confidently that among experts in the Administration who know the facts the British have made a sour impression by intimating that they are near the end of their capacity to pay for the munitions and other goods which they need from this country.

This reaction is found among men who realize that the military predicament of Great Britain remains acutely serious and who favor a maximum of useful aid short of war to the British cause. In at least one instance it can be found in an officeholder who privately has expressed himself in favor of our entering the war as a full belligerent.

The British warnings of incapacity to pay have made this bad impression because they do not conform to the known facts. The British need airplanes, guns, shells—implements of war of almost every kind. They need ships—merchant ships to carry these goods to Great Britain and, more acutely, naval ships to protect those merchant ships on the Atlantic sea lanes. But they do not need money. Capacity to pay for what they buy overseas—more particularly in this country—is something they have in flowing abundance. It might also be said that the tragedy of Britain is that she has been slow and ineffectual in translating financial strength abroad, which is, or was, unequaled in recorded history, into effective military power.

GREAT BRITAIN came through World War I with very little impairment of overseas investments. British investments abroad at the outset of the present war were estimated at from $15,000,000,000 to $18,000,000,000. Some of these—on the European continent and in China—are now worthless, temporarily or permanently. But a great core of good investments remains which can be converted into dollars or other currencies. Add to this the British gold reserves, the immense gold production of the British Empire, the raw materials and manufactured goods which Great Britain and its dominions and colonies continue to sell elsewhere, and the British commercial and transportation services for which other nations continue to pay, even though in diminished amounts.

Why the British do not want to sell their great overseas financial investments is readily understandable. These are direct sources of income to Britishers of the upper and middle classes. The income from them is great enough to be an important factor in the British economy as a whole. The benefits trickle down to the poorest classes. As these investments are lost or sold, the British standard of living is correspondingly reduced.

THE BRITISH are now fighting desperately for survival—for the survival not only of the British Empire and parts of the British Commonwealth (Canada is safe, no matter what happens, thanks to us), but of the freedom of the British people. We are aiding them. Without our help, they probably would have been defeated before now.

When the British assert or imply that they cannot go on fighting unless they receive financial aid from us, it is very much as if a multimillionaire who was fighting for his life told his doctor that he would fold up and die if he had to sell any of his property holdings.

To British-owned properties outside Great Britain and Europe must be added those of the sister commonwealths. These are considerable in the case of Canada. Also must be added the holdings of the British allies, chiefly the Dutch. Can anyone maintain that the interest of the Dutch in a British victory is not greater than ours? The Dutch thought so, at least, because they fought, if only briefly. The Dutch are now a captive people. The Dutch—including the royal family—own more than one billion dollars' worth of property in the United States alone. Certainly the American taxpayers should not be expected to shoulder the burden of paying for munitions for Great Britain while these Dutch property holdings in the United States remain unexpended.

BY RAISING the financial question, the British have diverted attention from their real need—which is for munitions and ships. It is true that some of their property holdings here and in other countries may be more easily handled, for us as well as for them, by depositing them as collateral for loans. But they are not poor. They have resources to buy all that we can produce for them for at least two or three years—perhaps longer.

Engineers Pave the Way—Since men first banded together to make war, some means to level the fields and carve out the forests, to bridge streams and ravines for their passage has been an integral part of moving armies.

This problem, increasing with the size and weight of armies, has been turned over for many years to the Engineers, the artisans of the Army. With pick and shovel and, more recently, with machines, the Engineers have paved the way ahead of the Army.

One of the latest developments of the Army Engineers is the fabricated steel bridge, carried in their trains and assembled quickly to bridge ravines and small streams. Over them move foot troops to battle and guns to support them and the trucks loaded with their food and ammunition.

Here the Fifth Engineers demonstrate at Fort Belvior, Va., how one of these steel bridges is assembled. The bridge they flung across a ravine for the photographer is 72 feet long and will support a load of 10 tons.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Asks Advice for Friend, Whose Devotion To Daughter-in-Law Is Ungratefully Exploited

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The problem I am about to present concerns a dear friend of mine and her daughter-in-law. Ellen is my friend. Agnes is the girl. Ellen is a businesswoman with little time for domestic affairs and too much money to spend upon her unappreciative daughter-in-law. Recently, Ellen asked me the direct question: "Do you think I have spoiled Agnes?" My answer was, "Yes."

I shall give you the unadorned facts and would greatly appreciate your views on the matter. Ellen's son—a fine, industrious young man, whom I have known since his childhood—married a girl who seemed, outwardly, to be shy, soft spoken and "good." On their wedding day, a member of the wedding party (a relative of the bride's), remarked in my hearing: "Agnes is a very good girl, but has perhaps spoiled . . ."

Agnes, seemingly shy, inexperienced, and ill-at-ease, awakened the "mothering instinct" in Ellen, who began at once to extend the "helping hand," but not in the "meddlesome" manner. For instance, she shopped for Agnes, whenever asked to do so, adding household articles at her own expense which she thought would be useful. These Agnes accepted without any expression of gratitude—presumably because of her shyness. Several of these articles were never used, as Agnes is not the domestic type.

When Agnes was expecting her child, Ellen became more indulgent, doing many kind and generous deeds. Shortly before the baby was born, Ellen stopped in one evening after dinner(weary from a hard day's office work), to deliver a purchase Agnes had requested. On this occasion she was treated with insolence and impertinence. Being a woman of the world and broadminded, she overlooked the incident, attributing it to Agnes' "condition."

Several months after the baby was born, Agnes stopped allowing Ellen to see the baby. No one knows why. However, Agnes' father, who was a guest in her home around this time, asked, why Ellen was denied the privilege and was promptely told to attend to his own affairs. Thereafter, the old gentleman, when out for an "airing" with the baby, would stop by Ellen's, so she could have a little visit with her grandchild. He made no bones of telling me that he thought it was the right thing to do.

Ellen, deeply hurt by such treatment and unable to conceal her pent-up emotions, began to suffer nervous exhaustion. On top of that, she had a major operation, and during this critical period Agnes called just once at the hospital, probably a "duty call" to keep up appearances, as she showed no signs of sympathy. Being one of Ellen's coworkers, I happened to be with her when Agnes called.

Now, a year has passed and Ellen's health is sufficiently improved for Agnes to be up to her old tricks again—imposing and asking favors. This is what burns me up. Tell me, Miss Haworth, do you think Ellen is handling this situation intelligently? Is there no solution, except to be imposed upon, for the sake of "peace in the family?" Your advice will be greatly appreciated. Sincerely,

JANE.

Woman Has Placed Young Wife on Defensive

DEAR JANE: Your friend Ellen is not handling her "in-law" problem intelligently. In fact, I think she is largely (perhaps even initially) responsible for the problem that exists. She has made the great mistake of emotionally identifying herself with—of trying to make herself indispensable to, and very much to the forefront of—her son's marriage. She was exceedingly unwise in undertaking to make a tangible, continuous contribution to her daughter-in-law's comfort and happiness.

It was her unconscious purpose to make the latter dependent upon her—thus acquiring another "child," instead of giving up her son, as she must have done had she met the real needs of the situation as they should have been met. It was inevitable that her eagerly maternal ministrations would have put her daughter-in-law instinctively upon the defensive. Agnes resented the way being treated as a child, and her surly (or manifestly "unappreciative") reaction was an inarticulate form of protest.

This is not to say that Agnes isn't selfish. I daresay she is. Most persons are, in varying degrees. But the fault is not primarily hers if she has employed the all-too-willing Ellen as errand boy on many occasions, when it suited her convenience to do so. Ellen has stuck her neck out. And, as usually happens, she gets it in the neck. Her "familiar" treatment of Agnes has bred the incivility of the latter's attitude toward her.

If Ellen had adopted, from the very first, a sensible and courteous "hands off" policy toward her son's marriage, and his wife, Agnes' habit of "using" her would never have developed. The dignity and wisdom of Ellen's character—if registered by such a stand—would have won Agnes' grateful affection and respect as no amount of solicitous service ever could.

In studying the pictures of these two women's respective characters (as you depict them), I think Agnes gains a point over Ellen, by virtue of her reticence regarding their conflict. Apparently, Ellen has given you a box seat of sorts, at this performance, in which she doubles in the roles of Lady Bountiful and Christian Martyr. Yet Agnes keeps her own counsel, even to the point of refusing to tell her father what is a-foot.

Agnes isn't asking anybody's sympathy; indeed, she is brave enough to alienate it, while pursuing the course she believes to be right. Tactless, selfish and peculiar she may be, but she has a brand of integrity that deserves respect. Distrusting her mother-in-law's motives and disliking her accordingly, she isn't afraid to try to keep her at arm's length. She's above pretending a trust and affection she doesn't feel.

If Ellen is willing to let Agnes alternately kick her in the teeth, figuratively speaking, and use her as a convenience, she has no right to complain. She's asking for such treatment. But she can put an end to the trouble, any time she wants to, by letting the young marriage stagger along under its own power, while she switches her emotional energies and executive talents to other fields of interest. She can be ever so sorry but just too busy to run errands for Agnes, hereafter. She can best keep "peace in the family" by ceasing to pretend for place in the closed corporation of Agnes' little family.

War on Bulge Betwixt Waist And Wishbone

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S the silk and satin season with dresses fitting skin smooth over the diaphragm—and women are hollering for the kind of exercise that will keep them from looking like an old style prima donna.

Well, what it takes to rout out this outboard bulge betwixt the waist and wishbone is good, thorough backward stretching. The ballet dancers have it down to a fine art with their backward bends—but they all have strong, straight backs. The average woman has a slight inclination to sway back and doesn't want to do anything that might make it worse.

The safest backward bending is done with the hips and the small of the back supported, so that the main tug on the muscles is deflected to the mid-region in front. Moreover, this adaptation gets results—and quickly! Here is a good beginning exercise:

POSITION: Sit on the floor, feet anchored under a heavy piece of furniture.

Even Go Farther

MOVEMENT: Slowly lower the trunk backward until you are lying straight back on the floor. Then slowly raise the trunk until you are again in a sitting position.

You can carry this same exercise a step farther:

POSITION: Sit on a low, backless chair, with feet anchored.

MOVEMENT: Slowly lower the trunk backward until the body is almost in a straight line, head toward the floor. Hold for a second, then rise to sitting position. This is strenuous business—and not for the novice.

Here is one that you may find easier:

POSITION: Lie across the bed with head and arms dangling toward the floor—or, assume this position on a strong table.

MOVEMENT: Slowly raise the trunk and, clasping hands behind the back, lift head and chest off the bed. Relax and repeat several times.

Another Exercise

All the foregoing exercises are performed in a position that precludes any exaggerated jutting out of the hips in back, which would tend to make an incurve at the small of the back more pronounced. You can observe the same precaution, however, in backward bending.

These exercises should be equal to any diaphragm bulge. But don't overdo at the beginning. Relax completely between each exercise, and be careful not to repeat too many times. It is better to do your callisthenics accurately a couple of times than to wear yourself out—then quit!

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Feline Confession

The reason I'm always so hypercritical,
And to my absent friends deal stinging knocks,
Is not because I am so smart and analytical,
It's merely this, "It takes a fox to catch a fox."

From the Truthtown Torch

Mrs. Brown Toddy and Mrs. Smith Toddy, former wives of Ellsworth Toddy, and inseparable companions, have organized a Figure Skating Supper Club which will lease Eskimo Palace for its exclusive use every Wednesday night. "Many of our friends," explained Mrs. Brown Toddy, "are not indulging their love for skating because of the promiscuity of a public rink, and we felt we should do something about the matter."

In pursuit of a Good Neighbor Policy, Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger is opening her music room for a series of morning musicales featuring Latin-American music. At the first of these Monday morning, her protege, Senor Manuel Serenado, will give a guitar recital.

To further good feeling between the two continents, Mrs. Marcus Hoardem has consented to exhibit her collection of Panama hats and turtle shells at a tea at her luxurious home Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Thornberry Flitt has left for Mexico City for a two-week visit to study Mexican folklore and Mrs. Mike McPace and Mrs. Otis Tinfoil will leave next week on a Caribbean cruise. Both expect to pick up some interesting pottery and other objets d'art. "I hate to miss Christmas at home," said Mrs. McPace, "but I consider it a patriotic duty right now, to do what I can personally to foster relations between the two Americas."

The Commuter

Mrs. Lucius Gilderlyly, who recently accepted the presidency of the newly organized Emergency Aid for Air Raid Victims, has left for her winter home at Pasadena, Calif. She will commute by plane twice a month to direct the activities of her organization.

The Repartee Set

Overheard at the Wimplegate Wadd reception—Mrs. Rudolfo Gusch telling Mrs. Wadd how "thrilled" she was to come; Mrs. Neville Newcome telling Mrs. Rufus Flitterjig she was "dying" for a house in Adamstown; Buzzie Bellwether telling Mrs. Ethelbert Vanderpuffer she couldn't have done a better job in managing the Notables' Benefit Ball; J. Atterbury Husk remarking to Mrs. Cymbeline Certo that there were so many "new faces" present; Philander Plunkette asking subdeb Vivi Stepp if she had seen the orchid plant in the conservatory; Mrs. Pigeon Strutt, daughter of dowager Mrs. Parmalee Pigeon, congratulating Mrs. Wadd on her marinated shrimps; Huntington Rhinestone saying to Lady Garterwaite that the weather was unusual for this time of year; Miss Jennie McMoss congratulating Mrs. Montague Scribbler on her poem on the recent chrysanthemum show and saying she ought to have it published; Arbuthnot Abercrombie telling Mrs. Bumington Birdhaven the country was in for another bad four years.

Button Collection Numbers 10,000

Ten thousand buttons keep Mrs. Bernardine Rathmell of Effingham, Ill., from being bored. She assembled them all in one year, chose her specimens for age and refused to take anything less than 50 years old.

"Lots of people collect buttons," she says. "Old ladies have told me how belles of the '90s used to string 999 buttons on a 'charm chain,' then wait for the right man to supply the 1,000th. Most women have the start of a good collection in their own sewing baskets. It's fun to get one odd button, then search the country for a mate for it."

Kid Curlers Back in New Wave; Chic Turban Covers Wrappings

By Carolyn Abbott

DO YOU remember the time when you twisted up your hair in the old kid curlers before going to bed at night? Then the next day, you took it down and it was fuzzy in some places and straight in others? And if the rains came—well, your curls simply vanished with the downpour?

Permanent waving has changed all that. Still, the kid curler idea had some merit, for its ghost has returned in the newest and most spectacular permanent since the appearance of the Christy cut wave about three years ago. This new "Turban Permanent" recently was introduced exclusively by a Washington beauty shop.

Before releasing the turban permanent to the public the investors experimented with it in their own beauty shop in Chicago for nearly a year. It took them more than two years to perfect it.

Here's how it works.

First the hair is shampooed and dried. After that it is parted and wrapped. A solution is applied to small sections of hair, which are rolled up with tiny pieces of wire, covered with manilla paper. These tiny wires look very much like the old-fashioned kid curler. When all the hair has been wrapped, the entire head is sealed air tight with a light weight cap and hidden with a becoming turban. The turbans match your coat or dress so you can go shopping, dancing or wherever you like feeling well-dressed. After the time specified for your texture of hair has elapsed, you return to the shop. Operators then remove turban and wrappings, thin, sham poo and style your hair to the contour of your face.

The solution used for the actual curling of the hair does not contain harsh, strong chemicals that harm or dry out your hair. There are three outstanding features of the turban permanent. It curls the new hair at the forehead when it is impossible to curl with the old-type permanent methods. Also, it curls successfully the fine hair at the nape. Curls peroxide, dyed and bleach hair that is impossible to curl by the usual methods.

A Woman's Washington

By Jean Brownell

WHEN a good-looking girl of 22 takes the stump for temperance, that's news. Even better news is the sprightly attitude with which Marjorie Ptacek, here from Kansas for the Anti-Saloon vention, tackles the problem.

Marjorie Ptacek

"The old-time temperance lecture scares young people away," she says. "I don't try to 'convert' them or make them sign pledges; I merely ask them to say 'No, thank you' when they're offered a drink. I break down the idea that only sissies don't drink and persuade them that the real sissies are those who don't dare REFUSE a drink. I get the popular kids in a group to make fun of those who drink—sort of a backfire on the kidding which the drinkers give the nondrinkers.' "

She minimizes the college drinking problem and feels it's the business girls who need to be "cracked down on." She herself was "just average" in college. "I didn't drink, but I shrugged my shoulders when others did and figured it was none of my business. Then I got a secretarial job with the United Dry Forces and couldn't help talking up when I heard the workers discussing how to approach young people." So she talked herself right into the position of Youth Education secretary.

The reason for the delay at at a recent Capitol Theater midnight show was that the bill included a seal number. The seals, having done their four-a-day, had gone to sleep and were darned if they wanted to get up at that time of night. It took a lot of prodding and an extra ration of fish, but they finally flopped on the stage and reluctantly went through their routine.

TALE OF THE TIMES—A lone male sat in the last row of a Red Cross first aid class at the American Women's Voluntary Services. A newcomer, he obviously felt ill at ease in the midst of 50 women. The room was warm, and as the lecture proceeded he grew paler and paler. Suddenly, to the consternation of the ladies, he fainted dead away. They revived him with water in true first aid tradition, while Mrs. Melville Church, a director of the A. W. V. S., ran for a doctor. The two men at once went into a huddle and came out with a fair alibi; the victim recently had traveled in a high altitude, it seems, and the sudden change had caused the fainting spell. He continued to look pretty embarrassed, however, and has not returned to the class.

Until Wednesday afternoon, Chester Yellowhair was one sad Indian. He had come all the way from Crown Point, N. M., to make Navajo jewelry at the National Art Week show here. When the show opened, there were Chester and his silver and lots of paleface spectators—but, because of fire regulations, no blowtorch. You can't make silver jewelry without heat, so for two days Chester just sat and exchanged stares with the palefaces and wished the Office of Indian Affairs had let him stay home, where he teaches in an Indian school. Finally Edward B. Rowan, of the Federal Works Agency's fine arts section, got together with Arthur W. Clime, superintendent of the Interdepartmental Auditorium; Mr. Clime it seems, once tinkered some with jewelry himself, and on Wednesday Chester got his blowtorch.

Oven Meals Save Time, Are Savory, Economical

Housewife Is Freed for Other Activities While Cooking Goes On; Prize Recipes Offer Interesting Dishes Easily Prepared

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor.

OVEN MEALS are a boon to the modern cook. They not only produce better tasting food but are also an economy in heat and give more time for other activities while the cooking goes on. An "oven meal" refers to the preparation of a whole meal at one time. It means that one chooses foods that will cook at the same temperature; that an estimate of the length of time necessary to cook the meal is made by the weight of the meat; that if meat requires a longer cooking time than other foods that the vegetables and desserts are placed in the oven with the meat the last hour or so of the cooking period.

The points were observed by the winners of The Post's recipe contest, whose theme is Oven Dinners. If you are interested in cooking up a delicious meal in the oven, all dishes at one time, you will want to try the winners' menus and recipes. Cheese Dishes Add Variety to Menus In Economical Way

A casserole combination of noodles, golden yellow cheese sauce and sliced frankfurters sauteed in butter, form the basis of an inexpensive and easily prepared meal. Served with broiled tomatoes, a crisp green salad, and warm apple pudding with cinnamon hard sauce for dessert, you have a meal to tempt the most jaded appetite.

Cheese-Noodle Casserole

Drop one 8-ounce package of broad egg noodles into 2 quarts of rapidly boiling water and cook until tender, about 10 minutes. Drain and rinse with hot water. Melt 6 tablespoons butter in saucepan, blend with 6 tablespoons flour, add 2 cups milk and cook over direct heat, stirring constantly, until sauce boils and thickens. Remove from heat and add ½ teaspoon salt and dash of pepper and ¼ pound sharp, grated cheese. Stir until smooth. Arrange alternate layers of noodles and cheese sauce in buttered casserole, with cheese sauce on top. Place in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 30 minutes, or place under broiler long enough to broil. Serve hot with 1½ pounds broiled pork sausages or 1 pound cooked bacon, arranged on top. Serves six.

Cake Eaters To Be Helped By New Knife

By The Post Food Editor

ARE YOU worrying and wondering what to give Aunt Suzy or Cousin Mamie for Christmas that will be practical? Especially if your budget is limited you will want to get moderately priced gifts. Browsing through the household department of a local store the other day I was attracted to a display of crystal and pastel colored knives, which would be one answer to the shopping list. Upon inspection I found them to be made of plialgas, the new plastic material that is being made into so many useful items now.

This knife, known as aer-flo fruit and cake knife, cuts cake clean and effectively down to the last crumb. But whether slicing cake or cutting fruits and vegetables this knife is a comfort, for it eliminates danger and waste. Because of the holes in the blade, no suction is created as is the case when cutting with a flat blade. This is the reason it does not stick to the cake, pie meringue or gush the fruit. The knife will not dull, nor does the acidity of fruits stain it. The edge of the blade does not lacerate the thumb when cutting.

Here is a delicious orange cake that you will want to cut with the new aer-flo cake knife.

Orange Coconut Cake

Cream ¾ cup shortening with 2 cups sugar. Add 1½ teaspoons grated orange rind and 2 well beaten egg yolks. Blend together. Sift 3¼ cups cake flour, with 4½ teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Add to the first mixture alternately with ½ cup orange juice and ¾ cup water. Beat just enough to make batter smooth. Blend in ½ cup moist, shredded coconut and 4 egg whites, beaten stiff but not dry. Pour into three 9-inch pans, greased and floured. Bake 30 minutes in moderate oven, 350 degrees. Put layers together with orange filling and cover with orange frosting.

Sherry Addition

If you want to put sherry into chicken, fish Newburg or King mixtures add it to the creamed mixture just before serving to get the best flavor results. Use about a tablespoon of sherry for each 1½ cups of creamed food. Be careful not to add too much.

Cook's Library

"HAWAIIAN AND PACIFIC FOODS," by Katherine Bazore is unique among the specialized cookbooks which have appeared in recent months. This cookbook gives culinary customs of Hawaii and recipes adapted for the American hostess. The author has prepared a table of equivalents so that American mainland foods may be used as substitutes for some of the more unusual Island ingredients in the recipes. Chinese, Japanese, Filipino, Portuguese, Samoan and native Hawaiian dishes are included.

If hostesses are interested in giving delightful parties of charming originality, details as to authentic decorations, garnishes, and table settings are listed with each menu. A picture is given of a table set for Hawaiian Luau, showing large coconut bowls conarea—What foods do they eat? taining chicken and Luau; small bowls containing Haupia and Laulaus, sweet potatoes, crabs and red salt at each place.

The people living in the Pacific Why do they eat them? How do they eat them? In this interesting cookbook, Miss Bazore has answered all of these questions. She has given recipes for ardent devotees of Hawaiian food to use in unusual and delicious dishes. These are the dishes for which Hawaii is so famous.

The publishers are M. Barrows and Co. Price, $2.50.

Appetizer Idea

Here's a grand new appetizer for your next tea or cocktail party: Scoop out hard, crusty rolls. Stuff them with white cream or yellow peppy cheese, combined with equal portions of finely-diced celery and seasoned with salt, paprika, dry mustard, minced onions and parsley. Wrap up several hours. Use a sharp knife to cut the rolls into thin crossway slices. Arrange the slices flat on a serving tray or tuck in with other appetizers on a platter.

1940 Kitchen Tries to Attain Allure of Old

Warmth and Cheer, Hospitable Bustling Air Are Sought

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THAT OLD dear charm of kitchens in the once upon a time—a nostalgic remembrance of to mind other kitchens too . . . kitchens with a hospitable bustling air, an amiable warmth and cheer. Of course they lacked most of the clinical virtues of modern kitchens and for that reason none of us would want to go back to such workshops, for all our affection for them. And yet, how pleasant it would be if somehow we could combine the conveniences we like best about modern kitchens with the atmosphere we loved in the old-time kitchens.

Here's the way one lady with a house achieved just that. She "papered" walls and ceiling with a quaintly flowered oilcloth in garden colors on a pale green ground, made ruffled curtains of white dotted swiss, added a light green linoleum for floor and table tops. Against that background, the bright and shining whiteness of her stove, refrigerator and sink cabinets looked crisp and starched.

Another modern-equipped kitchen that captured some of the allure of old had the floor in a plank pattern linoleum with the wall to match. Curtains were made of canary yellow percale and used with yellow canisters and copper pots and pans. But it was really the long maple trestle table and benches that took this kitchen back a generation . . . this table not only made the kitchen seem more sociable but it was a genial place for the family to eat in this house without a dining room.

A young and skittish kitchen had its walls covered with a red ground oilcloth spattered with calico sprigs; then sparkling white enamel woodwork to match the glistening stove, refrigerator and cabinets; linoleum in the brightest of bright blue; white starched curtains; white painted table and chairs with red calico seat pads. Wouldn't that be a cheerful place to work—and keep?

Log Book Tells Grim Saga of Sea

Starvation Story Told; 1 Survived of 4 Aboard Wrecked Gig

By the Associated Press

Suva, Fiji Islands, Nov. 28.—The story of a romantic South Seas adventure by two couples which turned grimly into death for three of the party and near starvation for the fourth was pieced together today from the crude log of the wrecked gig, Wing On.

The Wing On, which sailed from the United States last August, came to grief on a coral reef off Vanua-Levu.

Dalton Arthur Conly, Los Angeles.

Eva R. Larson, or Conly, presumably Conly's wife.

Chester A. Thompson, Los Angeles.

The only survivor is Thompson's widow, Fern Thompson. She was found in an emaciated condition aboard the yacht and brought to a hospital in Suva. Her condition was pronounced grave.

Thompson died at sea on November 7, the log indicated; Conly on November 12 or 13 and Mrs. Conly about November 23.

Kept in amateurish manner, the boat's record read grimly after an entry telling of striking a "cyclone."

"Discovered Chet had died. What next? Help us, oh God," was the entry on November 7.

"Buried Chester Thompson, 21, died starvation; too far gone at any rate stand any more remaining can apricots," was the notation the next day. The last entry, on November 12, was merely, "D. A. Conly, master yacht Wing On."

The yacht, with a hole 13 feet by 4 feet in the starboard side, was sighted November 24 on Visoqo Reef by a Seventh Day Adventist mission ketch. A missionary boarded the wreckage and found an emaciated young woman, the body of a woman who had died recently and the body of a man, dead for some time.

The second book said the Wing On cleared Seattle August 14 for the Marquesas Islands. Apparently land had not been sighted since the party left the United States.

A post mortem showed that Mrs. Conly died of starvation.

Visoqo Reef is located at an isolated spot on Vanu-Levu Island, which is northeast of here.

(Mrs. A. M. Conly, mother of the wrecked mariner, said in Oakland, Calif., that her son and daughter-in-law left their infant daughter with her when they departed for the South Seas. The Thompson's two children, acquaintances said in Los Angeles, had been left there with their maternal grandparents.

(Both Thompson and Conly were expert seamen, it was said in Los Angeles by St. John Thompson, brother of Chester Thompson.)

Mary Roberts Rinehart Going Back To Europe as War Correspondent

Here on Brief Visit, Noted Novelist, Who in 1917-18 Reported on Soldier Life, Will Do Series of Magazine Articles

By Hope Ridings Miller

TRYING TO TELL Washington anything new about Mary Roberts Rinehart usually is about as pointless as carrying a Congressional Record to Capitol Hill. The town knows her, loves her, and has kept close tab on her ever since she moved to New York six years ago.

But here's news about this noted novelist who has come "back home" for a brief stay. She hopes to be off sometime soon for Europe to do a series of articles about the war for a topflight magazine, and she's in town to make arrangements for the trip.

Hope Ridings Miller

That reminds you, of course, that Mrs. Rinehart distinguished herself as a war correspondent back in 1915 when she visited the Belgian, British and French headquarters, entered the trenches and wrote a series of graphic stories of soldier life at the front. Along about that time, she also interviewed King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, and then topped off her foreign assignment with the first interview ever given by Queen Mary of Great Britain.

You remember, too, that after the United States entered the war, Mrs. Rinehart was made personal representative in France of Secretary of War Newton D. Baker; that she visited A. E. F. hospitals and camps as the only unofficial woman observer; won the Queen Elizabeth Medal from Belgium as a tribute for her war work, and then wove many of her experiences into one of her most absorbing books, "The Breaking Point," published in 1922.

Plans for her forthcoming trip to wartorn Europe are not yet complete; but she expects to leave before the end of the year, and you can count on it that if any woman in America can get the real story of the current war, Mrs. Rinehart can.

WHEN REPORTS made the rounds that Mrs. Rinehart was back in town, many persons hoped she was to be here through the season. Celebrity-loving Washington can't give up the idea that one of its most famous former citizens belongs here, and there has been a widely-cherished impression that eventually she would come back to live in her Massachusetts Avenue home, which is now the Swiss Legation.

Mrs. Rinehart makes no promises, but she does return the compliment. "Washington is the most fascinating place in the world," she said yesterday when I talked with her at the Mayflower.

"It's a city of ideas, as well as facts. Here, and only here, can one keep informed on world trends and events by the simple process of talking across a dinner table or over the tea cups."

At present, however, Mrs. Rinehart has no plans to return here to live. Her sons are in New York. She moved there to be near them, and has stayed on for the same reason. So, for the time being at least, Washington will have to be satisfied with an occasional glimpse of her.

I must say the one I had yesterday was most satisfactory. I am impressed with any author, and when I happen on one who has turned out 55 novels, 7 plays and goodness knows how many short stories, I'm practically speechless. That, I was—until I felt the firm grip of her hand as she greeted me, and looked into her sparkling gray-blue eyes. After that, talking to her was easy as anything, and half an hour was gone before it seemed to have begun.

AS MRS. RINEHART settled back in her chair to answer my questions, she looked exactly like my idea of a successful novelist who takes out enough time between books to bone up on what the well-dressed woman should wear. Her smart black frock, simply cut, was accented with a four-strand pearl necklace and a bracelet to match, and her wide-brimmed hat, turned up on one side, was arranged at exactly the right angle on her graying bobbed hair.

She expects to be in Washington until Monday, and her calendar is crowded with conferences, to say nothing of an engagement for dinner every evening, and luncheon every day. Last night she was feted at a small, informal dinner given by Ralph Snowden Hill at his home. She will dine with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Brooke tonight; and other parties she will attend include Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Langhorne's dinner tomorrow night, and the luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney will give on Sunday.

Frankly admitting that she likes "people more than parties," she has found, nevertheless, that attending a party is one way to see a lot of friends all at once, and also a superb Washington way of finding out what's going on all over the world.

HER VIEWS on the war? Well, they are not as clearcut as they may be later. "Right now, all I can say is that I am for total defense for America, and all possible aid to Britain," she averred.

The future of Europe and America seems to be the only mystery story with which she is concerned right now; and the interview was drawing to a close before we got around to discussing some of her books. She still believes writing is the hardest work in the world, and she frankly admits many of her memories of Washington swirl around that little office in the Munsey Building where, over a period of years, she struggled over her writing from 9 to 5 o'clock every weekday.

How had such a busy woman ever found time through the years to talk with scores of aspiring authors and to give them much-needed suggestions on how to get ahead? Well, she had managed it, she said, because in the period when she was beginning there was no one to whom she could turn for literary advice, and she knew how much she had wanted it. For years, manuscripts from would-be authors poured in to her from all over the country, and she patiently passed judgment on them. More recently the press of her own work has stopped that.

Happy to Be Home —It Seems

Muffled in furs, the Johnson family—Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson, wife of the United States Ambassador to China, and her son, Nelson, and daughter, Betty Jane—recently arrived in San Francisco from Shanghai. At present they are in Cody, Wyo., but are expected to come to Washington soon and the youngsters will enter school here in January. A rather complicated and thrilling journey was in store for the trio when they boarded a plane at Chungking to get the President Coolidge at Shanghai

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

MRS. ROGER MAKINS asked friends in for cocktails the other afternoon at her home on Kalorama Road. The house, with its spacious rooms done in quiet, warm colors, belongs to Mrs. Makins' father, Dwight Davis, and is home to Mrs. Makins and her small children during the war. Roger Makins is in London, stationed at the Foreign Office.

Mrs. Makins, wearing a simple and becoming frock of light blue wool, was assisted by her sister, pretty Helen Davis, very busy passing sandwiches. Helen is wearing her hair in a new way which is most attractive—a soft pompadour in front, off the ears, ad slightly curled in back.

ARRIVING on crutches was Stephan Morris, of the State Department, who is proud of his skill in negotiating the flight of steps from the sidewalk to the front door and of the fact that his severely sprained ankle had not caused him to miss a single day at the office. He admitted, however, rushing home each evening after work to receive sympathetic callers at cocktail time.

Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, eyeing Steve Morris' crutches, said sadly that little Serena Rumbold's Nannie had just sprained her ankle, too, and that she was slated for pram-pushing for some time to come. Dean Acheson was there without his dark-eyed wife, who is vacationing in Jamaica with their daughter, Jane. Mr. and Mrs. George Howe came with Edward Burling, jr., Mrs. Burling being laid up with a cold. The Howes are house guests of the Burlings while putting the finishing touches to their new home in Georgetown.

ALSO PRESENT were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, jr., she topping a wool frock with an enormous hat turned back from the face; Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Mrs. Robert T. Pell and the Heathcoat Amorys; also, Winthrop Crane, Edward Weintal, Rafal Lepkowski and Llewellyn Thompson.

Stopping by Mrs. Marion Warburg's house on Tracy Place the other late tea time I heard discussed the rumor that Marian Trumbull's dressmaker had delivered the wrong dress to the bride before her recent wedding to the Canadian Minister. No one seemed to know how the mistake was rectified, but all agreed that Marian's poise was equal even to that situation and that Mr. Christie had found an ideal wife.

RIFAT TIRANA, who was originally Albanian, as you can tell by his name, but who is now a naturalized American, was saying that just before the beginning of the Greek-Italian War he'd had a hunch that he should send news of the family to his father in Albania. So he seized what proved to be the last opportunity to send a cable to his relatives. Mr. Tirana has a lovely-looking American wife and two young children who came with him from New York to Washington when he took a job with the Federal Reserve Board. The Tiranas expect to be in the Capital until spring.

Among Mrs. Warburg's other guests were Mrs. Theodore Achilles and her house guest, Mrs. Vinton Chapin; Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thoron, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Glenn Abbey, Jake Beam and Col. Lowell Riley, who is at the War Department and has formerly had posts in Paris, Vienna and Prague.

M. and Mme. Guy Dal Piaz, formerly of the French Embassy, have been visiting in Washington as house guests of the retiring French Naval Attache and Mme. Benech. During their stay they were entertained at dinner by the Second Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Lucet.

Osa Johnson To Visit Here

Osa Johnson, widow of the famous explorer, Martin Johnson, and herself an expert with gun and camera, will come to Washington next month. She will be entertained at a party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot on Monday evening, December 9, and will show some of her films. The Pinchots have opened their home here after an absence of several months.

Mrs. Johnson recently wrote her autobiography, "I Married Adventure," and proved that she is as able a writer as she is an explorer. She has made several lecture appearances in Washington, always to packed halls, and those invited to Mrs. Pinchot's party are looking forward very much to seeing her again.

Peggy Tuckerman To Fete Fellow Debutantes Today

Miss Peggy Tuckerman, who is here for the week-end from Bryn Mawr, where she is in college, will entertain at a luncheon today for about a dozen of her sister debutantes. The party will be given at Tuxeden, the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman.

Last evening Miss Tuckerman was in Baltimore as the guest of Miss Elizabeth Cassily. She attended the debut dance of Miss Emily Baxter Taylor, given by her parents at the Merchants Club. On Sunday Miss Tuckerman will return to Baltimore for the cocktail party in her honor to be given by Mrs. Tunstall Smith.

Catherine Clement Plans Dec. 20 Fete

Miss Catherine Clement, debutante daughter of Mrs. Donald Bingham, will entertain at a dinner at the Sulgrave Club on December 20 before the dance for Miss Ann Huidekoper at Grasslands. There will be about 30 guests at the dinner.

Coming down from Bryn Mawr on Monday, Miss Clement will return to her studies the following day after attending the Baltimore Bachelors Cotillion.

Another Washington debutante slated for presentation at the cotillion is Miss Marcia O'Brien, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James A. O'Brien. A student at Notre Dame of Maryland, in Baltimore, Miss O'Brien came home a few days ago to entertain at a luncheon for debutantes at Hotel 2400. Her bow to Washington society will take place early in January.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MRS. MINIVER is coming to town. Jan Struther, whose book about a gently philosophical woman who knew all about her family but liked them anyway, is being read all over the country, will be here early in December. Her husband and children are in England while she is lecturing in the United States. Mrs. Struther is described as being "not at all like Mrs. Miniver"—a rather negative description, but all I could garner.

ANOTHER coming attraction is the trip here of the Princeton Triangle Club during the holidays. Many members of society, from debs to old grads, will be glad to hear that the club will give its new show on Christmas Eve afternoon at the National Theater. It is expected that people will at that point be only to grateful for an opportunity to get their minds off tissue paper and string and relax for a few hours.

The Triangle visits to Washington are always marked by a flurry of parties. Mr. and Mrs. David Lawrence will, it's said, give a supper that night for members of the cast. Their son, Mark, has a part in the show.

Members of the Princeton Club will entertain at a buffet luncheon before the show. Samuel Biddle is alumnus chairman of arrangements for the event. There will probably be the usual committee of debutantes and post-debs to assist him. The club last visited Washington two years ago. Many entertainments were given for the cast and there was a huge turnout for the performance.

Mrs. Gale McLean, Sita Finkenstaedt and Alice Barry are the only women members of the committee. Others are Godfrey Kauffmann, George Wheeler, T. Tinsley Adams, Middleton Train and Robert McBryde.

A NEW settler in an old house is Miss Edith Clark, who has just moved into her residence in N Street in Georgetown. This is the row built by a soldier after he returned from fighting in the Revolution. Representative and Mrs. James Wadsworth, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mr. and Mrs. G. Howland Chase and Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt Parker are others who have homes in the row.

Until the war Miss Clark, who is originally from New Orleans, resided in London. She had the house where Charles Dickens lived for a time and where he wrote "David Copperfield." It is one of the most interesting old residences in the British capital. The last Miss Clark heard, the house was still unharmed by bombs.

20th Century Club Revives Drama Section

Overflow Crowd Attends First Luncheon Since Organization; One-Act Comedy 'Bringing Up Saidie,' Features Program

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The revival of the Drama Section of the Twentieth Century Club under the chairmanship of Mrs. Miriam B. Hilton proved its popularity yesterday when an overflow crowd attended the first luncheon since the organization meeting.

More than 60 section members and guests were served in the fourth floor assembly rooms of the Y. W. C. A., and many who could not be accommodated were obliged to eat downstairs in the "Y. W." cafeteria and return later for the program.

This was a presentation of "Bringing Up Sadie," a one-act comedy by Alice A. D. Riley, dealing with a midafternoon session of a culture club. The play under the direction of Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, who had the role of Sadie, a maid in the clubhouse, and Mrs. S. Agnew Greenlees, proved there has been talent going to waste in the club since the time the former drama group disbanded.

Preceding the production, Mrs. Edwin Etz gave a brief review of current plays.

Those in the cast of the comedy, in addition to Mrs. Marvin and Mrs. Greenlees, were: Mrs. Charles Thomas Watson, in the role of the English lady of title, the club's guest speaker; Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt, Mrs. D. Agnew Greenlees, Mrs. Lawrence Martin, Mrs. W. W. Husband, Mrs. Frederick V. Coville, Mrs. Richard Fay Jackson, Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant, Mrs. William T. Clerk, Miss Blanche Polkinhorn.

Hereafter the section will meet on the fourth Thursdays of the month, following the morning meeting of the club board, giving the board members opportunity to stay through and enjoy its programs.

There will be only one section meeting of the Twentieth Century Club in December. That will be on Friday, December 13, when all of the sections in the club will join to hear an address by Caroline Hood, "flying ambassador" of Rockefeller Center. "Behind the Scenes in Rockefeller Center" will be her subject. Mrs. Harold Fowler of the Arts Section, will be in charge of the program.

The meeting of the International Outlook Section which had been scheduled for Monday with Dr. Fritz Ermath, of George Washington University, as speaker, has been canceled as Dr. Ermath has been called out of the city.

Mrs. Anna E. Hendley, who was the founder and president of the former Susan B. Anthony League, has just returned from New York, bringing with her the historic gavel with which the Women's Centennial Congress was opened there on Monday by Miss Josephine Schain. The gavel was used in Chicago in 1920 to open the victory convention of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association of which Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt is president. Mrs. Hendley, long associated with Mrs. Catt in the campaign for woman suffrage amendment, had kept it since and took the "victory" gavel to New York for this week's conclave which also was inspired by Mrs. Catt.

Mrs. Hendley is an honorary life member of the National League of Women Voters of which Mrs. Catt is the founder and honorary president. Two years ago she presented to Woodrow Wilson High School a large portrait of Susan B. Anthony, painted by the late Jerome K. Uhl, which originally had hung in the headquarters of the Anthony League at 1626 Rhode Island

Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., State president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in the District, has just returned from the general convention of the organization, held in Montgomery, Ala. She is now in the midst of plans for the State convention to be held next Saturday at the Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont Avenue.

Mrs. Charles Edward Bolling, of Richmond, Va., president general, will attend, and a tea in her honor will be given from 5 to 7 in the afternoon, following the business session in the morning.

There are ten chapters of the U. D. C. in the District.

Pi Beta Phi Benefit Slated For Wednesday

Alumnae Give Proceeds Of Annual Event to Aid Settlement School

The Washington Alumnae Club of Pi Beta Phi Sorority, which has a membership of more than 600, will sponsor its annual settlement school benefit next Wednesday at 8 p. m., at the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase. There will be dancing, bridge, a style show in which 12 members of the junior group of the alumnae and the active chapter at George Washington University will model, and an exhibition of settlement school products.

Mrs. Frederick M. Babcock is general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Ralph Harris and Mrs. S. L. Sommers in general arrangements. Mrs. Donald Bernard is food chairman, assisted by Miss Jean Harris, Mrs. Arthur Nesbitt and Mrs. Edgar Poe Allen. Mrs. Duncan Campbell is exhibition chairman, assisted by Mrs. Marion McCoy and Mrs. Victor Knoop, head of the junior group.

Mrs. R. H. Pledger is president of the Washington alumnae.

The exhibition of products from the settlement school in Gatlinburg, Tenn., which is Pi Beta Phi's chief philanthropic project, will comprise principally handwoven linen, tweeds by the yard and bathroom accessories.

The art of weaving was revived and stimulated on the founding of the school in 1909. It receives pupils from the kindergarten through high school and is owned, supported and operated through contributions from the active and alumnae members of the sorority.

One corner of the clubhouse will be furnished Wednesday as an early American room, providing a background for the exhibition of weaving, showing the complete process as taught by the early settlers of the Great Smoky Mountains and the method taught in 1940 by teachers employed at the school.

Adults are encouraged to weave in their homes under specified instructors and thereby enabled to earn weekly salaries while carrying on their household responsibilities.

Near East Benefit Bazaar Opens Monday

Multitude of Exotic Articles to Go On Sale at Carlton

The Near East Refugee Handicrafts Bazaar, will open at the Carlton Hotel Monday morning, with most the articles on sale having arrived from Greece within the past week.

The interesting handwoven fabrics, rare designs and exquisite colors all have been copied from ancient pieces in the museums in Athens. There are also wool rugs from Yanina, raw silk runners in Epirus designs, kimonas from the Island of Crete, children's chairs from Skyros, dolls from many districts and many islands, wild Hymettus honey luncheon sets from the Island of Rhodes. Athens and the entire Attica District are represented by a wide variety of articles.

Greece, 17 years ago took in 1,500,000 Asia Minor refugees. Among the refugees were many thousand Near East relief children. Since that time, first the Near East Relief and later, its successor, Near East Foundation has worked with the Greek government in its great welfare program. One project has been buying raw material and employing hundreds of refugee women to use their natural talents for weaving and embroidering, so that they might support themselves and their dependents.

The committee of Washington women, which is sponsoring this sale, with few exceptions, is the same group which has been working every year to help create a market in America for this work.

The sale will be held at the Carlton Hotel on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, from 10 to 6. There is no charge for admission.

Bazaar Planned for Goods Labeled 'Made In Czecho-Slovakia'

There is still merchandise available which bears the label, "made in Czecho-Slovakia," and will be sold at the bazaar to be given December 3, 4 and 5 at 1210 Eighteenth Street.

The sale will be held under the sponsorship of Mme. Hurban, wife of the Minister from Czecho-Slovakia; Dr. Alice Masaryk, of Chicago, daughter of the former president, Thomas Masaryk, and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, wife of the former United States Minister to the nation. Articles made by Czecho-Slovakian women in America, some from Czecho-Slovakia which have been in warehouses here since before the German invasion, and others which were in the Czech pavilion at the World's Fair, will be included.

There will be ceramics, glassware, handiwork of all kinds, dolls and a collection of fine etchings by Czech artists such as were a feature of the bazaar last year and one of which was purchased by Mrs. Roosevelt the day she attended.

Mrs. Paul G. Garber, to whom the building at 1210 Eighteenth Street belongs, has given the use of it this year again for the event. There is a large window for the display of wares for sale and a balcony, overlooking the salesroom where tea will be served.

Proceeds of the bazaar will go to the relief fund for the thousands of refugees who were evacuated from France to England just before the fall of France and who now are doing their part in the defense of Britain.

Root Quits Park Post For Interior

Chief Engineer Of Commission For 13 Years Takes Higher Paid Office

Irving C. Root, since 1927 chief engineer for the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, has resigned his post and has accepted a position with the Interior Department, it was learned last night.

ROOT

Root has been assigned to a technical and administrative post in the department, it was learned. He was reported by one source to have been assigned the post of superintendent of National Capital Parks, long vacant, but this could not be immediately confirmed.

Root resigned the $6,000-a-year Maryland post Wednesday to take the higher salaried Federal job. The Montgomery County commissioners, it was learned, offered him a salary increase when informed of his resignation, but the offer was refused.

Served 13 Years

The Maryland-National Capital Park Planning Commission is the park planning agency responsible for development of park areas in nearby Maryland and their integration with the District park system.

In the 13 years he has served the commission, Root has directed the development of park areas in Rock Creek and Sligo Valleys and along Cabin John Run and the Northwest Branch.

Root could not be reached last night for comment on reports that his appointment to head the District park system would be announced by Secretary of Interior Ickes today. If named to the District post, Root would succeed C. Marshall Finnan, long superintendent of Capital parks who was transferred in 1939 to take charge of Zion and Bryce Canyon National Parks in Utah, and Edmund Burrell Rogers.

Rogers Back West

Rogers, brought from the superintendency of Yellowstone National Park to fill the post pending a special Civil Service examination requested by Ickes last February, has returned to Yellowstone. During the many months that the post has been vacant, Frank T. Gartside, the assistant superintendent, and Francis F. Gillen have been acting superintendents.

Root, author of several treatises on zoning and community development, has been associated with city planning projects since 1918. He was born May 21, 1891, at Topeka, Kans. Married and the father of one child, he lives at 6301 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

Man's World Seen Changing Owners

The country's not going where pessimists think it is—to the dogs—but to the women, according to Dr. Virgil D. Reed, assistant director of the Census Bureau.

The male contingent of the Nation's population is slowly but surely losing its numerical superiority. He told the Washington Academy of Sciences at the Cosmos Club last night.

Though there are 57,000 more males born every year than females, Dr. Reed said, 150,000 more of them die than women. While there are still 2,000,000 more men in the country than women, he added, the 1940 census showed the female population gained 100,000 more than the male.

Auto accidents—"because there are more men drivers"—heart disease, suicides, influenza, pneumonia and tuberculosis are the principal causes of male deaths, Dr. Reed said. Cancer, tumors and diabetes are the leading death agencies for women, he declared.

For the first decade in its history, Dr. Reed reported, the United States showed an immigration loss—50,000.

Abandoned Baby Identified; Mother Not Yet Located

The two-week-old boy who was left on the steps of St. John's Orphanage Wednesday night was identified yesterday through birth records at Gallinger Hospital, but the mother had still not been located last night.

Within a few hours after the mother and baby were released from the hospital Wednesday afternoon, the baby had been abandoned and the mother had disappeared, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau, said.

A social worker with an agency here told last night of plans which had been made for the young mother and baby to go to a maternity home. She would not accept the plans, saying that she was making arrangements through a friend to get a room at a boarding house for herself and the baby and then to look for a job.

When she left the hospital she went to a rooming house where she had stayed for a short time previously. She paused there for about an hour, picked up the clothes which she had left there and departed with the baby. A few hours later he was found on the orphanage steps at 1922 F Street Northwest.

A dressing which the baby worse was recognized as the kind used at Gallinger. There his identity was established. Doctors said the baby is in good health and had not suffered from exposure.

A social worker who had helped to arrange care for the mother expressed surprise at her disappearance. "As far as I know, she never mentioned to anyone that she expected to give up the baby," the worker said. "She spoke of keeping it with her at a boarding house."

The mother, who is in her 20's, had been employed here and hoped to get back her job or find a new one here, it was said. She gave little or no information about her former home or any relatives.

'Front-Door' Robber Vanishes When Woman Victim Screams

A new mode in holdups—at the front door of a residence—was reported to police last night.

And it may not be according to Emily Post, but future visitors to the home of Mrs. Fred W. Vincent, 120 C Street Northeast, may have to shout through the door before they are admitted.

Mrs. Vincent told police she left her husband and her sister, Miss Virginia Ross, at the dinner table in response to a knock at her door.

"A tall, swarthy man," she told police, asked if she were Mrs. Vincent, and when she answered in the affirmative, he leveled a nickle-plated revolver at her, saying "This is a holdup, ma'm."

When Mrs. Vincent screamed for her husband the unwelcome visitor ran away. In his shirt sleeves, Vincent, who is a student bandmaster at the Navy School of Music and a former Navy football player, pursued the man a block and a half.

"Gun or no gun, I would have felled him with a flying tackle, had I been able to catch up with him," said Vincent, who lost the fugitive in the street crowds.

Mrs. Vincent said she had $350 in her purse yesterday and later exchanged the sum for travelers checks. She told police she believed the man who sought to rob her might have seen the money while she was at the store.

'Western Night'

Western High School's traditional "Western Night" will be presented by the music department of the school in the auditorium at 8 p. m. today. The program will consist of selections by the school orchestra and choral groups, piano and vocal solos and dances.

John Snure, jr., of Silver Spring, took a job with the Selective Service Board public relations office at $3,200 a year and began work September 1.

He received no pay check until November 1.

Snure, naturally, inquired. He learned that his name had not been entered on the books as a Government employe until October 15.

Yesterday, it was revealed, Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren ruled that Snure could not get the back pay.

Use of Type for Propaganda Assailed

NOTABLES AT DINNER—John J. Deviny, appeals counsel of the Social Security Board, guest speaker; John C. Rout, president and master of ceremonies, and Alvin W. Hall, director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, attended last night's dinner of the Bureau's Quarter Century Club

The art of printing was first used to spread truth and enlightenment—but now in Germany the land where the press was invented, it is used to demoralize civilization in the form of propaganda, declared John J. Deviny last night in a talk before 85 members of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing's Quarter-Century Club.

Deviny, who began as a plate printer in the bureau 35 years ago and became assistant director before resigning 13 years ago, is former president of the International Association of Printing House Craftsmen. He addressed the second annual dinner of the Quarter-Century Club in the bureau's cafeteria.

Alvin W. Hall, director of the bureau, and Frank C. Wilson, chief of the United States Secret Service, were among the honored guests at the affair which was presided over by John C. Rout, the club's president.

Oldest member present from point of service in the bureau was Franklin T. Howe, who has completed 49 years in the engineering division.

D. C. Airport Planning Is Defended

Buildings Can Be Quadrupled, Asserts CAB; No Criticism Meant, Expert Says

The area of terminal buildings at Washington's new National Airport may be quadrupled without resort to alteration in design, officials of the Civil Aeronautics Board declared last night in reply to an assertion by an expert here that facilities at the field would have to be extensively changed to keep pace with the development of commercial aviation.

At the same time, the expert, Capt. L. L. Odell, engineering consultant of Pan American Airways and one of the advisers on construction of National Airport, explained he had not meant to criticize planning of the field. He explained in a telegram to Civil Aeronautics officials that he had intended to emphasize the necessity of a National policy of building airports well beyond present day needs.

While Capt. Odell stated that the Washington airport "may be expected to become saturated with traffic by 1947," Civil Aeronautics officials pointed out that the master plan for Gravelly Point contemplates possible construction of parallel runways for each of the present runways.

The field itself, it was pointed out, may be materially expanded by further filling at both the north and south ends.

Airport buildings, it was said, have been located in such a way that they may be expanded in all directions save toward the landing area, with one-half mile of unused space available for future hangars.

The only fixed part of the terminal building, it was cited, is the center containing the waiting room. The building may be expanded one-half mile to the north and 500 yards to the south, it was stated. Twenty loading stations in addition to the present 14 may also be constructed.

One hangar now being built would admit a plane with a 175-foot wing span, about 35 feet larger than the biggest existing air transports. Subsequent hangars will allow for a wingspan of 223 feet.

Citizens' Group Asks Cab Rate Readjustment

A plea for a more equitable readjustment of taxicab rates in the Northeast sector was made last night at a meeting of the Fort Davis Citizens Association.

The group adopted a resolution sponsored by Arris H. Bacas requesting the Public Utilities Commission to give immediate attention to the matter.

The group indorsed the Fisher report on the use of natural gas in the District to effect a consumer saving and a move urging the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to expedite development of Popes Run Parkway to improve sewage facilities in the area.

New committee names included the appointment of J. E. Matthews as delegates to the federation and L. L. Schleicher and M. H. Shuck as co-chairmen of the membership commitee. Mrs. William Cameron was added as a member of the entertainment committee, while James Kirby was made a member of the education committee.

The association adopted a suggested amendment to extend its eastern boundary from Alabama to Southern Avenue and changed the first meeting date from September to October with the last falling in May instead of June.

December meeting was postponed to January 23 at the home of William Cameron, 1500 Thirty-fifth Street Southeast.

Mother Saves Her 3 Children As Fire Routs 50

A 26-year-old mother half-carried and half-dragged her three children to safety last night when a two-alarm fire routed 50 residents of a three-story dwelling at 901 R Street Northwest.

Awakened by fumes in her attic apartment, Mrs. Agnes Davis, colored, aroused her three children, Rochester, 8; Yvonne, 6, and Edward, 5, and screaming to warn the neighbors, led them through flame and smoke to the street.

A six-year-old child was rescued yesterday by a fireman who was injured in breaking a window to reach the girl trapped in a second floor room at 17 Myrtle Street Northeast. Both the child, Pauline Cunningham, and the rescuer, Pvt. J. C. Cook, of No. 1 Truck Co., were taken to Emergency Hospital. The child was treated for asphyxiation, Cook, for a cut on his right arm.

Soft-Spoken Woman Who Uses Cookies Has a Way With Her

By Charles E. Mercer

There was a pleasant, soft-spoken lady who lived in a small home at 4822 Forty-first Street Northwest and she had so much trouble with children throwing stones and trampling down her lawn that she didn't know what to do. So one day she called in the children and gave them some cookies and they all got the idea of forming a club.

They called it the High Point Club. And now if you're between the ages of 3 and 15 and live anywhere in the area bounded by Davenport and Fessenden Streets and Belt Road and Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, and you aren't a High Pointer, you're missing a lot of fun.

The High Pointers held a club meeting last night at the Dugout—which is the cellar of 4822 Forty-first Street where they used to tear up the lawn. Miss Elizabeth Rounds, the soft-spoken lady who got tired of having her home treated like a corner lot, was there. So was Private C. C. Brown, of the Eighth Precinct, who's had more peace since the club was formed.

Most of the High Pointers—nearly a score of them—were there, trying not to be disorderly in their enthusiasm over High Pointism.

Elwood White, 15, the president of the High Pointers, called the meeting to order.

Jane Darcey, 14, vice president, and Madeline Campbell, 13, secretary, explained that the merit system is used exclusively in the club. A week of good conduct and you get an A, a month of A's and you get a gold star. "It works, too," said Jane, "the club's getting bigger all the time."

Madeline said "it's getting so big we're starting clubs in the club—an ice skating club and all sorts like that."

It takes a long time to become the highest kind of High Pointer. You start out by becoming "a straight shooter." Then, come the following steps: study, clean language, pure thoughts, respect for the property of others, loyalty to country and flag, honesty, and finally a good neighbor.

"There's going to be a Christmas party with a Coristmas tree," said Miss Rounds. "And Santa Claus will come—he'll come if everybody is a good High Pointer."

Central Northeast Civic Unit Celebrates 21st Anniversary

The Central North East Civic Association celebrates its twenty-first anniversary this fall by intensifying its drive for improved playground facilities and health conditions in the Northeast sector.

LONGUS

Organized in September, 1919, the association met for years in the old Henry Smothers School, a four-room frame building. Members recall that lamps had to be carried to the building for each meeting, no lights being in the school.

The organization later succeeded in having the present Smothers School built at Forty-fourth and Clay Streets Northeast, where meetings are now held on the third Tuesday of each month.

The civic unit serves a Northeast area bounded by Minnesota Avenue and Benning Road to the District Line, and by Watts Branch and Forty-eighth Street.

First president of the body was Lieut. Col. Howard D. Queen, now president of the Federation of Civic Associations, who has since moved from the Northeast area. Other original officers were Arthur Brown, vice president; W. P. Edmonds, treasurer; Charles F. A. Longus, secretary, and the Rev. A. D. Holder, chaplain.

The association was organized as the Benning, Glendale, Oakland Citizens Association, the name later being changed to the Central North East Civic.

Standing committees, appointed by the president, are membership, program and finance. Officers are elected at special meetings in October.

Current officers include Charles F. A. Longus, president; G. G. Fletcher, vice president; W. C. Burruss, financial secretary; M. C. Ellison, recording secretary; J. H. Pye, treasurer; the Rev. Julius S. Carroll, chaplain, and James E. Ross, sergeant at arms.

Sniper Case Arraignment Set for Today

Eklund, 25-Year-Old Engineer, Faces Death Penalty If Convicted

Less than 24 hours after hearing evidence of three recent "sniper" slayings, the District grand jury yesterday indicted John E. Eklund, 25, former engineering student, on three charges of first-degree murder.

Eklund is scheduled to be arraigned before Justice F. Dickinson Letts of the District Court at 10 a. m. today. Should he be convicted the mandatory penalty would be death by electrocution.

Theodore J. Goffney, 45, colored, 823½ Twenty-sixth Street Northwest, and Sam Banks, 54, colored, were found dead on a bench in front of Banks' home, 2600 I Street Northwest, at 12:50 a. m. on Sunday, October 6. Both had been shot in the back of the head.

The "sniper" struck again at 1 a. m., October 15. Fatally injured by a bullet wound in the back of his head was Hylan George McClaine, 17, colored, 1031 Thirtieth Street Northwest, who was felled while walking on Rock Creek Parkway near Virginia Avenue with Mildred Washington, 17, colored, 2323 Virginia Avenue Northwest.

The girl saw the fleeing gunman and gave the police his detailed description. Weeks later Eklund was arrested by Capt. Walter Storm, Lieut. Robert Barrett and Detective Lester W. Rank, of No. 3 Precinct, who followed a lead given them by an undisclosed tipster. Mildred Washington identified him as the assailant.

Bullets declared to have been fired into a tree by Eklund were said by ballistics experts to be identical with those which killed the three men. Assistant District Attorneys John W. Fihelly and Evan T. Davis presented this and other evidence to the grand jurors Thursday.

Eklund has retained Attorney James R. Kirkland to defend him at his trial, which probably will be held early in January.

Marlene Dietrich Smashes Hearts, Heads and the Navy at RKO-Keith's

'Seven Sinners' Is A 'Rainy' Oriental Melodrama, Augmented By Clever Shorts

"SEVEN SINNERS." Universal picturization of a story by Harry Tugend, Ladislas Fodor and Laszlo Vadnai, adapted to the screen by John Meehan, starring Marlene Dietrich, with John Wayne, Broderick Crawford, Mischa Auer, Albert Dekker, Billy Gilbert, Anna Lee, Oscar Homolka and Samuel S. Hinds. Directed by Tay Garnett. At RKO-Keith's.

The sloe-eyed, sultry and sulphurous Dietrich is back again in "Seven Sinners." As Bijou, the seductive balladist of the Malayan bistros, she sings her smoky songs sighs nebulous nothings into the ears of her polyglot army of admirers, causes her employers many apoplectic moments by precipitating prodigious brawls in their shady establishments and gets herself deported with a regularity that finds her "running out of islands" early in the action. Besides that, she almost wrecks the United States Navy!

BELL

It would take a spectator with a microscopic eye to detect anything arty, dainty or delicate in "Seven Sinners." The story of smouldering fascinations, homicidal infatuations and tropical demoralization dreamed up by Ladislas Fodor and Laszio Vadnai, and adapted to the incinerating uses of the cinema by John Meehan and Harry Tugend, has many of the overtones of an elaborated "Rain" and all of the undertones of a stormy Saturday night in the back room down at Mike the Mauler's, with a dash of "Blue Angel" thrown in. Gossamer or not, the galvanic goings-on are gosh-awful diverting in a rowdy, waterfront sort of way.

Bijou is enough of a lady to fall genuinely in love with the handsome young naval lieutenant, who also fills the eye of the Governor's daughter, give him up for the further glory of all concerned and return to the kindly ship's doctor who has "deported" her to the island and is on hand to help her flee it one step ahead of the official edict. Through all this wreckage of romantic ardors, hearts' desires and the Seven Sinners Cafe there blows a gentle breeze of comedy and a typhoon of physical violence. After the stevedore blitzkrieg has exterminated the venal Antro and his malignant mob, the Seven Sinners looks as if the Messerschmidts really had passed that way.

As the motivating influence in all this demolition, Marlene Dietrich reasserts her right to an individual niche in the Hall of the Infamous. For one who has been shuttled about the atolls as continuously as she, her wardrobe is something to see. So are the renowned anatomical perfections which it so artlessly reveals. And "Man Overboard," "The Man's in the Navy" and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," as sung in Miss Dietrich's inflammatory gutturals, are not hard on the ears, either.

Although she is most of it, Dietrich is not quite the whole show. As Lieut. Bruce Whitney, all starched up in his white uniforms, John Wayne has a role that fits him much more snugly than his Swedish sailor in "The Long Voyage Home." The lad throws a smile and a fist that are equally destructive. Antro, the knife-throwing menace to all of the film's honest plans, is sturdily and threateningly played by Oscar Homolka, an actor whose talents soar far above this kind of thing and therefore are a little more than equal to all he is called upon to do here.

For that comedy breeze we were speaking about, there are Billy Gilbert, as the puffy proprietor of the Seven Sinners; Broderick Crawford, as Bijou's bodyguard, and Mischa Auer, a light-fingered magician, who is along just for the ride. Samuel S. Hinds, as the Governor, and Anna Lee, as his daughter, are necessary but negligible, if that can be made to add up.

As an aid in getting the smoke out of your eyes, the new bill at RKO-Keith's also includes Walt Disney's color-cartoon, "Goofy's Glider," one of his more lunatic creations; a new release of "Information Please," with Anna Neagle as the expert, and the Pathe News, as auxiliaries of a feature that packs not one punch, but a million!

Her Name Is Bijou in This One

as a carefree and tempestuous cafe entertainer in Universal's production of "Seven Sinners," her first screen appearance since her memorable performance with Jimmy Stewart in "Destry Rides Again." She is supported by a sturdy cast, including John Wayne, Broderick Crawford, Oscar Homolka, Albert Dekker, Billy Gilbert and Mischa Auer. "Seven Sinners" is currently on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater

Earle's "Lady With Red Hair" Concerns Mrs. Leslie Carter

By Richard L. Coe.

"LADY WITH RED HAIR." Warner Brothers' picturization of a screen play by Charles Kenyon and Milton Krims, from the story by N. Brewster Morse and Norbert Falkner based on the memoirs of Mrs. Leslie Carter, starring Miriam Hopkins, with Claude Rains, Richard Ainley, Laura Hope Crews, Helen Westley, John Litel, Mona Barrie, Victor Jory, Cecil Kellaway, Fritz Leiber, Johnnie Russell and Selmer Jackson. Directed by Kurt Bernhardt. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

That artful housetop-shouter, Alexander Woollcott, has made the name of Mrs. Leslie Carter not unfamiliar to a generation which saw her act but infrequently. Yesterday, at the Earle, Warner Brothers presented a screen adaptation of her early years on the stage, titled "Lady with Red Hair," a film that is interesting for its setting of another theatrical day but both unexciting in its pace and uninspired in its writing.

Since Mrs. Carter died only three years ago this month—and a colorful figure she was even at the age of 75—Warners' problems in presenting an "authentic" biography have been complicated by copyrights of plays with which she was inextricably associated and by not stepping on the toes of those connected with her story who are now living.

Consequently, there is no mention of "The Heart of Maryland," which had its premiere in this city 45 years ago; there is no "ZaZa" or "Dubarry," though similar stories under fictitious titles are hinted; the child custody suit, which determined her to seek wealth on the stage, is sketchy and unconvincing. The authenticity which any first rate biography must have is therefore scrambled and hazy.

Helen Westley Amuses

In its casting, "Lady with Red Hair" is more fortunate than in its pedestrian writing. Miriam Hopkins, herself an actress of color and vigor, has the title role and gives the lines more understanding than they deserve. Claude Rains is a somewhat baffled David Belasco, while that admirable lady, Helen Westley, is outstanding as the realistically-minded keeper of a theatrical boarding house. An English stage actor, Richard Ainley, makes an undistinguished debut as Mrs. Carter's second husband.

The story has its beginnings in a Chicago courtroom of 1890 where Mrs. Leslie Carter is losing the custody of her small son as the result of idle gossip. Mother love propels her to the stage where she hopes to find enough fortune and celebrity to win him back. But by the time she has undergone the trials of climbing the Belasco ladder, the boy has been taught to distrust his mother and, after turning a Chicago audience's hisses to applause, she realizes that while glory is hers, her cause is lost. Her not entirely unexpected marriage to Lou Payne ruffles the ever-ruffable Belasco. That ascetic Svengall whips her faltering career into shape albeit and all's tied up for a regulation film finale.

Cheers for Badminton

A fast game of badminton, played by Champs Ken Davidson and Hugh Forgie, gives the Earle stage revue a wondrously different zing. The badminton boys will love it; the squatter novices will find it completely energizing. It's the best thing to happen in a long while and, with the "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" business in mind, one feels he has a perfect right to ask "How About Badmintin'" with Davidson and Forgie for the customers?" Here's one ticket-buyer who'd enjoy losing a pound of flesh to Messrs. Davidson and Forgie.

There is also a regulation act of the first order on the Earle stage, those comical Briants, "the world's most expensive moving men." They are the pantomimic gents who look like fugitives from an ashcan and their particular style is unbeatable.

Evelyn Farney, a tapping lass with a pleasant zest, and Jean Travers, a soprano with little need for the Earle's microphone, are the other principals on the stage. The Roxyettes have several new routines, the best a ping pong exercise, and Eileen Ritter's "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" specializes on "Baby" songs—in the title, not in the singing style—after a week's absence.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 28.

SEPARATION: A newspaper front-paged a report that the George Jessels had separated and that Lois Andrew was on her way to Reno. The other newspapers immediately sent reporters to the hotel where the Jessels live, to secure an interview . . . When they telephoned for permission to come up, George yawned and said: "What's the rush? Why don't you guys wait until noon and see me at the theater?" . . . "It's about an important story," their spokesmen informed, "and we've been assigned to confirm it" . . . They went upstairs, entered the Jessel suit and found Lois asleep . . . "Sh!" cautioned George. "Talk quietly, so's not to awaken her. Now, what is it?" They held up the front-page story of the separation . . . "It's true," yawned Jessel, returning to his dreams. "We're separated."

AMITY: A movie producer who returned from Paris last week reported this story: At the Cafe Dome two Nazi officers seated themselves at a table and ordered cocktails. Then they noticed two customers, of Oriental appearance, seated near by . . . They called the head waiter and ordered him to tell those dogs-in-the-shape-of-men to leave . . . Reluctantly the head waiter obeyed, but the duo refused. Instead they shouted profanities concerning the Nazi officers and their ilk. The Germans drew their pistols, approached the two men and demanded: "Show us your papers, swine" . . . The men obliged and showed the papers, which put the Nazis to flight . . . They were attaches of the Soviet Embassy.

ROMANCE: A photographer employed by Look magazine went to Norma Shearer's home recently to photograph the interior . . . In the living room he found a picture of George Raft. The autograph read: "We can't get a profile of Boyer, but will you settle for this one?"

TRIUMPH: Marc Blitzstein, who wrote "The Cradle Will Rock," soon will apply for a renewal of his Guggenheim Fellowship . . . Blitzstein applied for the fellowship for 9 successive years. For the first 8 years his applications contained detailed plans for the wildest projects conceivable in music. Each time, for 8 years, the Guggenheim Foundation rejected his application. Last year, in asking for the fellowship, he simply stated: "For creative work in musical composition, especially for the musical stage." And for this he won the fellowship.

ENTERPRISE: Jim Farley will join the pilgrimage of goodwill emissaries to South America shortly after the New Year. Farley, for whom the Pan-American leaders have high regard, will make the trip purely as a business executive—representing a soft drink company.

CHATTER: Al Jolson will inaugurate a new policy, which he hopes the other producers will emulate. He will invite all New York conscriptees, before they leave for camp, to be his guests at "Hold Your Hats, Boys" . . . When Michael Todd revives the "Man From Cairo"—his flop show, in which he will adopt the suggestions made by all the reviewers who panned it—he will call it "The Man From Cairo Strikes Back" . . . The London Daily Express now refers to the city as "Crater London" and has started a movement to disband the Army and have the damage repaired.

MISTAKE: Sherwood Anderson, who is visiting here now, told of the many occasions in which people confused him with Maxwell Anderson and Robert E. Sherwood. "It was tough to take in those early years," said Anderson, "but now—now they're doing a lot to build me up" . . . Last week he received a letter from a Lutheran minister explaining his reluctance to register for conscription. Anderson forwarded it to the man for whom it really was intended, Robert E. Sherwood, author of "There Shall Be No Night" . . . "And as for Maxwell Anderson," confessed Sherwood Anderson, "many's the good-looking blonde I told I was writing a part in a play especially for her."

"Rangers of Fortune" Crowded By Stage and Capitol "Family"

"RANGERS OF FORTUNE." Paramount picturization of an original screen play by Frank Butler, featuring Fred MacMurray, Albert Dekker and Gilbert Roland, with Patricia Morison, Joseph Schildkraut, Dick Foran, Betty Brewer, Arthur Allen, Bernard Nedell, Brandon Tynan, Minor Watson and Rose Turich. Directed by Sam Wood. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Rivalry between the Rockets and the Capitol Theater Orchestra has gotten to the stage where it's hard to tell which is which.

For all of the bandsmen are dancing in ballet skirts this week and the Rockets wind up as an orchestra, playing banjos, pianos, drums, trumpets and mouth organs. Who's getting the better of this contest is hard to say. The orchestra boys pirouette like a lot of ducks; their ankles are not exactly lovely—but how they get the laughs! Still, each of the Rockets plays five instruments and that makes them versatile musicians, even if they'd have some trouble in landing contracts with Jimmy Dorsey. But the romping around in each others' jobs by the boys and girls is all to the good as diversion.

Professional jealousy between Maestro Sam Jack Kaufman and Art Brown is becoming more hectic, too. They're constantly battling for the "mike;" toss insults around like confetti. If this keeps on, the only thing left for them will be a fast 15 rounds with the Queensberry rules omitted.

Mimicry of notables becomes a fine art in the adept hands of Peter Lind Hayes, heading the stage show. He recreates a dozen odd celebrities known to everybody. But rarest of the group is his impression of Robert Montgomery in "Night Must Fall," a purely dramatic bit. Other flashes that will lay you low are of Charles Laughton, Guy Lombardo, Charles Boyer and the freres Barrymore. They're all distinctive, brilliantly spiced with satire.

Wilbur Hall does things to a violin. Things that enthused the audience so much that they encored him into a state of exhaustion at yesterday's first show. You'll remember Wilbur as former top comedian with Paul Whiteman. Other pleasant and diverting people on the stage bill are Ed Steffee, Washington's own fine barytone; the Emerald Sisters, a pair of extra peppery tomboys; Seymour and Picture, a pair of graceful and bright young dancers, and Katherine Westfield and her marionettes, which include our friend, Donald Duck and on roller skates, if you please.

"Rangers of Fortune," the Capitol's current celluloid feature, is what you might call a newspaper horse opera. If there were any horses worth mentioning. Which there weren't. But there is a newspaper, a one-page affair, selling for a dollar a copy at the point of Fred MacMurray's pistol. The irate subscribers rebel at this form of high-pressure salesmanship and try to lynch Mr. MacMurray and friends Gilbert Ronald and Albert Dekker. Don't say at this point, "Aw-w! That reviewer is making up that stuff as she goes along." These are actual occurrences in the picture. Perhaps all editors should see it. Anyway, it has original ideas on circulation boosting.

This unusual cinema begins with MacMurray, Ronald and Dekker about to be executed for gun-running (And perhaps it should have ended there). But the boys escape their deserved fate and go skally-hooting over the Western landscape until they encounter an aged editor, who's just been run out of town, and his little granddaughter. From then on they're in the newspaper business and heaven help the reading public! Anyway, there's lots of action and you'll never go to sleep.

Considerable good acting pops up from time to time. Most impressive is Joseph Schildkraut, who dominates every instant that he's on the screen. Albert Dekker succeeds in being very funny, off and on. And little Betty Brewer contributes a genuinely attractive and appealing part as the little granddaughter.—MARY HARRIS.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Nov. 28.

What a set for the Eddie Robinson-John Garfield co-starrer, "The Sea Wolf," in which Eddie plays the meanest guy on land or sea. They had two feet of water the other day, with prop men and electricians doing their work in rubber pants as they wandered around in the water. And up on deck Director Mike Curtiz, who's happiest when he's megging a realistic rough-and-tumble fight scene, was giving a pep talk to 300 cute water - front cut - throats: "Now, the most important thing is to make this fight natural—but be sure you go to the studio doctor as soon as we finish the take. I don't want any of you guys going around with broken bones and not knowing it!"

While on tour, Binnie Barnes is reading plays which Max Gordon sends her, and if she finds one to suit her, will probably return to New York after the first of the year and do one for him . . . One of the sights of the town is watching Rochester roll up to the studio with three stooges in his wake. (Bob Hope has eleven!) Mae West used to put on that kind of swank, but Mae hasn't been seen hereabouts lately, so Rochester and Hope remain in a class by themselves—you see, they don't want to be lonesome!

Ginger Rogers, who's just finished doing "Kitty Foyle," has been appointed an honorary member of "The Career Women of San Francisco" . . . The other day Bette Davis watched George Brent play a scene with a bit actor in "Far Horizon" which reminded her of a scene in Brent's first picture with Ruth Chatterton, "The Rich Are Always With Us"—with this difference: the bit in that was played by Bette Davis. And don't let anyone kid you—that's why most people stay in Hollywood.

Speaking of "Far Horizon," Hattie McDaniel and her brother Sam play cook and houseman in that picture, and Director Edmund Goulding has arranged for Hattie to sing her own number "Mammy's Meditations," which she did on her personal appearance tour . . . When someone asked Bette Davis the other day if the antiques on the set were genuine, she said, "They should be. They've been decorating my own home ever since 'Jezebel'."

Near "The Invisible Woman" set, Charles Ruggles was watching iron workers, constructing a new sound stage and walking about on girders a hundred feet in the air. Turning to a strapping young man standing near, Charlie remarked, "I wouldn't do that for a million dollars." "I would—for five," said the man. Charlie whipped out a fiver and waved it under the man's nose. "Go ahead," he said. Man went over to the tift, and in a jiffy he was trotting from girder to girder at the top of the iron work. When he came down, Charlie offered him the five dollars again, but he refused. He was William Haade, the actor who was formerly a New York iron worker and now raises minks in his spare moments.. You saw him last in "North West Mounted Police."

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Cleveland, Nov. 28 (INS).—Honeymooning Loretta Young and Tom Lewis slipped back into Hollywood so quietly a week ago that many of their best friends haven't seen them. The reason for dodging the social whirl is that Loretta has been closing a deal to star in Frank Lloyd's "Lady From Cheyenne," her first picture in many months. Loretta is particularly happy because Tom Lewis has arranged his Eastern advertising affairs so he can remain with her while the picture is being made.

PARSONS

"Lady From Cheyenne" is a political comedy set in the days of the early suffragettes and is based on the true story of the enterprising femme who got the State of Wyoming to ratify women's votes. However, it won't be a Western so far as Loretta is concerned, because her role is that of a Philadelphia debutante who moves in on Wyoming politics. Not only will Frank Lloyd produce the yarn, he'll personally direct and, of course, it is for Universal release.

Henry Fonda, of the "Grapes of Wrath" Fondas, takes Ty Power's place in "The Great American Broadcast." Hank's starring in a musical isn't as funny as you might think. If you remember, he cut quite a caper playing a hot trumpet when he, Nancy Kelly, Tyrone Power and Jimmy Stewart went down to Texas not so long ago for the British war relief show in Houston. In fact, Hank was the life of the party and the Texans were crazy about him. He used to do college musicals, too. Tyrone goes into "Blood and Sand" right away and won't be free to do Twentieth's radio musical—hence the switch. Interesting to radio fans is that the Oxford trio make their debut in "The Great American Broadcast" and also those splendid comedians from the "Folies Bergere," the three Wiere brothers.

Jane Wyatt, who is in Jesse Lasky's show, "Quiet Please," in New York, is flying back to the coast and Warners for the femme lead opposite Dennis Morgan in "She Stayed Kissed." Jane has certainly had her ups and downs in Hollywood. She created a stir a few years ago when she played with Ronald Colman in "Lost Horizon." Then she married and retired for a couple of years, only to crop up unexpectedly a few months ago with Chester Morris in "Girl From God's Country," for Republic. The stage reviewers thought her very good when the Lasky play made its debut in Los Angeles.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Rumors from London are that the David Nivens are expecting the stork. David's bride is very popular and she has worked so hard in the women's auxiliary air force; Deanna Durbin will be 19 next Wednesday—and watch for a date for her wedding to Vaughan Paul to be announced any day. Speaking of Deanna, she's been voted the No. 1 favorite of the British-American ambulance corp in London and she's recording a song to be sent to them via short wave on Christmas day; their friends say the Olivia de Havilland-Burgess Meredith night-clubbing isn't as serious as it might appear from their every-night dates. Olivia is terribly anxious to do a stage show and Burgess has been putting her onto the ropes.

Milton Berle isn't keeping it a secret that he's head over heels about Mary Beth Hughes; the John Considine baby (it will be their third) is expected some time around New Year's Eve; Hugh Herbert has been handed a five-year straight contract with Universal. Nice Christmas gift to know you'll have income tax money for the next five years; Robert Sherwood dining at Ciro's with Nina Orla, the South American actress.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

This is a year when Navy will be something more than a sentimental favorite to best Army. Somehow, Navy always did seem to be the people's choice at the annual service spectacle, even if only by a thin margin. When Navy marches on the field, the cheers are always a bit more throaty, the enthusiasm of the customers just a bit more wild than the greeting to West Point.

POVICH

Maybe it's because there is, indeed, something about a sailor. Certainly the man of the sea connotes something more romantic than the Army gray, and the regiment of Midshipmen, swinging onto the field for parade in their long blue are nattiness personified. This is no rap at Army, they're natty, too. Maybe ours is simply an unconscious reaction to the lilt of "Anchors Aweigh" which we think is definitely more inspiring and a happier tune all around than Army's "slum and gravy" lyrics.

But, as we were saying, this is a year when Navy apparently doesn't have to depend on its pull with the crowd to take the field as favorites. By any gauge, the Midshipmen appear to have a better football team than the West Pointers. In fact, when we heard that tomorrow at Philadelphia for the first time during the series both the Army and Navy would march onto the field at the same time, we were thinking of remarking that it would probably be the only time during the day that Army would boast as good as a tie with Navy.

If, by the long arm of coincidence, we are picking a winner in this case, we waive all credit because we seem to be hopping on a cripple. There is nothing in the records of either team that points to anything except a Navy triumph except, possibly, their mutual game with Notre Dame. It isn't difficult to pick a Navy team to beat an Army eleven that was smeared, 45-0, by Cornell, and, five weeks later, was smeared all over again by Penn, 48-0.

Football at West Point seems to have fallen on evil days. In their eight games thus far, Army has failed to score a point in four and they have, in fact, scored only eight touchdowns all season—three of them against Williams. Hank Mazur is the only Army player who has been able to rise above the general despond at West Point. This backfield star appears to be Navy's lone worry tomorrow.

If there is a shred of hope for Army it hangs, unquestionably, on the comparative performance against Notre Dame plus the inspiration that always comes to a service team on the day of the service spectacle. Army rose to a spectacular peak in holding Notre Dame to a 7-0 score on a day when Army was supposed to be a push-over, and a week later Navy took a 13-7 licking from Notre Dame.

Navy pushed Notre Dame all over the field in its game with the Irish, but the Middies couldn't stem that winning touchdown when Layden's team finally got under way in the last quarter. Particularly was Navy vulnerable to passes on that day. And if it's any comfort to Army folks, Layden had an especially kind word for West Point after his narrow victory at Yankee Stadium.

"I'll always think we were lucky to win that one," Layden told your agent after the game. "I don't know when I've suffered as much during a ball game. Army put up a real fight. I knew they would, because that's what they teach those boys to do during 4 years of military school—fight. I didn't quite know what to make of it when Army's first team started out-playing my first team, but when Army's second and third teams also started to lay it on my regulars I knew we had a battle on our hands."

Nothing Army accomplished before or since that game has showed the Cadets off to much advantage. Maybe it's because they have a faculty for bringing themselves up to one particular game, and if that is true it may not be all beer and skittles for Navy tomorrow, but the will to win is still pretty useless if you don't have the weapons, we allus said.

We have an idea that Navy will either win tomorrow's ball game or beat itself. Navy has the power and what appears to be the better squad, but nobody has yet accused the Middies of being a particularly bright team. They misspent their power in both the Notre Dame and Penn games, outgaining both of those teams and yet failing to win.

We saw the Navy team take a 20-0 beating from Penn when it should have won the game. They were actually outplaying a great Penn team until they forsook their running game for forward passing. Navy's passes were Penn's best weapon that day, five of them being intercepted. But there is as yet no sign that Army's secondary defense is nearly as alert as Penn's, which should certainly help the Navy's passing.

Navy's big, fast line outplayed both the Notre Dame and Penn forwards by a wide margin and figure to give Army the same treatment. And despite the reputation of Mazor, this Army back scarcely bulks as a better performer than Bill Busick or Wes Gebert of the Navy backfield. It looks like a Navy victory, but apparently 104,000 fans insist that it be proved.

New York, Nov. 28.—SPORTIN' AROUND:

Despite all his protests, don't be too surprised if Tommy Harmon turns pro. The pros will bring terrific pressure to bear upon him. He will be offered more money than the last three generations of his family, all of humble circumstances, ever earned. Incidentally, Harmon came very close to going to Yale. That certainly would have ruined a wonderful de-emphasis speech by Ogden Miller, Yale's official viewer-with-alarmer. Harmon doesn't look very strong, dressed. But stripped! The fellow is one of the greatest physical specimens we've ever seen. He's got those powerful, sloping, tiger-shoulders, like Louis.

CONSIDINE

That ought to be a pip at the Garden tomorrow night, when Billy Conn, the handsome dancing master who was born with a sadist's heart, tries to paint despair on the strong, wide kisser of Lee Savold. Conn could outbox him if Lee had a dagger and Billy was in a straightjacket. But sweet Wilyum never met a hitter like Savold. Tomorrow night he'll get a faint whiff of the kind of punching he must expect to absorb if he wants to fight Louis. We suspect that Conn will win tomorrow night, but only after learning that—now that he is getting into the tougher element of the heavyweight division—he can no longer take two belts on the chin to get in six fancy jabs.

Any high school teams in the audience want to play a post season game? Quit shoving. Write to Leo P. Dillon, coach of colorful St. Joseph's High, Victoria, Tex., Texas Catholic interscholastic champions. The originator of Mel Hein Day is Hal Weissman, of the New York Mirror staff. Out of his idea has come Ace Parker Day in Brooklyn and will come Turk Edwards and Ernie Pinckert Day in Washington. And it couldn't happen to nicer guys. . . . Harmon, by the way, will see Sunday's Dodgers-Giants game at the Polo Grounds.

After Ray Flaherty's Redskins had lost their opening game under his coaching, back in 1936, he was offered a ten-year contract by the Redskins' owners . . . Arch "Tiger" Murray, one of Nassau's favorite sons, has joined the staff of Golf and will make the winter circuit in a special car—driven by Welford Snead, Sam's older brother. The elder Snead is a fine golfer, but a number of hostages to fortune have stood in his path . . . the Card Sharp mob, in which Fight Manager Hymie Caplin has burnt his expressive hands, was originally exposed by Mickey McDougal, the card magician, who was called into the case months ago to spot the subtle markings which made the decks strictly cold . . . Fifteenth hospitals share in the receipts of the East-West game, which should reach its peak this coming January 1 at San Francisco. The East's team will have Harmon, Reagan and Allerdice in the same backfield . . . they sold 8,000 tickets in San Francisco the day it was announced that Harmon would play.

After Columbia took the lead last Saturday against Colgate, and the ball was kicked up into the stands for the extra point, a spectator refused to surrender it. The officials, worried because it was getting dark, finally came over to Lou Little after failing to get the ball from the fan and one of them said, rather brusquely, "Give us another ball." Lou leaned back, happily, watching the approaching night, and said, "Sorry, boys. I'd just as soon see the game end right here. Get the ball back from that fellow in the stands." . . . There is a healthy movement afoot to have Seabiscuit named "best horse of the year" in the annual poll sponsored by Turf and Sport Digest . . . The Biscuit, retired in February, after breaking Sun Beau's earnings record by finally winning the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. He ran twice earlier, finishing first in the $10,000 San Antonio Handicap and sixth in the other race. But, in our book, he deserves the title, for no younger horse stayed up on top long enough to drive his memory from the public's mind.

O'Brien Stars As Eagles Beat Steelers

Only 5,000 Witness Davy's Punt Return Which Paves Way For 7-0 Victory

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 28.—Davey O'Brien said goodby to Philadelphia as a professional football player and his Eagle teammates made his departure a happy occasion by beating Pittsburgh, 7 to 0, for their first victory of the season after nine defeats.

A scant crowd of 5,000 saw the former mighty mite from Texas Christian University, playing one of his best games of the season, start the Eagles on the road to victory by returning a punt 23 yards in the last quarter.

This slick bit of dodging and sidestepping shoved the Steelers deep in their own territory. Eberle Schultz then recovered Billy Patterson's fumble on the Pittsburgh 17 and on the first play O'Brien handed the ball to Dick Riffle on a reverse.

Riffle found a hole at left tackle and outran the Pittsburgh secondary to reach the end zone. George Somers, who previously had failed in four field-goal attempts from the 16, 38, 45 and 28-yard lines, booted the extra point from placement.

Bows Out in D. C.

With less than three minutes to play Chester Johnston returned the Eagles' kickoff to midfield, but O'Brien sewed up the game on the next play when he intercepted Patterson's long pass on his own 33. The Eagles ground out a first down on their 44 as the game ended.

O'Brien was given an ovation as he left the field and was beseiged by autograph fans in the Eagles dressing room.

Before the game, the 150-pound star was given a silver plaque by Bert Bell, president of the Eagles, reading: "Davey O'Brien, the greatest player of all times; retiring from pro football to serve his country; small in stature, with the heart of a lion—a living inspiration to the youth of America."

O'Brien plays his last game Sunday in Washington against the Redskins. He and Mrs. O'Brien will then go to their home in Texas for

Little Quarterback Aids In Setting Up All Four Jayhawk Touchdowns

By the Associated Press

Lawrence, Kans., Nov. 28.—The University of Kansas was thankful today—this Kansas Thanksgiving Day.

Thankful that its football team got more than a third of its season's supply of touchdowns before a point-hungry crowd of 3,000 in defeating Colorado State, 26 to 0.

Thankful, too, for little Jakie Fry, 157-pound quarterback who slithered over the thawing turf all afternoon in runs from 17 to 54 yards that help set up every one of the four Jayhawk touchdowns.

It was only the second triumph of the year for the Kansans, who could count but seven touchdowns in their first eight games.

Soft Going Mires Passing Attack

The soft going mired the Colorado State passing attack an dthe Aggies didn't complete their first aerial until midway in the fourth quarter.

But the mud served only as grease to Fry's running gear. On the first Kansas play from scrimmage he squirted around right end for 18 yards to the State 27. Ed Hall then took over and scored on an 18-inch blast through center.

The same due counted again in the same period after Herb Hartman blocked a Clorado State punt that was recovered on the Aggies 32.

Fry Goes 54 Yards

Fry saved his best exhibit for the second half, however. Again on the first Kansas play from scrimmage he started the same end sweep. Colorado State's end, John Meyers, broke through and spun the ball carrier around but Fry kept his footing reversed his field, and dashed 54 yards to the goal.

Only moments later he returned a State punt 27 yards to their 33 where again Hall took over the scoring duties with big Jim Holloway coming in to kick the point.

The game closed the season for both teams. It marked completion of Coach Harry Hughes' thirtieth year at the Fort Collins school.

Columbia and Brown Play to Scoreless Tie

Bears Stopped Twice on 1-Yard Line; Brown Turns Back Only Threat of Favored Columbia Eleven Before 15,000

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Nov. 28.—Brown's Bears, without Dick High, their 210-pound line-smasher, were halted twice on the Columbia Lions' 1-yard line today and held to a scoreless tie by those top-heavy favorites before a chilled football crowd of 15,000.

The Bruins turned back Columbia's only threat on their own 10-yard line early in the game and then stormed back twice in the third period to Columbia's 1-yard line by marching 37 and 29 yards, respectively, before Columbia stopped them.

Brown's first chance came when Columbia's Paul Governali kicked outside on his own 38-yard line.

Sheehan Runs 18 Yards

Brown's Bill Sheehan dashed 18 yards to Columbia's 20. Stepczyk ripped to the 10 and Bob Priestly took a pass from Ernie Savignano on Columbia's 1.

The Lions smeared Savignano's try.

Governali punted to his 35 and again the Bruins barged back to the 1-yard line, with Stepczyk and Savignano carrying. But Columbia's iron forwards smeared two touchdown attempts.

Poor Center Pass Helps Bucknell Beat Albright

Reading, Pa., Nov. 28.—Bucknell University today capitalized on a bad pass from center in the last period to push over a touchdown and defeat Albright, 7 to 0, before a crowd of 3,500.

The break came after both teams had battled for three scoreless periods on a snow-covered field with temperatures near freezing.

Bob Bennett, of Albright, was back to kick on his own 30-yard line, last down, when the ball passed over his head and was recovered on the 13.

With the ball in their possession, the Bisons carried it to the 7 and a penalty advanced it to the 2-yard line.

Abrams K.O.s Chmielewski In 6th Round

Slim Crowd Sees Fight Stopped After Eye Examination

By Al Hailey

A new Georgie Abrams with all the finesse of a champion came back to his home town last night, won five straight rounds with the greatest of ease and chopped the face of Henry Chmielewski into such a mess that Referee Harry Volkman halted the business at two minutes, 50 seconds of the sixth round and called Georgie the winner by a technical knockout.

Prophetic Round

It was scheduled to be a 10-round affair, but as early as the second round the threat of a knockout hung heavy in the smoke-filled atmosphere. Georgie, with new-found speed and power in his right hand, slammed a hard one to the jaw of the Popish 160-pound champion that dazed him, and from that point on it was all Abrams.

Georgie dropped Chmielewski to the canvas with the same punch, a short, looping right hand, midway of the fifth round but the courageous Pole was back up before the count reached five.

Chmielewski kept boring in, shooting a long left for Abrams' stomach and head, but Georgie cleverly eluded every offering, and on the infighting he literally "blitzkrieged" Chmielewski's body with lefts and rights.

Georgie could do no wrong tonight, and by his victory he wiped clean the slate that Chmielewski smeared with a defeat when he upset Abrams in a ten-rounder last September in Milwaukee.

Abrams also earned a shot at the

Hoyas' Trip To California Seems Certain

Call to Santa Clara Ends Misunderstanding Over Invitation

Georgetown and Santa Clara are both eager to play an intersectional game in California December 25, H. Gabriel Murphy, G. U. graduate manager declared last night after a telephone conversation with Santa Clara.

Murphy called Sam Dunn, Santa Clara graduate manager, yesterday after a mixup which had the Hoyas accepting a bid to the game and Santa Clara asserting that no definite invitation had been proffered.

"We anticipate no trouble," Murphy said last night. "We have been tendered and have accepted the invitation provided certain conditions are fulfilled."

It was understood that the "certain conditions" include the fact that the British War Relief Association of California, sponsoring the contest, has yet to guarantee Georgetown's expenses to the coast. This, however was believed to be but a formality.

"Georgetown desires greatly to be a party to this great humanitarian effort," said Murphy, "but naturally we can't send our who'e squad across the continent without some assurance of railroad fare."

Georgetown has lost only one game in three seasons, that to Boston College this month, 19-18.

High School Team Loses Every Game—Six Join the Navy

By the Associated Press

Johnson City, Tenn., Nov. 28.—Six members of the Dante (Va.) High School football team, which lost all its games this season, good-naturedly denied here that they were intent upon drowning their woes in the sea.

But they joined the Navy.

The recruits were James Franklin Bowlin, Harry Sproles, Junior McNeill Dixon, Frederick Adam Thomas, William McNeer Clay and Harry McNeil Barker.

Thomas, who is 18, enlisted for six years. The others, enlisted for serve until they reach their twenty-first birthdays.

Army-Navy Tickets Sell at Regular Prices

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 (AP).—Army-Navy football game tickets, usually so much in demand they bring fabulous prices, went on sale today in a department store—at the regular price.

Texas Wins On Dazzling Early Thrust

Rose Bowl Hopes Of A. M. Die, Layden Paces Upset Triumph Before 45,000 Fans

The Rose Bowl

The Rose Bowl situation is scrambled as the result of the defeat of Texas A. and M., it was admitted to the Associated Press by Stanford officials yesterday. Stanford, the West's Rose Bowl nominee, had expected to choose Texas A. and M. as its opponent. Boston College and Te... are now the favorites to get the Rose Bowl bid. "It's your guess," said Alfred Masters, Stanford athletic director. An announcement is expected Sunday.

By the Associated Press

Austin, Tex., Nov. 28.—Mighty Texas A & M., came to the end of its rope today—strangled by an ancient jinx and a magnificent football team.

One fierce thrust in the first 57 seconds of play by their 46-year-old traditional rivals, the University of Texas, bagged a touchdown, wrecked the Rose Bowl hopes of the Cadets and paralyzed 45,000 fans.

It was just that quick. Final score: Texas, 7; Aggies, 0.

Briefly, and shockingly, it was Texas' football game from that first bold surge engineered by Peter John Layden, today one of the finest football players the old Southwest ever has put on a field.

Only once did the Aggies threaten to pick up the thread of their great winning streak that had stretched to 19 consecutive games. That was on a magnificent one-man riot by John Alec Kimbrough, the All-American fullback. He went 63 yeards straight downfield on nine carries but the lone Aggie scare petered out on the Texas 12.

The 222-pound Haskell hurricane belted the rock-ribbed Texas line for 101 yards on 20 carries.

The jinx they said this Aggie team could lick—the one that has prevented a Cadet eleven from winning in Austin since 1922 and allowed it to win only three times in 46 years, laughed its loudest tonight.

Furthermore, these magicians of Dana Xenophon Bible, once the coach of these Aggies himself, used only 13 men to beat a team many thought was the Nation's best. One reserve center and a tackle trickled into the Texas line-up.

It cost the Aggies a Rose Bowl invitation, may cost them an undisputed Southwest Conference title. But there was a strong possibility they would move into Dallas' Cotton Bowl classic on New Year's Day.

Swiftly, without giving the Aggies much more than a couple of seconds to set their defense, the Texans struck on the first scrimmage play of the game after an out of bounds kick off.

Crain Waiting

Leisurely floating back to his own 25, Layden, this 180-pound Texas fullback, unfurled a 33-yard pass down on the Aggie 34 that Cowboy Jack Crain gathered in just as he toppled out of bounds.

Back to the midfield stripe backed Layden on the next play, this time pegging a low liner 33 yards smack into the right hand corner of the field where Noble Doss took it on the one-foot line and went crashing out of bounds with Kimbrough sprawled over him.

On the game's first running play, Layden bumped over for the touchdown and Crain added the point.

It was the game—and the most

Eagles Renew Hockey Feud With Baltimore Here Tonight

Orioles Can Tie for Lead With Victory

Match Slated for 8:30 at Riverside Stadium; Baltimore Fans to See Game

The Washington Eagles and defending champion, Baltimore Orioles, will transfer their feud to the ice at Riverside Stadium tonight when they continue their warfare in an outstanding intercity match at 8:30 o'clock.

The Orioles turned the tables on the Eagles in a rough and ready match in Baltimore Wednesday night, 5 to 4, after having previously lost to the Eagles in an early season thriller, 2 to 1.

Hundreds of Baltimore fans are expected to accompany the Orioles to rinkside tonight. The Orioles twice trounced the New York Rovers, shut out River Vale, 1 to 0, and handed Washington its second defeat in eight matches.

Orioles Can Gain Tie

A victory for Baltimore tonight would enable it to go into a mathematical tie with the Eastern League leading Eagles with a 12-point total. Although the Eagles have the better winning percentage, six victories and two defeats, the Eastern League's system whereby two points are awarded for each victory find the clubs closely bunched.

Numbered among the newcomers is shifty Ken Partis, midget center, who pastimed with the Eagles last season and who is going great guns with Baltimore just now. Partis always was a big favorite here and is assured of a cordial welcome tonight despite his shift to the Orioles.

Goalie Duel Expected

Guy Roach, Bill Moe, Jack Riley, Jack Dyte, Ned Vitarelli, Carl Ripley and George Grigor are holdovers from last season's team who will step out with Baltimore tonight. Newcomers include: Frank Ceryance, Chick Webster, Spike Wychnenka, Don Coughlin, Bob Dill and Phil Piche.

An interesting duel of goalies will find Washington's ever popular and alert Gordon Hemming pitted against Frank Ceryance, the Oriole sensation who tended net with several outstanding Canadian sextets prior to joining the Orioles this season.

Season Ticket Holders Jam 'Skins' Office

Playoff Ticket Sale May Be Set Back Three Days

Season ticket holders by the score descended upon Redskin offices yesterday as the mad scramble began for tickets to the championship play-off game at Griffith Stadium December 8 between the Redskins and the winners of the National Football League's Western Division title.

So great was the rush that Redskin bosses last night feared another such day might seriously interfere with the sale of tickets to the Redskin-Philadelphia Eagles game here Sunday.

Only about 15,000 tickets to the Philadelphia game, which the Redskins must win to insure themselves of the Eastern Division championship, have been sold so far.

May Suspend Sale

There are 10,951 season ticket holders, General Manager Jack Espey said. Redskin offices, giving season ticket fans first choice, this week began taking reservations from them for playoff seats, but if the rush keeps up they may have to suspend sale until after the Redskin-Eagle game.

No reservations for seats are being taken from anyone not holding a season ticket. The actual sale to the general public will get under way Monday, if nothing goes amiss.

The Redskins still can be tied for the Eastern title by Brooklyn's Dodgers. The Dodgers, however, must beat the New York Giants and the Eagles must upset the Skins.

Will Be Sellout

The Redskin front office, however, is going ahead with plans for the playoff here. Cramped for space in their present Ninth Street offices, the management probably will move to a large, centrally-located downtown office to take care of the rush. With the sale opening Monday if the Redskins win, the championship game should be a sellout the next day.

In order to get the largest possible seating capacity, the playing field at Griffith Stadium will be moved 5 yards in toward home plate and the first base foul line. This will make room for additional seats in front of the centerfield bleachers behind the east goal.

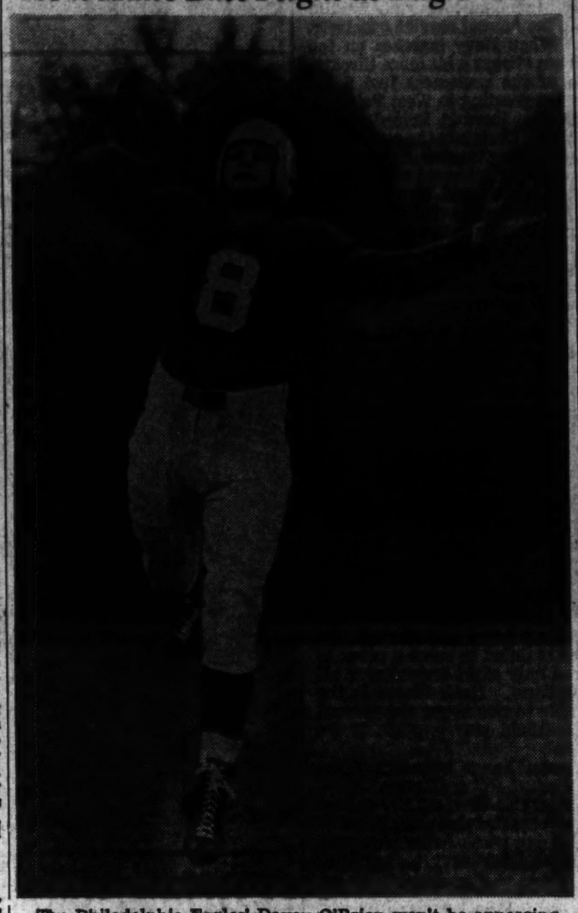
Meanwhile, Coach Ray Flaherty yesterday was on a scouting visit in Philadelphia. He witnessed the Eagles' 7-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers and came away still convinced of winning Sunday's game. The victory was the Eagles' first after nine straight defeats this year.

He'll Make Last Flight as Eagle Here



The Philadelphia Eagles' Davey O'Brien won't be appearing in poses like this but four more days. The mighty mite from Texas Christian University whose forward passing made him nationally famous will say farewell to pro football Sunday at Griffith Stadium against the Redskins. He's leaving his $10,000 per year job with the Eagles next week to join the Federal Bureau of Investigation

Durocher, Two Teammates Found Physically Fit

By the Associated Press

Rochester, Minn., Nov. 28.—Reported physically fit after a two-day routine physical checkup at Mayo Clinic, Leo Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and teammates Joe Medwick and Pete Reiser, left Rochester this morning by plane for St. Louis.

Before leaving, Durocher revealed that he was likely to move out of the shortstop position on the Dodger team and let Peewee Reese move in.

"That," he said in an interview, "is one of the possible changes to be made in the Dodger line-up for 1941." Medwick, who was standing by in the interview, said he "didn't think so."

Wake Forest Noses South Carolina, 7-6

Gallovich's Placement After Second-Quarter Score Decides Southern Conference Clash at Charlotte, N. C.

By the Associated Press

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 28.—Wake Forest's Demon Deacons nosed out an inspired University of South Carolina eleven here today, 7 to 6, in a spirited Southern Conference football game that highlighted North Carolina's Thanksgiving Day observance in this vicinity.

About 9,000 wildly cheering spectators saw the heftier, black and gold jersied Deacons push over a touchdown and point in the second period and the fighting South Carolinas come back in the third to make a touchdown but fail in the try for point.

The Deacons, after a scoreless opening period, gained possession of the ball early in the second on a fumble on the Gamecock 39. Then, in quick succession big John Polanski gained 27 and Tony Gallovich three to put the ball on the nine. Short thrusts carried the Deacons to the five and there J. V. Pruitt, sub quarterback, passed for a 7-0 advantage.

A booming 60-yard punt by Ken Roskie, Gamecock sub back, in the third led to South Carolina's score. The ball was downed on Wake Forest's six.

Red Mayberry, Deacon triple-threat quarterback, ran up to the 11 in two tries from punt formation, then under tremendous pressure at the hands of charging Gamecock forwards, got off a high punt to Roskie, who took it on his 48 and ran back to the Deacon 37. Al Grygo, sub back, then faded back and passed a long one to Harvey Blouin, a fellow sub, who took the ball on the 20 and ran to the nine. On the next play Grygo slipped through his right tackle for nine and the score. Arrowsmith's placekick was wide.

Savold, Conn Meet, Winner To Joe Louis

15,000 Expected For Garden Bout Over Twelve Rounds

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 28.—Looking ahead to the "big shot" against Joe Louis next summer, Billy Conn, the ambitious Pittsburgher, and blond Lee Savold, from the Iowa corn country, tangle tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden for 12 rounds or less.

With the supply of heavyweight challenging material rapidly dwindling to the point where there doesn't seem to be enough around to meet Louis' demands through 1941, the winner tomorrow is almost a cinch to meet up with the Brown Bomber next year.

Promoter Mike Jacobs has long had a desire to put the Pittsburgh Pretty Boy in there with the Bomber when he grows up to that size.

Like Conn, Savold is a "picture" fighter who attracts the cash customers to the ticket windows. Promoter Mike expects some 14,000 to 15,000 fans on hand tomorrow night, compiling a gross gate of about $35,000.

Savold, definitely can punch, particularly with a solid left. While he's a long-shot underdog tomorrow night he is by all odds the toughest heavyweight the light-heavyweight champion has taken on since he invaded the "big league."

This corner, however, likes Billy Boy this time. Although only 175, Conn has proved he can handle heavyweights of Savold's size—about 185 pounds. He is stronger now than at any time during the last year, and hasn't been bothered with recurring boils for weeks. His manager, Johnny Ray, has brought Billy Boy along too carefully to dive off the deep end now.

Savold, on the other hand, is on the upgrade at the moment, after a couple of years of getting nothing but bruises for his time in the ring. His manager, Pinky George (the only living man without a muscle) can hear those big "cocoanuts" for a Louis fight rattling in the offing now, and is going to send his man in there to pitch his high hard one all the way.

National Boxing Association middleweight champion here in the near future, Tony Zale.

Georgie, who defeated the Cocoa Kid in his last appearance here, looked better tonight than at any time in his career, and his victory over the sixth-ranking Chmielewski probably will boost his standing well up into the top rungs of the middleweight ladder. Georgie weighed 161, Chmielewski 160.

Abrams won the first two rounds going away and in the second staggered Chmielewski with a looping right flush on the jaw. The Polish fighter lunged forward and saved himself from a knockdown only by quickly dropping his right hand to the canvas.

Right Hand Scored

Abrams caught Chmielewski again in the fourth with that same right hand, and it fairly whistled as it spun into the Pole's wounded left eye. The eye was beginning to close at the end of the round.

In the eight-round semifinal, Harry Hurst, Canadian lightweight, slammed Billy Bullock, 133½, of Washington, to the canvas eight times before Referee Harry Volkman decided to step in and stop the business.

All of Hurst's knockdowns were tainted, however, and at the end Bullock was still in command of his faculties. Volkman halted the fight after two minutes of the seventh and called Hurst the winner by a technical knockout. Bullock protested vigorously and broke into tears when Volkman refused to listen. Bullock was sent down first by a lightning-like left that few spectators could see.

Kept Off Balance

Constantly off balance trying to keep away from the dangerous punching Canadian, Bullock half fell, was half knocked through the ropes no less than four times. A short, looping right sent him down for the last time.

The ice-semifinal between Irish Eddie Dunne, New York lightweight, and Hershey Kid Chocolate, of Harrisburg, Pa., was a boresome eight-rounder that ended with Dunne the winner of the decision.

In the four round opener, Roy Dunn, former District Golden Gloves middleweight champion, scored an unimpressive victory over Baby Face Walpert, of Cumberland, Md. It was more comedy than fighting, and Dunn constantly charged across the ring to run straight into Walpert's extended right hand.

Bill Ackerman . . . on Fishing

TOWNSEND

He was fair always—in his games and to his fellow-man, in his pursuit of game in field and stream and prudent in their taking. He abhorred any waste of wild creatures above their use as food. His greatest desire seemed to be in showing to others their ways and needs. He was their friend.

Facets in a most lovable personality, that, now after his death, brought about by his skidding off a wet road last week while on the way to his hunting lodge down on the Maryland Eastern Shore, will be an everlasting memory to those with whom he tramped the woods and shot and fished.

He will be remembered for oher things; as a member of the famous Black Horse Troop at Culver; as an outstanding tackle on the Cornell football team of 1920; as a finished airman and a successful business man; but mostly it will be in the sport fishing world that his accomplishments will be marked in large letters, for it was his great love. To it he gave much.

He was a member of the 1937 American team that fished in the International Tuna Matches in Nova Scotia, and captain of the team in 1938.

It was while practicing for the first of these events he caught 36 of the giant bluefin tuna in five days—eleven in one day—on light tackle. A performance that has never been equaled.

He pioneered the white marlin fishing off Ocean City, giving to Northern anglers a nearby fishing ground that in the short five years of its existence has made big-game fishing history and promises even more in the years to come. In following this fishing his navigation of our offshore waters was the marvel of those who fished with him.

He was the recipient of the 1938 Outstanding Sportsman's plaque, given by the Maryland Fish and Game Protective Association, for his work. In turn he is the donor of the Townsend Trophy, given for the first time in 1940 to the Ocean City charter-boatman tagging and releasing the greatest number of marlin. The purpose of which was to teach their conservation and learn more of their life cycles and migrations.

Otter Valley Run, the Frederick County trout stream he improved to such an extent it became in a single year not only the wonder of all who fished it, but a model and test stream for the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service. It was the birthplace of the Brotherhood of the Jungle Cock.

A friendly stream, and one loved by the hundreds that fished it because it reflected the love and friendship Paul Townsend had for everyone. Today it is the living memory of a man's man.

Potsy Clark Signs At Grand Rapids

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 28 (AP).—M. E. Davenport, vice president of the University of Grand Rapids, announced today that George (Potsy) Clark, coach of the Detroit Lions professional football team, will coach the university's football team next fall.

Salary terms were not revealed. Davenport said Clark, in addition to his football duties, would be director of public relations at the university.

Clark formerly coached the Portsmouth, Ohio, Spartans pro football club, which later became the Detroit Lions, then went to the Brooklyn Dodgers before returning last fall to the Detroit position. He also has coached at Kansas University, Butler University and the University of Illinois, where he was an assistant to Bob Zuppke.

2,500 Middies Cheer the Navy; Army Takes Squad of 41

Team Leaves After Final Home Work

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 28.—Confident of success by a fair margin, Navy's football forces wound up practice on the home field today and departed for Philadelphia on a special train at 6:20 o'clock, after a rip-roaring sendoff from their comrades of more than 2,500 of the regiment. Practically every officer assigned to the station, members of their families, and many civilians, participated in the demonstration.

The final workout of the players consisted of a brisk run through signals, and formations, again stressing defensive work against Army's aerial attack which is regarded as a real danger. And although the Cadets have broadcast that overhead work will feature their attack, yet the Navy board of strategy is leaving nothing uncovered

Army teams are known for their cunning in uncovering a trick or two. By the same token the Middies may have a trump to uncover, what with a galaxy of 20 backfield men, something unprecedented in the history of Navy football. The Tars have been confronted by a jinx of injuries this season, but at that they have a wealth of material to draw from.

Teams to Alternate

Maj. Swede Larson, Navy's head coach, said tonight that he is holding his two alternate teams intact and there would be no changes unless something unforeseen happens. This means that the Middies will go into the game with Capt. Dick Foster, left end; Gene Flatham, 250 pounds, at left tackle; Vito Vittucci, left guard; Ed Sims or Hal Harwood, center; Al Feldmeier, right guard; Bill Chewning, right tackle; Bob Froude, right end; Bill Chip, quarterback; Bill Busik, left fullback; Ev Malcolm, right fullback; Sherwood Werner, fullback.

Navy's team, as has been the case against all opponents this season will have an advantage in weight, both in the line and backfield.

Gene Flatham, will play left tackle, weighing 250 pounds, is far and away above the heaviest man in Army's tentative lineup, who is McKinney, weighing 201. Navy has two other men in the forward wall weighing 200 pounds. They are Vittucci, guard, and Chewning, tackle. Armys' tentative backfield includes Hank Mazur, quarterback and triple threat, weighing 175, Johnny Hatch, left half, same weight; Johnson, right half, 154; Jarrell, fullback, 169, and Jere Maupin, another back replacement who weighs 175. Against these are Navy's Bill Chip, quarter and blocking back, 180; Busik, 195; Malcolm, right half, 168, and Werner, 175.

Is Forty-first Renewal

Saturday's game will be the forty-first renewal of the inter-service classic, which began in 1890, with only eight interruptions. These were brought about chiefly through disputes over eligibility rules, as Army insisted on playing transfer students, regardless of previous varsity experience. Finally however, the two institutions reached an agreement on the freshmen rule. This put the teams more on an even basis, as far as having students of previous experience. Since then relations have been on a more amicable basis.

In the forty-one games constituting the series Army is in the lead with 22 victories, Navy has 15 and three were ties.

Navy won a glorious victory last year, 10 to 0, through the medium of a field goal kicked by little Dutch Leonard, who is again available for such an emergency, and a touchdown, scored by Dick Shaffer, brought up from the B squad, and a conversion, scored by Leonard.

Aerials Help Arkansas Beat Tulsa, 27 to 21

Diminutive Tailback's Sharpshooting Leads Razorbacks in Victory

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Nov. 28.—Air minded Arkansas stunned Tulsa with four quick touchdowns today and survived a vicious last half uprising by the Golden Hurricane to triumph, 27-21, in the traditional Thanksgiving Day game at Skelly Field.

Pint-sized Harold Hamberg, sharp-shooting Arkansas tailback, led the Razorbacks to a 27-7 lead early in the third period, passing for three touchdowns and setting the stage for another with a 21-yard fling that carried to the 1-yard stripe.

Then favored Tulsa snapped into action and the stadium rocked to the cheers of 13,500 spectators as the Hurricane smashed across two touchdowns and threatened in the fading moments to pull the game out of the fire. Running games were almost completely abandoned and the contest quickly developed into a thrilling aerial circus.

Pandemonium reigned in the stands as Tulsa, trailing by only six points, fought madly for the touchdown that might have meant victory, but the Hurricane's last supreme effort collapsed on the Razorback 27-yard line.

Durham, N. C., Nov. 28 (AP).—Duke's Blue Devils drilled today on a little bit of everything with a lively session against Pittsburgh plays thrown in. The varsity did not perform as well on defense against the Panther attack as they have in other workouts this week. Duke meets Pitt here Saturday.

Frank Killian, senior halfback, who missed last week's game due to a leg injury, was on the field in "sweat clothes" and will probably be ready for action Saturday.

Harrier Title to Lash

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 28.—Don Lash, the former Indiana University trackman who confesses that his running seems to improve with his age, accomplished the expected today as he ran away with his seventh straight National Senior Amateur Athletic Union cross-country championship.

Lash covered the 10000-meter (approximately 6¼ miles) course at the Meadowbrook Country Club in the startling time of 30 minutes and 25 and 8-10th seconds, almost two full minutes better than the mark of 32:17.2 that he set in 1934.

Also lacking in surprise was the convincing victory of the New York Athletic Club in the team event. The victors placed five men in the first nine for a total of 23 points, 27 less than the total scored by second-place Michigan Normal. Michigan State College was third with 70 points and the Shanahan Catholic Club, of Philadelphia, fourth with 83 points. Last in the team race was the Norfolk Young Men's Association, of Roxbury, Mass., with 99 points.

The Millrose Athletic Association, of New York, did not defend its team title.

Lash and 52 other runners started the race over the snow and ice-covered course and of the 26-year-old Indianan's challengers only one—Gregory Rice, formerly of Notre Dame—was able to offer a serious threat to the champion.

Rice, one of the leaders from the start, stayed close on Lash's heels when the Indiana State policeman took the lead after 1½ miles of running. He was only 100 yards back at the end of 5 miles but lacked the kick to better Lash's finish and wound up in the neighborhood of 200 yards back.

In third position almost two minutes behind the winner was Luigi Beccali, of the New York A. C., who put on a nice finish to nose out Tom Quinn, of Michigan Normal.

It marked the second straight year that Rice has trailed Lash to the tape. In 1939 at Newark Rice was only 20 yards behind.

Cadets Off For Merion; In Top Shape

Army Eleven Seeks First Major Victory Since 1938; Sophs Start in Backfield

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The Army football squad, 41 strong and each of the 41 hale and hearty, left late this afternoon for the Merion Cricket Club at Haverford, Pa., last Cadet encampment before the team takes the field against Navy at Philadelphia Saturday in the fiftieth anniversary game of the series.

Still ringing in the Cadet gridders' ears as they boarded their train were the cheers of the Cadet corps, which held its last pep rally in the gym. Still before their eyes were such prize examples of "Navy Week" art as the bed-sheet paintings showing Navy behind a huge eight-ball and a man in a barrel with the sorrowful slogan, "I Bet on Navy."

Team in Top Shape

Capt. Bill Wood's charges, striving for their first major triumph since the Navy game of '38, will go into the service duel in their best physical condition of the season. End Stan Hutson, of Seeber, Ill., out with an injury since mid season, is ready to go again, and Wingback Dick Hennessy, of Fort Hancock, N. J., will be available at least for part-time duty.

In addition, Wood took with him two players brought up from the "B" squad—Halfback Dick Polk of Nashville, Tenn., and End Gene Smith, whose place-kicking may come in handy. Field goals have played an important part in this series, Navy getting one en route to its 10-0 victory last year.

Several other members of the "B" squad will go to Philadelphia with the corps on Saturday, but will be in uniform for the game.

Mazur to Start

Army, with its three triple-threat backs in A-1 condition, plans to have two of them in the game together for as much of the time as possible. Sophomores Johnny Hatch of Fort Sill, Okla., and Hank Mazur of Lowell, Mass., probably will start, while Junior Jere Maupin of Glendale, Calif., will be used to spell Mazur.

Mazur was the offensive standout in Army's 7-0 defeat by Notre Dame, and his passing, kicking and running gave Princeton fits last Saturday before the Tigers won out, 26-19.

The squad may work out tomorrow at Merion. Wood definitely will not take them into the stadium until game time.

Army knows its record of six losses, a tie with Harvard and a 1-point victory over Williams has made the bigger Navy team a strong betting favorite. But the Cadets are coming up to this one as if it were a brand-new season—which, if they win it will be.

Want 150-Pound Foe

Brookland Boys Club, undefeated in six games this year, is booking games with 150-pound or unlimited elevns. Challengers should call Dupont 2582 after 6 p. m.

Smith, Murphy to Play Final Game for Terps

Duo Only Seniors to Start Against Washington and Lee Tomorrow at College Park; Contest Marks Finale for 10 Terps

Only two members of Mayland's starting lineup tomorrow against Washington and Lee at College Park will be playing their last game for the Terps—but they will be the team's outstanding stars—Center Bob Smith and Back Joe Murphy.

In all, Coaches Faber, Heagy and Wodd will lose ten members by graduation, but only two regulars.

Smith has been termed the best center at Maryland since Zeke Bailey's reign that ended in 1922. Bailey is known as Maryland's all-time center.

Murphy Lacked Weight

With a little more weight Murphy would be a candidate for District, conference and State honors but the Southern Conference sprint champion has been handicapped by a lack of poundage. He still ranks as one of Maryland's best backs in years and one of the top performers in this sector.

Smith and Murphy played together at Tome School, on the Tern Frosh and through three years of varsity, and now leave as the team's outstanding stars.

Other seniors, all of whom will probably see action against the Generals in the final game of the season tomorrow, are: Leo Mueller, Frank Dwyer and Dick Shaffer, ends; Bill Krouse and Paul McNeill, tackles; Frank Blazek, center; Fred Widener and Milton Lumsden, backs.

Terps Hold Short Drill

Terp coaches put the team through a short drill yesterday, and the final practice of the season is scheduled this afternoon.

The boys are impressed with the fact that a victory over the Generals, following the upset triumph over Rutgers, would be a satisfactory and surprising ending to a season that began as the worst in Black and Gold history.

John Cordyack, No. 1 blocking back, returned yesterday after missing a week of practice because of a severe cold. Cordyack's return will enable the Terps to start the same lineup that opened the Rutgers game.

The kickoff tomorrow is scheduled for 2 o'clock in Byrd Stadium.

Generals Dunk, Manager, Captain

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Nov. 28.—Washington and Lee's grid squad held its final practice session of the 1940 season today and indulged in the annual business of dunking Manager Jim Price, jr. (son of Gov. James H. Price), and Capt. Jack Mangan in the gymnasium swimming pool.

The entire squad and coaching staff will leave tomorrow afternoon for Saturday's battle with Maryland. The lads will spend Friday in Washington.

It was feared that a foot injury might keep Dick Pinck, senior back, out of the line-up. Pinck planned to consult a Roanoke physician Friday.

Wants Sunday Game

The Industrial Home School is seeking a game for its 130-pound football team this Sunday at its 2453 Wisconsin Avenue field. The manager may be reached at Woodley 9527.

Shortstop, at 18-to-1, Wins Bowie Feature Sprint in Upset

Rawson Last As Favorites Falter

Miss Balko Scores At $33.10 Mutuel, Beating Cheer Me, The Public Choice

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 28.—Past performances were selling three for a penny here this afternoon after a topsy-turvy feature race in which a six-horse field finished exactly opposite from the order in which the horses were bet. On the front end of the 6-furlong sprint was T. Powell's Shortstop and on the rear end was H. G. Bedwell's Rawson, the heavily played favorite. In second position was D. Harrison's Army Song and in third position was Mrs. F. W. Bond's Soldierette.

The showing of Rawson was a big disappointment to the crowd of 7,000. The magic wand, or something that Trainer-Owner Bedwell waves at horses to make them run away with races, a la Sealoch yesterday, must have been in reverse today. Rawson, first with the greatest of ease in a recent race, was last with the greatest of ease today.

With Rawson out of it, the pay-off board fairly sagged with big prices. Shortstop paid $38.70 and there was good money in the windows all along the line. Shortstop, engineered by Jockey Charley Corbett, turned in the excellent time of 1:13 2-5 over a track that was on the dull side.

Winner Never Headed

In contrast to his usual habits, Rawson failed to break alertly today. Jockey H. Lindberg drove him along the rail to reach contention and then he faded like a 49-cent sport shirt. Shortstop took command in theo pening jumps and it was a 'case of chasing him the remainder of the way.

After being shut out yesterday, Jockey W. L. Taylor finally visited the winner's circle in today's sixth race. He rode Mrs. H. Plattner's Housework, and the favorite players cleaned up. Taylor took the daughter of Brooms to the top early and after being displaced by Bright View, came again to get to the front and won while opening a gap in handy fashion. Robespierre was up along the rail to be second ahead of Bright View. The race was over the mile and a sixteenth course and Housework paid a $4.80 mutuel while going the route in 1:48 4-5.

Bubble Lil Wins Opener

The program opened with a thrilling blanket finish in which M. Maupin's Bubble Lil took a camer decision from Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's Quizzle and J. Y. Christmas' Rough Man. Carrying the light weight of the party, Bubble Lil was capably handled by Apprentice W. Eads. The winner paid an $11.70 mutuel.

Victory Light, of half-mile track fame, scored an easy victory in the second race to complete a $46.60 payoff in the daily double. The son of Victorian, owned by C. G. Ribbin and operated by the veteran F. Woodstock, galloped home in front of Voldear and Playmore. Victory Light paid an individual mutuel of $7.30.

Bank Excess Reserves Set Record High

$130,000,000 Jump In Week Sends Total To $6,930,000,000

By the Associated Press

Excess reserves of banks, available for lending and investments, reached the record high total of $6,930,000,000 in the week ended November 27.

The Federal Reserve Board said this total had never been exceeded, but was matched temporarily in the week ended October 23.

A $130,000,000 jump last week brought the total to the record height. The jump was attributed primarily to Treasury spending and gold purchases.

The board also reported that, for the eighth straight week, the 12 Federal reserve banks reduced their investments in Government securities. Banks sold $15,000,000 of bonds and $12,000,000 of notes, cutting their investment to $2,204,000,000.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended November 27, member bank reserve balances increased $165,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases of $111,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks, $62,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and $6,000,000 in Treasury cash, and increases of $39,000,0000 in gold stock and $3,000,000 in Treasury currency, offset in part by a decrease of $28,000,000 in Reserve Bank credit and an increase of $29,000,000 in money in circulation. Excess reserves of member banks on November 27 were estimated to be approximately $6,930,000,000, an increase of $130,000,000 for the week.

"The principal change in holdings of bills and securities was a reduction of $27,000,000 in United States Government securities, direct and guaranteed; holdings of bonds decreased $15,000,000 and of notes $12,000,000."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended November 27, 1940, were reported as follows:

Building Trade Heads to Meet In Washington

Arms Program Needs Is Theme of Parley Opening Dec. 4

By Thomas M. Cahill

Leaders in building and allied trades will assemble here December 4 and 5 for a conference called by the United States Chamber of Commerce on maintenance of private construction in substantial volume while defense work advances.

Probably there never was a time when a unified front was more important to the construction industry than now. Facing the industry is responsibility of meeting demands for defense while continuing to care for expanding needs of private customers.

A joint dinner meeting with the Producers Council at Mayflower Hotel December 4, at 6:30 p. m. opens the conference. Albert B. Tibbets, manager, sales promotion department, National Lead Co., and president of the council, is chairman. William H. Harrison, director, construction division, production department, National Defense Advisory Commission, will be a speaker.

Next day's morning session at the chamber building will be addressed by C. F. Palmer, housing coordinator, advisory commission to the Council of National Defense; Thomas S. Holden, vice president, F. W. Dodge Corporation, and George W. West, president, United States Savings & Loan League. President Ernest T. Trigg, National Paint, Varnish & Lacquer Association, is chairman.

Relation of defense program to private market from viewpoints of business and labor will be discussed respectively in an afternoon session at Washington Hotel by Lewis H. Brown, president, Johns-Manville Co.; and John P. Coyne, president, building and construction trades department, American Federation of Labor, and member, labor policy advisory committee, National Defense Advisory Commission.

New Record Seen For Newspaper Advertising in '41

Atlanta, Nov. 28 (AP).—Newspaper advertising in 1941 will surpass all previous records, Clarence L. Jordan, executive vice president of N. W. Ayer & Sons, Inc. advertising agency of Philadelphia, declared in an interview here.

Jordan said that in depression years national advertisers sought a thinly spread coverage, but that now it was imperative that they intensify campaigns in local markets. Only newspapers, he added, could accomplish that job.

He said an intelligent advertising campaign was responsible for bringing more volunteers into the United States Army than in any previous peace-time or war-time era of the country.

Clearings Remain Above 1939 Week

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—Largely because of the shortened Thanksgiving week, volume of bank transactions during the latest period fell far short of the record turnover of the previous week. The total, however, remained substantially above that for the corresponding holiday week a year ago.

Bank clearings for the five days ended November 27, in twenty-three leading cities amounted to $5,919,280,000, or 12.3 per cent more than the $4,736,048,000 for the similar five days of last year, according to Dun & Bradstreet.

The aggregate for the current week dropped $1,420,393,000 below that for the preceding full week, as against a decrease of $897,805,000 between the two like weeks of 1939.

Wholesale Commodity Prices Gain in Week

By the Associated Press

The Labor Department's index of wholesale commodity prices rose two-tenths of a point last week over the previous week to 79.5 per cent of the 1926 average. This was half a point above the level of a year ago. The rise was attributed to higher prices for some farm and dairy products.

Piano Makers Hum Merrily As Sales Set 10-Year High

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—A more musically minded American public that wants to play music and not just hear it played is buying the greatest number of pianos this year in more than a decade, W. A. Mennie, secretary of the National Piano Manufacturers Association, said today.

Shipments by manufacturers totaled 104,740 during the first 10 months of the current year, a 21.38 per cent increase over the same period last year. Manufacturers expect sales to reach 140,000 for the year.

Although the heaviest since 1927, sales this year will amount to less than half of the 1923 peak year, when 356,000 pianos were sold by manufacturers. Up to that time the piano had little or no radio and phonograph competition.

In 1932 piano sales had dropped to 27,500. Production of the popular new spinnet or console type piano in 1934 boosted sales. At the same time, the novelty of just hearing music began to wear off and an increasing number of persons began to play it themselves. Public schools began to pay more attention to musical training, making music appreciation and rhythem band instruction a part of the curriculum.

Those factors accounted for an almost steady annual rise in sales volume since 1934. Of every four pianos sold three are of the console type.

Dealings Slacken as Stocks Stage Rally; Bonds Are Weaker; Commodities Uneven

New York, Nov. 28.—Rallying tendencies displayed by steels and scattered industrials aided the stock market to regain a portion of its stamina today although many leaders refused to participate.

Prices slipped at the start but soon steadied when bids for the metals were raised moderately. While losers were plentiful at the finish, advances of fractions to around a point were a shade in the majority.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 43.3. A bit disheartening, however, was the slackness of dealings on the come-back. Transfers totaled 472,440 shares against 845,300 yesterday when quotations were tumbling. Only 698 individual issues changed hands compared with 876 the day before. Of the aggregate 287 were up, 206 down and 205 unchanged.

The day's indifferent recovery shift was attributed mainly to the theory of some boardroom traders that Wednesday's sharp relapse, which put the market back to where it was in late September, called for at least a technical upturn, even if temporary.

More favorable dividends and earnings statements were without much influence on sentiment, brokers said, inasmuch as these were in line with expectations. Keeping customers in the conservative ranks, it was thought, were persistent fears of mounting taxes and the thought war conditions in Great Britain might not be as hopeful as many would desire. Scant stimulus was found in the day's news from European battle fronts.

Among constructive items were: A less than seasonal decline in last week's freight loadings, a jump in heavy construction awards for the week ended Tuesday, and reports the British were stepping up steel purchases after a substantial letdown in September and October.

Sale of another Stock Exchange seat for $33,000, duplicating yesterday's lowest price since 1899, was hardly construed as bullish.

Stocks on the upside—some ended well under the best—included United States Steel, Bethlehem, to Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Air Reduction, American Can, Westinghouse, Zenith Radio, Western Union, American Smelting, Anaconda, Kennecott, Great Northern and Pennsylvania.

A trifle in arrears were General Motors, Consolidated Edison, Woolworth, N. I. Case, United Aircraft, General Electric, Texas Corporation, Eastman Kodak and du Pont.

Bond market price changes leaned slightly to the offside but losses were generally small and selective investment buying accounted for scattered plus signs.

U. S. Governments ended unchanged to 12/32 of a point lower in light dealings. Secretary Morgenthau's statement that the treasury needed money and was studying December financing plans brought little change in the character of the Government market, which opened a bit lower and continued that way to the close. Only $60,000, par value, Governments changed hands during the session.

Outstanding in the minus column were several bond issues directly affected by a court decision concerning taxes claimed by the State of New Jersey from railroads running through the State. Lehigh Valley Terminal 5s lost 3¼ points at 52 and three direct bonds of the road ended 1 to more than 2 off.

Other corporates slipping moderately included Delaware & Hudson Refunding 4s at 48¼, Commercial Mackay Income 4s at 40½, American & Foreign Power 5s at 51 and Reading 4½'s at 79¾.

Moving up fractions to a point or so were Alleghany Stamped 5s, Southern Railway 4s, Southern Pacific 4½s, New York Central 5s and Northern Pacific 4s.

Denmark 6s bounded up 7¼ to 38 but other foreign loans showed mixed tendencies.

Sales of $5,739,875, par value, compared with $7,204,250 Wednesday.

Supply and demand situations were variable in commodity markets and prices reflected the uneven currents with mixed changes.

Spot refined lead claimed attention by reason of a $3-a-ton reduction announced by a leading producer. This fixed the price on a basis of 5.65 cents a pound after a series of advances amounting in all to around a cent a pound since last August.

Chicago wheat futures closed ⅛ to 1⅛ cents a bushel higher. Heaviest buying was reported in the December contract in anticipation of some scarcity of deliverable supplies. Corn ended unchanged to ⅛ of a cent up.

New York futures markets accounted for a moderate trade. Hides closed .08 to .20 of a cent higher. Smaller gains went to copper, cocoa, and Santos coffee. Cotton was mixed and cottonseed oil slightly lower.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staple prices advanced to 76.43 per cent of the 1926 average from 76.18 per cent Wednesday.

Exports Spurt To 343 Million During Month

By the Associated Press

Airplane and other war material shipments boosted United States merchandise exports from $295,000,000 in September to $343,000,000 in October.

September had been one of the smallest shipment months in a year, but Commerce Department figures yesterday showed October exports restored trade to about the average since the war began.

Imports also increased, from $195,000,000 in September to $207,000,000 in October.

October figures brought exports for the first 10 months of the year to $3,374,010,000 and imports to $2,148,690,000, and caused an export excess of $1,225,360,000—one of the largest margins in many years.

In the 10 months of last year, exports amounted to $2,516,675,000 and imports were $1,835,816,000, giving an export excess of $680,862,000—about half the excess so far this year.

One of the sharpest rises was in exports of aircraft and parts, most of which went to the British Empire. October shipments totaled $31,400,000 and included 335 planes and 648 engines, while September aeronautical exports amounted to $22,900,000 and included 284 planes and 441 engines.

Other export increases in October over September included: Automobiles, truck and parts, from $15,760,000 to $22,500,000; industrial machinery, from $36,900,000 to $43,800,000; and copper and brass, from $7,400,000 to $13,600,000.

Schenley Reports $4,392,763 Net

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Schenley Distillers Corporation reported yesterday consolidated net profits for the fiscal year ended August 31 of $4,392,763, or $2.73 a common share. No comparison for a like fiscal year was available due to a change in accounting procedure but during the calendar year of 1939 profit totaled $4,129,080, or $2.82 a share.

American Safety Razor Corporation

American Safety Razor Corporation reported tentative consolidated net profit, subject to complete foreign earnings, for the September quarter of $89,786, or 13 cents a share, compared with $136,516, or 20 cents a share in the like 1939 period.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—Full asking prices were paid willingly for available deliveries in the woolen piece goods market today. As a result of the Government defense program and heavy civilian buying, many mills had their spring and summer output sold and were reported virtually out of the market.

Active business continued in heavy cotton goods at firm prices. The trade reported some mills operating on a 24-hour basis and it was said that a shortage of skilled labor was an obstacle in preventing other mills from following suit. In the rayon goods market business continued active and strong.

Capital Transit Board Declares 75c Dividend

$180,000 'Melon' Reflects Record 10-Month Net

Directors of the Capital Transit Co. yesterday cut a $180,000 "melon" with stockholders by declaring a dividend of 75 cents a share on the capital stock. Combined with a dividend of 25 cents a share paid in July, the $1 payment is the largest disbursement to shareholders since 1934, when $1 a share also was paid.

The latest dividend is payable December 20 to stockholders of record December 5.

The liberal dividend was not unexpected in local financial quarters. Earnings in the first ten months totaled $711,622, best in the transit firm's eight-year history.

Directors also announced after the regular monthly meeting that a $120,000 special cash reserve fund had been set aside for retirement of funded debt. The board's statement added, without going into detail, that "also taken into consideration was the maturity in a comparatively short time of outstanding funded debt and the need for cash to meet large expenditures for additional equipment during the coming year."

Chemical Exposition Set

The first National Chemical Exposition to be held in the Middle West will open in Chicago on December 11 and will continue through December 15. More than 40,000 are expected to view the exhibits and to attend a three-day industrial chemical conference which has been arranged in connection with the Exposition. More than 100 industrial concerns will display the latest developments in chemical manufacture.

Cotton Futures

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—The October position went its independent way in cotton futures trading today and finished 4 points higher; all other active contracts closed 3 to 6 points down.

Declines, attributed to speculative liquidation and hedging, were cushioned to some extent by persistent price fixing for trade and mill account in the March and May deliveries.

Worth Street brokers reported a fair business in cotton textiles. Heavier goods were in best demand. Prices remained firm.

Texas Breaks Aggie Streak With 7-0 Edge

Kimbrough Efforts Futile After Quick Longhorn Thrust

It was the first time the Aggies had trailed in a game since Tulane held a brief, 13-7 lead in the third period of the Sugar Bowl contest last January 1.

Wild Bill Conatser's fine kicking—out of bounds boots away from the dread Crain boy—kept the Texans quiet for a few minutes, but they broke out again in the second period when Crain intercepted Marland Jeffrey's pass on the Texas 46 and skittered back 18 yards. Layden and Crain took turn about cracking the famed Aggie line and finally Texas pushed to a first down on the Aggie 8 on Layden's spot pass to End Malcolm Kutner.

But Bill Buchanan roared in from end to recover Layden's fumble of a low snap back and the Aggies took over on their 10.

Then came Kimbrough's masterpiece. First Conatser got 5 and 15 more were added on a roughing penalty. Kimbrough started the demonstration that proved his All-America worth.

Smacked Line

Over the tackles, around the ends, smack through the middle the 222-pound giant crushed, tossing in runs of 18, 13 and 12 yards, finally to accumulate 63 yards on a nine-run jaunt. Weary, he finally arrived at the Texas 9 and then on fourth down, tried to befuddle Texas by passing.

It was intercepted in the end zone by Noble Doss—the man who botched the Aggie passing game all day long.

The Aggies were hurt, badly, by the loss of quarterback Marion Pugh, their top passer, runner and "brains." Once he hobbled out on his badly injured leg and tried a desperate 35-yard pass—but the man Doss was there to intercept on the Texas 8.

The famed Aggie passing attack sputtered and failed, only five completions being registered out of 18 attempts. Texas was covering them beautifully. Texas was quite a football team today—a better team than the seemingly stunned Aggies.

75-Year-Old Pinman Rolls 156 Game

Seventy-five-year-old "Uncle" Billy Crabbe, of the Firing Squad team of the War Department loop, showed the stuff of which champions are made last night at Arcadia by rolling a triple-header strike and 156 for his pinball high game. Uncle Billy has rolled duckpins in the War Department loop for the past 14 years.

QUEEN PIN

Phil Tolotta, St. Joseph's, was the big noise in the Catholic Section D meet, getting all individual highs with 148 and 391, the latter mark a record for the season. Tolotta's team went on to take highs of 606 and 1,730, both marks high for the season to date. St. Anthony's leads by pinfall over St. Joseph's, although they are tied in games won and lost.

ARCADIA

Jeanne Stivers, Bureau of the Budget, and Margaret Lynn, RFC No. 1, were the leading scorers in the Ladies' Federal meet, the former taking game with 145, while the latter had a 361 pinfall for high set, pacing her team to highs of 526 and 1,513 as well. In a preliminary to the Meyer Davis classic at Lucky Strike next Sunday, Janet Taylor and C. Kartzinell both won entries. The FBI girls whitewashed G. P. O. in all three contests and are on top of the league.

PENN

Nate Fine, A. Z. A., and Hi Goodman, Vista, made the Hebrew meet a big success with their highs of 167 for game and 417 for set, respectively. Goodman's set helped his boys to team game of 823, but they had to stand back before the fast-moving Hayman Cash Register team for high set of 1,799 which put the money-box lads in first place after they took three contests from Madisa.

Doolan Among 70 Nominated For Honors

Jack Doolan, Georgetown's sophomore halfback, was one of 70 backs nominated for Collier's all-American team. Grantland Rice, who saw the Hoyas play Boston College, heads the All-America Board.

The 1940 season offered the greatest selection of backfield stars in the history of the team, according to Rice. Little improvement in kicking or passing has been shown, but the number of high-class fullbacks and the amazing speed of the ballcarriers is on the upgrade.

Doolan, the former national interscholastic sprint champion and the fastest man on the Georgetown team, was the leading scorer among the District college elevens. He was also a fine defensive back, as the 14,000 fans will attest who watched him pull Tom Grady down from behind for what might have been George Washington's winning touchdown last week.

The only other back on the list who appeared before local fans this year was Tony Gallovich, the pile-driving fullback from Wake Forest, who knocked the G. W. line all over the lot at Griffith Stadium.

The team will be announced in Collier's of December 6.

EAST—Reagan (Pennsylvania), Allerdice (Princeton), Eshmont (Fordham), Matusszak and McCullough (Cornell); O'Rourke, Holovak and Mazniski (Boston College), Doolan (Georgetown), Masur (Army), Petrella (Penn State), Krauum and Jones (Pittsburgh), Masur (Manhattan).

New York Rovers Beat Olympics, 7-3

Boston, Nov. 28 (AP).—The New York Rovers of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League hung a 7-3 defeat on the Boston Olympics tonight before 12,000 at Boston Garden.

New York took a first-period lead, but the Rovers went ahead in a 6-goal scoring splurge, in which the teams shared equally in the second period, and capped the exhibition with another 3-goal rampage in the final frame.

a rest before he returns to Washington to become a special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Today's game was played over the strong protest of Owner Dan Topping, of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Topping had lodged a complaint that the game leaves the Eagles but two days to prepare for the Redskins, making it practically impossible for the Philadelphia club to upset Washington. The game was postponed from last Sunday.

Altogether O'Brien competed 7 of 19 passes today for a gain of 61 yards. He ran wth the ball ten times for a net loss of 21 yards. His kicking and pass interceptions held the Steelers at bay.

Except for a few minutes in the third period, the Eagles dominated the game. Fran Murray's poor kick that went out of bounds on the Eagles' 48 set up the Steelers' only threat in the third quarter. Coley McDonough passed 41 yards to George Platukis on the Eagles' 13, but that was as far as the Steelers got. On fourth down Armand Niccolai missed a field goal from the 21.

Dusek Loses To Steinborn On Arena Mat

A capacity house of 2,000 fans, the biggest wrestling crowd of the season, watched Milo Steinborn, the Memphis strong man, pin Rough Rudy Dusek with a bear hug in the feature mat match last night at Turner's Arena.

Steinborn, who had the match under control all the way, won after 16 minutes of battling.

In a special added attraction, Carole Starr, the Southern women's champion from New Orleans, won over Hazel Forbes in 11 minutes with a series of body slams.

Warren Bockwinkle and Whitey Garro formed the winning two-man team combination, defeating Ed Newman and Herb Freeman, pinning the former in 17 minutes and his partner a minute later.

Carl Gray and Tiger Tasker, the bearded man from Alaska, wrestled 30 minutes to a draw, but Gray was given a referee's decision as Tasker was guilty of unnecessary roughness.

Lou Plummer and Emil Dusek fought 30 minutes to a draw that was a draw.

John Knolla Tops Harmon For Honors

Wichita, Kans., Nov. 28 (AP).—Stocky Johnny Knolla ran and passed 114 yards to lead Creighton University of Omaha to a 7-0 victory over Wichita University today and nose out Michigan's Tom Harmon for National ground gaining honors.

The yardage gave Knolla a season's total of 1,407, 39 more than Harmon, who closed his collegiate career last week.

The Creighton counter followed a 5-yard Wichita penalty for excessive times out that moved the ball to the shocker 4-yard line. Knolla's touchdown plunge came on fourth down.

Neither team was able to muster a threatening attack until the final period. Wichita was unable to penetrate deeply into Creighton territory and the Bluejays found the going rough beyond midfield.

Devitt Prep Eleven Beats Fairfax, 19-0

Devitt Prep's gridiron forces closed out their season with a 19-0 victory over Fairfax High yesterday on the losers' field, with Fullback Boswell turning in two of the winning touchdowns.

The only other scoring was done by Halfback McGowan, who tallied 6 points in the third quarter on an 8-yard dash around end, and Center Rinaldi, who successfully converted after the third-period score.

WORTH SEEING
We say this because we know that this unusually large home, less than 3 years old and in immaculate condition; is priced far below a comparable value on today's market. This house contains 3 large bedrooms, 2 baths, a large breakfast room and a finished recreation room in the basement. The location is one of the best in Northwest Washington, and this house, which we repeat is very low in price, can be purchased on very easy terms. This home must be sold. Call MR. SHEARER, HObart 4743, with J. WESLEY BUCHANAN.

The Post Radio Time Table

9:15 a. m., WJSV—Six Woodrow Wilson High School students take part in the hemisphere-flung American School of the Air. The students are Robert Schumacker, Richard Dyer, Keith Tinto, Jim Roman, Sarah McDonald, and Helen Strong; their subject is the Social Security Act.

2 p. m., WMAL—Two-part and three-part forms are discussed by Dr. Damrosch on the first half of his Music Appreciation Hour. The second half-hour features Haydn's Symphony No. 85 in B flat major, "The Queen of France."

3:15, WOL—Leopold Stokowski conducts the premiere of the Sixth Symphony of the contemporary Russian composer, Dmitri Shostakovich. "Siegfried's Death" from Wagner's Goetterdammerung" also is programed.

8, WJSV—Helen Menken, who has followed her fine stage career with an enviable run as a radio favorite in "Second Husband," takes time from her domestic troubles (aerial!) to play the drama of one of Henry VIII's wives for Kate Smith, "Kathryn Howard."

8:15, WMAL—Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, speaks on "The Progress of National Defense."

8:30, WRC—Leon Henderson of the National Defense Advisory Commission, takes his chances with the Information Please experts. Fadiman's darts will clip Kieran, F. P. A. and Levant as well.

9:30, WJSV—Postponed from last week, a new playhouse makes its appearance: Miriam Hopkins and Humphrey Bogart play Vina Delmar's "Air Mail to Red Riding Hood."

9:30, WRC—Arch Oboler has written a radiolet especially for Elisabeth Bergner's radio debut: "An American Is Born." Like Lynn Fontanne and Katharine Cornell, Miss Bergner is another leading actress of the stage to wait until 1940 to make her microphone bow.

9:30, WOL—Joan Blondell plays a courageous wife who opens her husband's eyes to the crookedness of a political machine in that strangely-titled weekly opera, "I Want a Divorce." There's no connection from one week to another on this one except via the title.

10, WJSV—W. Somerset Maugham has never written a story so gripping as his own. On "Believe It Or Not," he tells Ripley of his hazardous escape from France. The Dartmouth College Glee Club also is promised for this evening.

11:15, WOL—"There Are No Islands Anymore" wrote Edna St. Vincent Millay this year. Tonight Jane Cowl, Peggy Wood, Raymond Massey, Dennis King, William Allen White and Gutzon Borglum join in a program under the auspices of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies. The awards will be announced in the Nation-wide poster-drawing contest sponsored by the committee.

Listen!
with Glynn

(WJSV's Women's Director Elinor Lee today pinch-hits for Paul Glynn.)

Did you know that there are 20,000,000 words and 17,000 different programs broadcast daily over all the airwaves in the United States? All of the full-length pictures produced in Hollywood in one year wouldn't equal the number of words radio uses in one day; nor would all of the words used in all of the Broadway shows produced in ten years equal the number of words broadcast daily via the airwaves. SO WHAT?

So . . . maybe that accounts for the following: A recent bride asked her husband to copy a radio recipe for her. The husband did his best but got two stations at once. One was broadcasting the morning health exercise; the other a cooking school.

Result: "Hands on hips, place one cup flour on shoulders. Raise knees and depress toes and wash thoroughly in 1 cup of milk. In 4 counts raise and lower the legs while sifting dry ingredients. Repeat six times. Inhale 1 teaspoon of baking powder and 1 cup flour. Breathe naturally. Exhale and sift. ATTENTION! Jump to a squatting position and bend white of egg backward and forward and in 4 counts make a stiff dough that will stretch at the waist. Lie flat on the floor and beat well. Bake in moderate oven with head erect. Breathe naturally. Relax. Serve with hard sauce if you wish to retain your youthful figure."

It's an old chestnut, but it's still good for a laugh—or is it?

Contract Bridge

At the national championships, while the players may all be "masters," they don't always play like masters. In fact, the defense of today's hand, which took place during a major meet, would be frowned upon at the lowliest of local duplicates.

The bidding:

Opening lead: A ◇.

J. Horace Block and his partner, Harry Harkavy, ran themselves into four hearts; were doubled and redoubled, and could have been set three tricks or 1,600 points. Due to the enemy's bungling, they managed to win the redoubled contract, resulting in a swing of 2,580 points, which isn't feathers in a cumulative-score team-of-four match.

Block somewhat avariciously passed three spades, hoping to get the opponents at four, but events turned against him.

West led the ace of diamonds and switched to the deuce of clubs. East won the club queen and rashly played back a diamond, believing his partner had a singleton. Harkavy tossed off his losing club, drew trumps, forced West's spade ace out with his queen and threw off his last spade on the diamond king when he entered dummy with the king of spades.

Declarer lost a club, a diamond and a spade fulfilling his contract; with a club opening, he can lose two clubs, a spade, two spade ruffs and the ace of diamonds.

Bliss Estate Title Transfer Due Shortly

Harvard, U. S., D. C. to Get Deeds To Dumbarton Oaks

Dumbarton Oaks, 50-acre Georgetown estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, will be conveyed within a few days to the United States and Harvard University for use as a public park and research center, it was learned yesterday.

Deeds effecting the conveyance will be recorded shortly and after Monday the stately mansion no longer will be the home of the retired diplomat and his wife. They will leave to spend the winter in California, returning in the spring to reside elsewhere in Washington.

Approximately 27 acres of the estate that fronts on R street adjoining Montrose Park will become a part of the Capital park system. The balance, including the mansion and the library and collection of objects of art relating to medieval and Byzantine civilization, will be given to the administration of Harvard as a center of learning.

Portion to Be Park

The portion of the property that is to become a District park embraces Dumbarton's hillside, its brook with miniature waterfalls and waterwheel and famous grove of large trees.

The library with its large collection of books, pamphlets and other reference material will be administered as a center for advanced students in the humanities and fine arts. The research material, in a large part, is of a kind difficult to find in a single collection.

The collection in some particulars is complementary to a similar collection at the Library of Congress. While the collection covers a wide range of subjects, it specializes in the medieval and Byzantine fields with some supplementary material covering influences on that culture.

Famed Art Collection

The art collection includes examples of classical, Byzantine and medieval art, represented by mosaics, pottery, jewelry, sculpture, textiles and other objects. It and the library are the product of 30 years of effort on the part of the Blisses.

Accommodations will be available at Dumbarton for a small number of resident students.

The mansion dates from the peruked and ruffled era of Dolly Madison. William H. Dorsay, first judge of the Orphans Court established by Jefferson, built the estate in 1800 and called it Acropholus, Grove on the Hill. It was occupied successively by the South Carolina statesman, John C. Calhoun; Edward M. Linthicum, the philanthropist, and Col. Henry M. Blount, before Bliss acquired it in 1920.

Mr. and Mrs. Bliss have lived at Dumbarton since Bliss, former Assistant Secretary of State and Ambassador to Argentina, retired from the diplomatic service in 1933.

Better Relations With Soviet Seen As Parleys End

By International News Service

Foundations for improved relationship between the United States and Soviet Russia have been further extended by the latest conversation between Undersecretary of State Welles and Soviet Ambassador Oumansky, informed quarters said yesterday.

An agreement in principle upon the establishment of an American consulate at Vladivostock was completed at Wednesday's parley. Its formal announcement awaits the return to Moscow of American Ambassador Lawrence A. Steinhardt, now on leave in Stockholm, these quarters said.

An official source said the opening of the consulate portends an increase in Soviet-American trade. Its establishment will also enable this government to keep tabs on the activities carried on at Russia's principal Far Eastern port by Germany and Japan, both of which have important consulates there.

Air Line Head To Be Honored By Yale Group

Special Dispatch to The Post

Montclair, N. J., Nov. 28.—The Montclair Yale Bowl, presented annually since 1926 to outstanding graduates of Yale University, will be awarded to Juan T. Trippe, president of Pan American Airways, Inc., at the twentieth annual party of the Montclair Yale Club December 7.

TRIPPE

Announcement of Trippe as recipient of the bowl, a tribute to the Yale alumnus "who has made his Y in life," was made here today by Nicholas Roberts, club president. The award was made last year to Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio.

Trippe, Roberts said, has signified his intention of attending the party in Nick Roberts' Old Yale Barn to receive the trophy, a silver replica of a bowl designed and wrought by Paul Revere. The original bowl is on display in the Boston Museum.

"The chief requirement for our award is that the recipient shall have risen by his own efforts to the top of his own line of endeavor," Roberts said. "Mr. Trippe has a brilliant record of achievement. His whole interest in life since the day he left college has been in aviation and through hard work, vision and unusual organization ability he has built up the Pan American Airways until it is by far the most important company of its kind in the world."

Trippe began his career in aviation when he enlisted in the Naval Air Service, where he qualified as an aviator with the rank of ensign in the Naval Reserve. At the end of the World War he returned to Yale to complete his studies, being graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School in 1920.

Paul Townsend Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Rites for Senator's Son Will Be Held at Brother-in-Law's Home

Funeral services for Paul Townsend, 37, son and secretary of Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, who died yesterday at Salisbury, Md., will be held tomorrow at the home of his brother-in-law, Prew Savoy, 1539 Twenty-ninth Street Northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

An ardent and lifelong sportsman, Mr. Townsend was on a duck-shooting trip to the Eastern Shore nine days ago, when his automobile overturned. He suffered a broken neck from which he died at Peninsula General Hospital.

Born at Wilmington, Del., October 21, 1903, Mr. Townsend was educated in the schools of Selbyville, Del., at Culver Military Academy, the University of Delaware and Cornell. At the latter university he suffered a football injury and entered business in Washington upon his recovery. In 1928, upon the election of his father to the Senate, Mr. Townsend became his secretary, a position he held, in addition to his other work, since that time.

Started Ocean City Fishing

Physically powerful and devoted to all outdoor sports, Mr. Townsend was particularly well known as a fisherman and inaugurated marlin fishing at Ocean City, Md., a sport which now attracts hundreds of fishermen to that resort annually. He was a fresh-water fisherman as well and every year fly-fished the trout streams of upper Maryland and of Canada.

For several years a member of the American team in the international tuna fishing contests off Canada, he was captain of the team twice. Not only a devotee of fishing for the sport's sake, Mr. Townsend was a conservationist and, with his brother, Jack Townsend, led in the practice if tagging fish and returning them to the water.

In addition to assisting Senator Townsend as his secretary, Mr. Townsend was president of the Highway Engineering and Construction Co., and the Paving Supply and Equipment Co. He was a Mason, a Shriner, and a member of the Congressional Club. In December, 1930, he married Miss Theodora Thompson, of Philadelphia.

Son, Mother Also Killed

A year and a half ago, Mr. Townsend's son was killed when he fell from the roof of their home in Georgetown. His mother was killed in a traffic accident when he was 14.

Besides his father, his wife and his sister, Mrs. Savoy, Mr. Townsend is survived by two daughters, Diana and Jeanette Townsend; three brothers, Jack, Junes and Preston Townsend, of Delaware, and another sister, Mrs. Jack Tubbs, of Delaware.

Duke, Duchess Of Windsor To Visit Miami

Copyright by International News Service.

Nassau, Nov. 28.—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are planning to go to Miami around December 10 so that the Duchess may undergo a major dental operation, it was officially stated tonight.

The visit will be strictly private in nature and the Duke and Duchess will return to Nassau as quickly as she has recovered sufficiently from the operation necessitated by an abcessed tooth from which she has been suffering ever since her arrival in the Bahamas.

The Duchess is expected to enter a nursing home in Miami as soon as she arrives and she is expected to remain there several days.

The Duke's journey to Miami will mark his first visit to the United States since he came here as the Prince of Wales in 1924.

There'll Be No Fanfare

There will be no fanfare or public receptions. His Royal Highness has especially stipulated that he and his duchess wish to be treated as "private individuals" and not as celebrities. This desire for privacy, it was explained, is also accentuated by the duke's determination that with Britain at war he and the duchess would not participate in any receptions or gaiety but would return to their posts as quickly as possible.

It is known that under the regulations of the British government service which apply to the duke as governor general of the Bahamas, he could not leave his post without special permission of his younger brother who succeeded him to the throne as George VI following the abdication.

This permission, it was learned, has now been granted.

Whether or not there is any possibility that the visit of the duke and duchess might be extended long enough for them to visit her relatives in Baltimore could not be learned, but it was stated authoritatively that it would be "extremely unlikely" on this trip.

Contrast to 1924 Visit

At some future date, it was said, the duke and duchess hope to pay an extended visit to the United States during which the duchess would introduce the former King to her relatives, only one of whom he has met—abroad—her aunt, Mrs. "Bessie" Merryman, of Washington, D. C.

The forthcoming visit to Miami will be in marked contrast to the Duke's visit to the United States in 1924, when he was the center of a gay series of parties and receptions.

As Prince of Wales, Edward began his American tour in New York on August 29, 1924, and left for England the following October.
